She reported that when she left night, was postponed until this evening, in here there were three cases of small pox in a consequence of the meeting of the Board of part of the city known as Newtown. Having seen the emphatic denials in the city press that there was any such disease here, but little attention was paid to the report. A day or two since, however, the woman was taken sick and the physician who was called to see her is fearful that she has the small pox, and that if it is not that disease it must be the measles, as she has an eruption similar to that usually caused by the latter complaint. Our friend further says : " Will you please state in the STAR whether or not there is any cases of either of the diseases named prevailing in Wilmington or its environs, as the people here are auxious to obtain some information on the subject." In reply we would state that if there is a solitary case of either small pox or measles
