DECAY OF MORALS IN POLITICS. It is with pain that we touch this subject, and attempt to treat psychologically the plain evidences of our senses see everywhere around us. But

"Does the robed priest for his pity falter ?" like that of the surgeon, is unmistakable. skill is needed.

We scarcely know where to begin. When we use our eyes freely, there is so much to be seen that we are bewildered, confused, astounded. "From turret to foundation stone "-to quote from the flowery Judge Reade's memorable Homestead decision-and again from the lowest mudsill to the carved and pictured dome in the political edifice, we observe evidences of Satanic art, and are offended with exhibitions of depraved vice. American politics is an Augean stable, and is the receptacle of all the filth and corruption in the land, floating in fetid streams from every fountain of crime, corrupting as it goes the atmosphere of moral vices, the crimes of society are here crysconstant surging of vice, coming in from without, and constant reflex action from within, going out. Society corrupts politics, and politics rebounding, corrupts soand taketh to himself seven spirits more unclean than himself, and makes his last state worse than the first. The business like other things-grows worse and worse. No waters of purifying seem yet to have been discovered; at least they have not been applied.

Now, if we may pause a moment before we seek means of cure for all this complicated, monstrous aggregation of disasters, we may discover the causes for the same, and without any difficulty, and in fact with all the facility in the world, point unerringly to the author. Perhaps the causes, so hidden and inwarped with the character and life of the author, are unnecessary of classification or statement. To the Radical Republican party we owe the depth of degradation to which our politics has sunk. Nor can this be successfully denied. Before that party came on the political boards, we had comparative honesty and purity in the administration of the Government of this country; we had dignified Senates and incorruptible Lower Houses of Congress; we had patriotic Executives, too pure-minded to accept of bribes; we had State governments that took from the national legislature their cue ct honor, integrity and virtue-if we may so speak of men who needed not to imitate in these qualities, that are innate in good men-in truth we had in our public bodies and administrative officers all that strict integrity, or moral elevation, or lofty virtue and exalted honor could ask. And we were happy, prosperous and great. But the mad spirit of sectional hate entered our circle-that spirit to which we give the name of Radicalism, and our dream of love, joy, pride and honor faded and left us but the mocking shadow of things that might have been and the hideous reality of a nightmare, from which State and country have not yet been disenthraled.

Confemplate the stupendous system of fraud, perjury, bribery and public robbery. inaugurated and carried into successful operation by the carpet baggers and their allies in the South. Was ever such venality, shameless, bold and brazen, known in the annals of any land? These miserable thieves and robbers considered the Southero States as their legitimate property to do with as their own sweet wills dictated. They stole from the treasuries, and levied enormous taxes for pretended internal improvements which they pocketed. This was done in every Southern State, and the State debt was piled millions of dollars. above the ability of the people to pay. Take North Carolina as an example. Here many millions in State bonds. The Governor of the State, since impeached for other more flagrant crimes, sold his signature for $25,000. But it will consume hours of our time and scores of pages give the record of the scoundrelly ring that controlled legislation and the politics of this State until driven from their lairs by the Democratic Conservative party. In South Carolina, Florida, Louisiana,

Texas and other Southern States, the same language applies. A black book of crimes and villainles innumerable might easily be written on the operations of these plunderers in each of these States. Some Tacitus with a pen of fire will arise somewhere in the lapse of time, and sketch the outlines of this remarkable history and paint the blackness of the characters, for the benefit of posterity.

Ter ror is struck into the contemptible souls of all the robber gang of the South. And while these things are taking place here in the South, the nation writhes in the gigastic throes of reform, emanating from the great heart of the country, the national capital. There, the spectacle is presented of the thinking, leading Senators separating themselves from the administration. The corruptions and verily we need a-Hercules to cleanse it. THE TOWN OF SITKA IN ALASKA

The Ladies and Their Decorations. The village contains forty or fifty houses. The population consists of one thousand of twenty. A month afterwards the old Indians and two thousand dogs. Of the dogs, all but one are of the same sharpeared, wolfish type seen among the Indians of the plains. The exception was a of the plains. The exception was a safe in Wilmington. All the young fellows bandy-legged, lop eared cur of civilized have had their ambition excited, and as breed, the only one among the two thousand that showed a lack of civility by barking at our heels. The houses much more resemble the semi-subterranean abodes of the Laplanders and Esquimaux than the wigwams of American Indians. Like the oak described by the American poet, they extended as far into the earth as above it. Some of them are from twenty to thirty feet square, and built of very wide cedar planks, many of them more than four feet across, worked out by these rude people.

We entered several. Creeping through apertures, both square and round, not more than three feet in diameter, we descended flights of steps into the large single room. In the centre of each a fire was built on the ground, and in the centre of each roof a hole, out of which passed a small portion of the smoke, the most of it remaining for the benefit of the salmon hanging over our heads, and to make sore eyes for the in-mates. The whole inside is floored, except the fire place in the middle: On both sides are the sleeping places, covered with skins and blankets, and in some instances separated by low partitions. In the rear, and on shelves below the dormitories, were stored potatoes, and dried salmen in large bales, covered with matting. Their largest potatoes are the size of a hulled walnut. The ladies beautify their complexions with soot and red paint, and still further are of such a character as to suggest cauenhance their charms by wearing a bone through the upper lip, the size of which is of the old ones, it attains a width of two inches. An Indian lady thus adorned, with her coarse, black, uncombed locks contemporary in both these cases, the hanging in matted profusion around her whole press of Baltimore is by no means and now offered for sale. beautiful pig eyes and lop ears, is only resistible to those whose affections are thorroughly preoccupied. The Proper Punishment of Royal Assailauts.

Royal assailants have pretty names. Edward Oxford was the first man who tried to kill Queen Victoria. The Fenian who flourished a pistol at her yesterday is called Alfred O'Connor. He may be a lunatic-or the telegraph which makes him so, may have a method in his mad ness. The best thing to do to discourage assassination is to make it ridiculous. Louis Phillippi was shot at several times. He kept the guillotine busy with his assailants for a time. The blood of the bunglers became the seed of many more. They kept on shooting and missing. The king kept on beheading. At last a "happy thought" struck the Royal mind, impenetrable to impression, as a general thing. The next fellow that tried to kill the Orleans monarch was put in a madhouse, had his head shaved. He was not straight-jacketed, but the official press was filled with his reported foolish sayings, of which, probably, he was as innocent as Old Abe of the many stories attributed to him. Well, that took all the romance out of would-be assassination. Nobody wanted his head shaved. Any number had been willing to have their heads cut off. Louis Phillippi was then left alone, till one fine morning the revolution knocked at his door and he took reserved seats in a diligence for Dover. Probably O'Connor is loony. In a large sense all assassins are fools, for they do very foolish things for themselves and very disastrously for "the cause." Possibly, however, the cable wisely says O'Conner is crazy. The treatment of him as such will reflect most wisdom and magnanimity on the Government, and will, really, less than a severe policy would do, retard the amnesty to Fenians which he seems to have been seeking-in a very queer fashion.

Some of the Results of Politeness.

Down in Wilmington, some time ago, an old man who was very feeble was helped across a crowded street by a youth man died, and as an expression of his gratitude he left the youth forty thousand dollars. And now no old man's life is soon as any venerable man appears on the sidewalk half a dozen chaps rush at him, grab him by the coat and the collar, and the back hair, and try to carry him across the street whether he wants to go or not. When he gets there a lot more fasten on to him and set him back again, and then present their cards. So the old men in Wilmington are having a lively time now, and they have to tack up the street whenever they go out for a walk. Thus far very little money has been evolved, but all the young men study the obituary advertisements carefully, and when they see the words "at the age of seventy six," or "sixty-six," or anywhere in that neighborhood, they hurry down to the office of the Register of Wills and pore over the last testament of the deceased. All this goes to show how much distress one inconsiderate act will cause. If that first old man had left us that forty thousand dollars this foolishness might have been prevented .-Max Adeler.

The Huston Affair.

The Cincinnati and Louisville newspapers continue to discuss the Huston case, commenting upon the sensational character of the publications in some of the journals of this city. The heaviest snow storm since the great storm of January 18th, 1857, prevailed here on Saturday, and seems to have been general throughout the country. At this city the snow, on a level, was from fifteen to sixteen inches deep, and in many places it was banked up by drifting to the depth of from three to four feet. The severity of the storm caused the suspension of all outdoor business, and none left their houses who were not compelled by absolute necessity to do so .- Lynchburg News.

Panie in a School.

An escape of steam, through the careessness of a janitor in a public school in Newark, Friday atternoon, caused a fearful panie among the children, who jumped from the windows down stairs, &c. SPECIAL NOTICES.

PERIODIC DISORDERS.

The paroxysmal maladies which are charasterized by heat and cold, prevail extensively at this season, and it is a curious fact that in many parts of the country where they are prevalent, other diseases, that bear no general resemblance to fever and ague, or remittent fever, assume a periodic type. Thus, in many sections infested with chills and fever, rheumatism, neuralgia, hysteria, diarrhœa, &c., sometimes become intermittent, thereby indicating that they have been engendered by the same poisonous exhalations which produce the first named diseaso.

In all these masked cases of ague-for such they are—as well as in the regular intermittents, the most safe and reliable remedy that can be administered is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Neither quinine nor arsenic are needed. Both are in the highest degree danneeded. Both are in the highest degree dangerous, and are sure to leave sad traces of their poisonous action in the system, whether they arrest the paroxysms or not. In many instances all the so-called specifics of the "regular" materia medica utterly fail to "break up" intermittent and remittent disor ers. But the great vegetable Tonic never fails. The spasm of the minute blood vessels which causes the chill, is the result of nervous weakness, produced by the debilitating operation of an unwholesome atmosphere, and the tone and vigor given to the nervous system by the sitters, enable it to threw off the disease. The wiser policy, however, is to anticipate attacks of this nature, by a ousing all the latent energies of the body at the commencement of the moist and chilly season, with this incomparable antidote. By pursuing this course, intermittents, remittents, rheamatism, colic, bilioasness, dyspepsia and pulmonary affections may always be prevented.
