MORNING STAR.
Thursday, January 19, 1871.
W. M. H. BURNHAM,
Editor and Proprietor.
THE CIRCULATION OF THE STAR IS MORE THAN DOUBLE THAT OF ANY OTHER DAILY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN NORTH CAROLINA.

SOCIAL CHANGE.

From every source of Northern thought and sentiment for many years past, we have learned the lamentable superiority of Northern character, Northern education, habits, dress and manners. Some of us, in this unenlightened region, have been exceptional regarding this matter, and in our searches for facts to justify our doubts, we are always rewarded with abundant success.

Nobody can question the right of the North in its social and political character. That paper is "full" to the core, to begin with, and its editor has been the champion of nearly all the critical features of what is now the dominant civilization and society of this country. Of course, then, its pictures of Northern society are not overdrawn nor too highly colored, and its statements are endorsed by an unfriendly purpose. We quote from a recent number of the Tribune, in various parts of the country, continue to perpetrate acts of violence, such as shooting, beating &c., upon men who have offended or injured them." In Indiana, one day last week, a Mrs Shaw, shot her brother-in-law on some account involving much scandal."

The Tribune is evidently seriously alarmed by these continual beatings and shootings of unprotected men by irate and belligerent females. Women, it thinks, reveal a growing taste for this sort of amusement, and it is clear that there are apprehensions that not even the sanctity of the Tribune office will be held inviolable by petticoat invaders, backed by cowhides or possibly pistols. Says the Tribune: "What we want to point out is that this sort of thing is becoming unconstitutional." It thinks, moreover, that the passions of women are so much "fiercer and more feverish" than those of men, that it is dangerous for them to indulge in the practice of beating and shooting and committing acts of violence on men.

Under the circumstances, we can tender the Tribune people no manner of consolation. Realizing our benighted surroundings in this part of the country, we should hardly feel authorized to urge upon them to free from the afflictions incident to a very high state of civilization, and take refuge in this semi-barbarous region. Yet we assure them that we are almost entirely free from horse-whipping, cow-hiding by females, and that, too, without any very high terms the champions of Northern "female rights" are willing to pay for the privilege. Let us have a little more of the "old-fogy" style of arranging the hair, dress and manners of the ladies, and a little more "fierceness and feverishness" in the matter of defending the honor of the family, and we will be content to remain in our present condition of semi-barbarism.

Pastime Leaves.

The country has evidently been given up to pillage. There are already 4,000 doctors in the United States.

In Boston it is now the style for young ladies to be accompanied on the streets by their mutes, a la Paris.

Mr. Colson, superintendent of West Point Mine Mill, had a narrow escape from a horrible death, on Thursday last. He was caught by the crank of one of the rice elevators, and after being whirled round for some time, was thrown violently on the deck, and badly bruised his left shoulder and head. He received instant attention, and was carried, at his residence, and is speedily recovering.

A portrait of Gen. R. E. Lee, by Elder, pronounced to be the best likeness extant of the great Virginian, has been put up in a conspicuous place in the Virginia State Capitol at Richmond, with the consent of the Legislature.

. . . Joe Williams, John Mephington, Toby Brown, and Bob Osborne, made their escape from the House of Correction, Charleston, Sunday night.

. . . The new bridge across the Savannah river at Augusta, built by the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railroad Company, is completed, and is pronounced one of the handsomest structures of the kind in the country.

. . . The Charleston Courier says: Mr Colson, superintendent of West Point Mine Mill, had a narrow escape from a horrible death, on Thursday last. He was caught by the crank of one of the rice elevators, and after being whirled round for some time, was thrown violently on the deck, and badly bruised his left shoulder and head. He received instant attention, and was carried, at his residence, and is speedily recovering.

. . . A plot was discovered among the prisoners in Charleston Jail, on Sunday, to break from prison and to kill the officers if they resisted.

. . . Joe Williams, John Mephingford, Toby Brown and Bob Osborne made their escape from the House of Correction, Charleston, Sunday night.

. . . The new bridge across the Savannah river at Augusta, built by the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railroad Company, is completed, and is pronounced one of the handsomest structures of the kind in the country.

. . . The Charleston Courier says: Mr Colson, superintendent of West Point Mine Mill, had a narrow escape from a horrible death, on Thursday last. He was caught by the crank of one of the rice elevators, and after being whirled round for some time, was thrown violently on the deck, and badly bruised his left shoulder and head. He received instant attention, and was carried, at his residence, and is speedily recovering.

Mrs. Sanderlin, Quay Station has been instructed by her physician to do as little talking as possible. Can't she do something for her self?

. . . At the municipal election held in Chester on Monday, the entire Conservative ticket was elected.

. . . Mr. W. Deland, of the firm of Fogartie & Deland, of Charleston, died at Cincinnati on the 6th instant.

. . . Gen. Joseph E. Johnston has been invited to deliver an oration before the Survivors Association of South Carolina.

. . . A plot was discovered among the prisoners in Charleston Jail, on Sunday, to break from prison and to kill the officers if they resisted.

. . . Joe Williams, John Mephingford, Toby Brown and Bob Osborne made their escape from the House of Correction, Charleston, Sunday night.

. . . The new bridge across the Savannah river at Augusta, built by the Charlotte, Columbia and Augusta Railroad Company, is completed, and is pronounced one of the handsomest structures of the kind in the country.

. . . The Charleston Courier says: Mr Colson, superintendent of West Point Mine Mill, had a narrow escape from a horrible death, on Thursday last. He was caught by the crank of one of the rice elevators, and after being whirled round for some time, was thrown violently on the deck, and badly bruised his left shoulder and head. He received instant attention, and was carried, at his residence, and is speedily recovering.

Mrs. Sanderlin, Quay Station has been instructed by her physician to do as little talking as possible. Can't she do something for her self?

. . . At the municipal election held in Chester on Monday, the entire Conservative ticket was elected.

. . . Mr. W. Deland, of the firm of Fogartie & Deland, of Charleston, died at Cincinnati on the 6th instant.

. . . Gen. Joseph E. Johnston has been invited to deliver an oration before the Southern Historical