SELF HELP.

When from our own coal-pits we dig the fuel, from our own ore-beds we lift the iron, and with them, from our own rolling mills we turn out the rails...

The above is an extract from the able and practical address delivered at our Fair last Thursday by Hon. Alfred M. Waddell.

Only by dependence upon ourselves, can we be a truly great people. Providence smiles upon those who help themselves.

When we reflect upon the wonderful natural advantages we enjoy in North Carolina—the salubrious climate, fertile soil and convenience to market—we are surprised at the indifference manifested by our people...

Just for a moment consider how much better off we would be if we could do all our manufacturing at home. The farmer would send no money out of the State to purchase fertilizers...

Nor is this all home industry will do for us. The lawyer, physician, teacher, student and cultivated general reader will all procure their books of the North Carolina publisher.

A home education, too, appeals with powerful force to our State pride. It would strengthen our confidence in ourselves. It would give the young generation a pride and interest in their State...

would strengthen our confidence in ourselves. It would give the young generation a pride and interest in their State, that few other things could give.

We thank our distinguished fellow-citizen for his cultivated and polished address, which was as practical and timely in conception as it was graceful and eloquent in delivery.

"There is power at the centre, and we are glad of it." There is power in Pandemonium, and the devils are glad of that.

But how does it sit upon Northern stomachs to be reminded by a Southern ex-secessionist, renegade and fugitive, that there is power in the centre?
