THE CIRCULATION OF THE MORNING STAR IS LARGER THAN THAT OF ANY OTHER DAILY NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN NORTH CAROLINA.

ONE MONTH FROM TO-MORROW.

On the first day of May will assemble the National Liberal Convention at Cincinnati. It will be the most momentous political event that the country's history can show; and results, if we are not a bad prophet, will prove its conception the wisest and grandest stroke of wisdom and the highest development of patriotism in our politics for many years.

It must absolutely shape the political destinies of the land. If it bear the fruit we think and hope for, shape them admirably well. If there is a failure through confusion of counsels, through haste and blindness, or through fear and cowardice—which we do not apprehend—shape them lamentably ill.

The thing is wholly in the hands of Republicans. They must muster the patriotism to initiate the Reform movement. All depends upon the moral backbone of the prominent Republicans whose names have been connected with the call and subsequent support of call for the Convention. Let these men have the firmness to make a platform and nominate candidates. Nothing more could they do; nothing less will satisfy the conservative sentiment of the country. Once the ball is started, Democrats will furnish the elan necessary to put it through in splendid style.

We say in behalf of the free spoken, independent Democrats and Conservatives of North Carolina and the South, that their support can be relied upon to any well organized, liberal and prudent plan for national redemption and the conservation of popular liberty that the Cincinnati Convention may mature and set on foot. Knowing where the votes to defeat Grant are to come from, that Convention will not, we feel sure, gratuitously insult or wound any class of voters in the proposed coalition. Only the general points of agreement—the vital issues of the day—should be incorporated in the platform. The candidates should be men recognized as eminent, fair-minded and popular citizens, whom the suffragans of both the parties can cheerfully support.

Such action as this at Cincinnati ensures victory in November, and a new era in the history of the country—an era of concord, peace and prosperity. Let the men who go to Cincinnati to speak for that sentiment in the Republican party outraged by the excesses and corruption of Grant's Administration, go there with a firm, fixed and patriotic spirit to carry their high purposes into effect, and to this end to pay no heed to threats or blandishments and to look out for the snares set to entrap them by their unscrupulous foes.

But there is another Convention to take place just one month from to-morrow, in which North Carolinians feel a lively interest. The Democratic Conservative State Convention commences at Greensboro' on the first Wednesday in next month. Conservatives, are you all preparing for this Convention? If not, you ought to be. One month is not a long while. Time rolls rapidly. The first of May will soon be here. Let us all be ready, and let there be a large turnout, full delegations from every county in the State and hearty enthusiasm in behalf of the cause. Remember, if it were possible you could forget what that cause is. THAT IS THE CAUSE OF TRUTH, OF FAITH, OF LAW, OF CRIME, OF PEACE, OF DISCORD, OF HONESTY, OF CORRUPTION, OF THE GOOD AGAINST THE BAD, AND OF CONSERVATISM AND RIGHT AGAINST RADICAL TYRANNY, STEALING AND OFFICIAL SHAME AND FLAGRANT NECESSITY! Surely a Conservative can never forget his and his party's status—never flag in the perilous hour when his voice and efforts are needed to defend his State and country. Surely the high and holy incentives that have moved him in the past and which have been intensified by the despotic, outrageous conduct of a Radical Governor, aided and abetted by his party, will have greater potency now than ever. The work of putting down the corruptionists was not finished two years ago. It must be effected this summer. When the Conservative party arises in its might and majesty—the people fully aroused to the importance of faithful, strenuous exertion, we shall have effected what was commenced so well in 1870. Let the glorious work of progress be started at Greensboro, and let it not cease until the sun of the first of August shall shine as resplendently on a victorious Conservative host, as it shone on Napoleon and the French at Austerlitz.

SCENE SPIRITUALISTIC AND GIBBERNORIAL.

[Scene.—Above the Classic Fields of Seafletown. The Slumberous Waters of the Lumber rolling in the distance. Witeching hour of Midnight. Four Choice Spirits in Conclave—Caldwell, Settle, Logan and Henry Berry Lowrey. Who shall be Governor? Quadrangular Quandary turned into a Tussle with Three. Which? Berry's Blessing.]

Caldwell.—I claim it of right and previous prestige won in service loyal. I must be Governor again. 'Twas I who stood by the party through the fires of four years and more. I was loyal in Secession's time. Some others were not. H. B. Lowrey.—I were, too, Mister Caldwell.

Logan.—And I, only, served the Confederates in Capacity Congressional, like my friend Senator Pool, to embarrass their cause. I was ever true blue. Gentlemen, I claim the Governorship on better ground than either of you. I put down the murderous rebel Ku Klux and in this act alone deserve more than ye all.

Settle.—Peru! (under breath.)

Caldwell.—Hush, Capturing Tom Settle! Your Democratic secess proclivities comport well with pretensions to advancement in the Union Republican party! Peru should have contained your military, judicial presence and abilities longer. Pity in the first place you broke the Judge for the Minister Plenipotentiary, and a second pity when you broke the Minister for the gubernatorial aspirant. Brothers in the glorious cause, will Capturing Judge Settle answer for Governor with all his rebel sins hanging about his skirts?

Chorus.—No! No! No!!!

H. B. Lowrey.—Well, it shall be Settle; that much is settled. But Gub'ner, how now 'bout your sending the melish and Gen'l Gormandy to hunt and exterminate our gang of loyal men?

Caldwell.—("with a smile that was child like and bland.") My dear H. B., I look on my action in this particular as being the principal feather in my political cap. Why, bless your soul, those fellows were not at all dangerous. I had to do that much to pacify those villainous Conservatives, who kept clamoring and denouncing me for my inaction. You know there was no manner of harm in that gallant band of military patriots. Billy Smith during the war of the rebellion used to blow his horn and set on his dogs after deserters just for a blind. He says he always sent the deserters word when he was going out on a hunt. You see I am a sort of a Smith man.

H. B. Lowrey.—Well, well. That's all right, I s'pose. I've been Heralded 'bout so much by these newspaper mea that I shall have to leave the track to you and Judge Logan. I call on you, Judge, to keep these Ku Klux scamps straight. Don't let 'em persecute poor Lowrey. Let me hab a good chance to git away from these low grounds ob sorrow in Robeson county. Good bye, friends. The light ob day am most here, and I mus' go back to my hole in de swamp.

All.—Good bye, brother. [Exit Lowrey.]

Settle.—Governor and Judge Logan, we will see about this business at Raleigh.

Both.—At Raleigh.

Logan.—A Jeffreys is greater than a stubborn j—I'll Ku-Klux you!

Caldwell.—Get you gone, you Confederate Congressman. They say you are poor Judge, any way. Penitentiary and Clark es. Stanley, forever.

[Exeunt all the Spirits.]

Gems of Thought for the Sabbath.

When once infidelity can persuade men that they shall die like beasts, they soon will be brought to live like beasts also.

The burden of the gospel is love; but it is a love which speaks the commands of God with authority, and insists upon obedience to Him as the only way of safety and life.

A celebrated writer says that if one could read it, every human being carries his life in his face, and is good looking or the reverse, as that life has been good or evil.

It matters not what a man loses if he saves his soul; but if he loses his soul, it matters not what he saves.

Preserve your conscience always soft and sensitive. If but one sin forces its way into that tender part of the soul, and is suffered to dwell there, the road is paved for a thousand iniquities.

The great man is he who chooses the right with invincible resolution; who resists the secret temptations from without and within; who bears the heaviest burdens cheerfully; who is calmest in storms and most fearless under menaces and frowns; and whose reliance on truth, virtue, on God, is most unflinching.

The ruin of most men dates from some vacant hour. Occupation is the armour of the soul. There is a satirical poem, in which the devil is represented as fishing for men, and fitting his bait to the taste and business of his prey; but the idler, he said, gave him no trouble, as he bit the naked hook.

The most popular doctrine to preach in these times, and the hardest one to practice, is the old fashioned apostolic doctrine of self-denial. This is the grace that pinches. The daily battle of Christians is with that artful subtle, greedy sinner, self. And the highest victory of our religion is to follow Jesus over the rugged path of self-denial. This is mainly to be done in the little every-day acts of life. The great occasions that demand sublime sacrifices are few and rare.

A Romantic Story.

In South Carolina, lately, has been enacted another version of the "old, old story" of man's inconstancy and woman's constancy. A lady now no longer young, after many years of waiting, has been married to her love, who was far from being true. She had supposed him dead—killed in battle—and for nine long years had mourned his loss, refusing, by the score, admirers of her beauty and her wit, both of which were more than ordinary, for she came of a Huguenot stock, renowned for their good looks and good sense, and an ancestress of hers was one of the beauties at the court of Catherine de Medicis and mistress to the King of Navarre. While she thus was mourning her life away, her recreant lover was alive and well, and the husband of a Northern woman. He had been left for dead on one of the fields of battle, but under the skillful treatment of the Federal surgeons and tender care of a brown eyed hospital nurse, had regained his lease of life, but lost the heart which was not his to lose. Taking advantage of his death being reported, he came to the North, and under a feigned name married his hospital fairy. With her he lived happily till the fall of 1870, when death took her away. Then at his deserted hearthstone the lonely man thought of his Southern love, and his old position returned. He yielded to the yearning to see her again, and with three children, the fruit of his marriage, went back to "Old Carolina," and shamed and trembling presented himself before her. She, on her part, forgot and forgave him all, and has taken the vows which makes her a mother to his children.

A Horrible Crime.

The Wilmington (Del.) papers report that William Dennis, a negro, committed a rape on the person of Mrs. Joo. Thompson, residing about two miles from that city, on the 27th inst. The victim was alone in the house with her two young children at the time, her husband—a mechanic employed at the Harlan and Hollingsworth shipyard—being absent. Mrs. Thompson made a desperate resistance, the furniture in the room being wrecked during the struggle. The negro drew a razor and threatened to kill her. She escaped from him finally and ran to the house of Joseph Lefevre, about a quarter of a mile distant, in nearly a nude state, all her clothing having been torn off in the struggle, nearly exhausted. The negro, add the papers, bit pieces of flesh from Mrs. Thompson's face and body, which he spit out upon the floor. Her condition is described as precarious. Dennis made his escape, although a number of citizens, together with the police, were soon looking for him.

An Embarrassing Situation.

An exchange informs us that the old philippic tack has been revived again in Alabama, where "the young lady takes a double almond in her teeth and the young man bites it off." That sort of thing used to be popular in Doylestown, Pa.; but it is hardly ever tried any more since the painful accident which occurred at a philippic party last winter. The lady who held the almond between her teeth was somewhat advanced in years and not a little dilapidated. The almond was uncommonly tough, and the man who nibbled was in deadly earnest. He closed his teeth on it and pulled. It would not give. He pulled harder, but made no impression. He clinched his jaws upon it and gave a desperate wrench. It is unpleasant to relate what followed; but, as truth crushed to earth will certainly rise again any how, whether we try to keep her down or not, we may be pardoned for saying that as a consequence of the violent efforts of the young man, he found himself standing up in that room holding in his mouth a nut in which were fixed a double set of porcelain teeth belonging to the aforesaid maiden. It was embarrassing in a certain sense for all parties; the young man thought it would be soothing to the feelings of the company if he went home. Other and less perilous games are in vogue at Doylestown this year.—Max Adeler.

A Curious Relic Examined.

Some workmen digging in the rear of a building in Sullivan street, New York, recently unearthed, about three feet below the surface, two square platforms made of heavy yellow pine logs, and on excavating further, disclosed two log butts in a nearly complete state of preservation. The first but uncovered stood about six feet from the street. It was eighteen feet high, twenty feet wide, twenty feet in length, and was built of heavy square logs of yellow pine, with a flat roof of the same material; the other, which stood about five feet further back, was similar in size, but built in a ruder style of rounded logs. It was probably used for a cattle shed, as a kind of trough sunk in the ground was found close by its side. The house was not only a substantial, but for those primitive times a very comfortable dwelling, the roof being so well laid as to be impervious to rain, and the logs forming the walls fitting together in the closest and most workmanlike manner. Hardly was a well, from which the workmen fished up broken pieces of pump. All inquiries as to the history of these dwellings proved fruitless.

Lowrey or Not Lowrey? That is the Question.

The Atlanta Sun, of yesterday, says: On Monday, two suspicious individuals were observed passing along Peters street, by Martin and Richards, and directly left the street and went across the commons bordering the street at that point. One of the party appeared to be twenty-six or twenty-eight years old, rather slim and athletic. Both seemed to have Indian blood in them. Now, is it not possible that these persons were H. B. Lowrey and one of his comrades? It is known that Lowrey has fled, and $10,000 have been offered for his arrest, as well as $5,000 for each of several others in his clan. Detectives, we learn, have been quite vigilant in Virginia and North Carolina, and have failed to discover any trace of the fugitive. It is not at all unlikely that he has passed through Georgia in search of a refuge farther West.

A New Writing Fluid.

The Dutch Industrie Zeitung publishes the following process for manufacturing ink: "Bruised elderberries, after being kept in an earthen vessel for three days, are pressed and filtered. The juice is of an intense dark color, requiring about 200 parts of water to reduce it to the shade of dark red wine. To 124 quarts of this filtered juice add one ounce of sulphate of iron and one ounce of crude pyroglycous acid. The ink thus prepared has, when first used, a violet color; but when dry, is an indigo-blue black. This ink is superior, in some respects, to that prepared from galls; it does not become thick so soon; in writing it flows easily from the pen, without gumming, and the letters formed by it do not spread on the paper and run into one another."

A Model Platform.

Scott Gordon, a colored Reformer and political orator of Louisiana, is about to take the stump for Reform, and announces the following as his platform of principles: 1. Love your neighbor as yourself. 2. Burglars are in our political House of Life—let us arrest them. 3. Do unto others as you would that they should do unto you; or in other words, stand by the people of the State and they will stand by us. 4. Thou shalt not worship false idols or graven images. 5. An honest white man is as good as an honest negro, and better than a dishonest one. 6. Drive devils out of office, so that, in the language of sacred writ, the lion and the lamb may lie down together.

Restitution.

A gentleman of Richmond, says the Whig, received a letter last week from Mr. C. T. Brown, of Matthews county, Va., (whose farm was ravaged during the war, and his silver plate, library, &c., carried off by federal soldiers), to the effect that after the interchange of several letters, he had received from an ex-federal officer in the city of New York nearly all the stolen silver plate—which was quite valuable—together with a large number of books, &c.

An English Clergyman, a high churchman, was preparing a number of young women last month (February) for confirmation. Among them is one who tells this story: "You all doubtless know, my good girls," said he, addressing them with affectionate earnestness, "what next Wednesday is?" "Oh, yes, sir," they all exclaimed, "it is Valentine's Day." They were right enough, but it was also Ash Wednesday, which happened to fall on the 14th this year, and the coincidence was fatal to its pretensions.

The origin of the title "The Thunderer," by which the London Times is known, was from a writer beginning a leading article with the phrase, "We thundered forth the other day," &c. Some of the Times' contemporaries in referring to this expression, called the Times "The Thunderer," and though nearly fifty years have elapsed, the title still clings to it.
