STATE CONVENTION.

The State Convention of the Conservative Party of North Carolina will meet at Greensboro' on Wednesday, the first day of May next.

"SAME OLD DRUNK MASSA."

The magnanimous Government, the best the world ever saw, in a Pickwickian sense, is still Claverhouseing down in South Carolina. Claverhouse was a brutal English cavalryman, who at the bidding of his maker the King made Scotland in the times of the old Covenanters a living hell, carrying fire and sword throughout "the Land o' Cake," and red-dening every Scottish heath with Puritan blood. Grant is playing the same game of terror in South Carolina, save the bloody accompaniment, and we do not know how long this may be postponed. Three hundred men are now harrasing the peaceful county of Spartanburg, making arrests without warrants of the civil law and in some instances putting inconvenience and hurt upon parties not only innocent, but whose condition, apparently to all, precludes any idea of their connection with the alleged disturbances of the peace and violation of civil rights. But a few days ago, an aged and amiable citizen, who had the misfortune by his social prominence and wealth to incur the enmity of these myrmidons, was hauled up on a charge of violating the Ku Klux act, in dismissing a colored man from his employ because of his politics. It turned out the man was dismissed two years before the passage of the law and not for political reasons at all, but because he stole a sheep. But notwithstanding these things were proven on the preliminary examination, he was bound over for his appearance at the Federal Court. O Decency, where is thy blush!

"Tis the same old drunk, massa, the same old drunk"—the same diabolical programme inaugurated months ago by the Radical party to keep the present rotten administration in power; the same scheme of combined cunning and audacity, by which it is hoped liberty may be crushed in spirit and form and the domination of money and the sword be secured to the base and treacherous schemers. It is proposed to excite and inflame the Northern mind by these lying statements of a "new rebellion." It is designed to elevate a few paltry local misdeeds, having local not political causes, into the proportions of a great national danger that only a Radical administration can avert. In the same caustic but just terms we have so often employed when speaking on this subject of Federal military usurpation and tyranny, we denounce this warfare on the good people of South Carolina, this interference with their local, industrial and political machinery and rights of personal liberty, this reign of terror for political effect conducted after the most approved style of conquering invaders—we denounce it as infamous beyond all parallel in the history of this country, and as fit to be compared in modern annals only with the diabolism practiced by Haynau. We denounce the perpetrators of these vile outrages against the rights and liberties of American citizens—the President of the United States and his evil-minded counsellors. We denounce the despotic, venal and venomous party which backs them in all their crimes. We hold up to the eye of honest criticism the naked enormities of these bold men and this shameless party. We tell the people in plain language what they may expect at the hands of tyrants who smile and sip wine while they stab freedom to the vitals.

The slang whangers of the immaculate Radical press don't like the present bold and defiant attitude of the Democratic Conservative papers. Like Bottom the Weaver, they would have us "roar" them "as gently as any sucking dove." But as we are playing the lion's part in this political drama, we shall not spare the nerves of the opposition. We shall unsparingly show up their rascalities to the people, whom they have wronged. After we have performed our whole duty then we may list to these pleadings, and "roar them gently."

Wealth of the United States.

Advance sheets have been received from the superintendent of the census, embracing statistics of the wealth and public indebtedness of the country, arranged by States and counties. From these it appears that the total real and personal property of the United States was $30,000,000,000 in 1870, as against $18,150,000,000 in 1860, and $7,100,000,000 in 1850. The annual percentage of increase in wealth during the last decade is found by calculation to have been over eighty-six percent, notwithstanding the disappearance of slave values as an element of property.

The Phœnix of Sunday says: Yesterday afternoon, a negro man had his arm cut off, while attempting to ride on one of the trucks of a car on the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta Railroad.

Mr. R. S. Sellers, of Orangeburg, was exercising for a tournament on Wednesday last, when, just after passing the third ring on a full run, his horse made a misstep and, turning almost a complete somersault, fell, bringing Mr. Sellers with him to the ground. Mr. S. was not seriously injured, but the horse was killed outright. So we learn from the News.

The Charleston News says: There are now in the State of South Carolina one hundred and forty-nine chartered lodges of Free and Accepted Masons in active working order. Fifteen charters are dormant. At the last session of the Grand Lodge one hundred and twenty-eight lodges were represented. Six thousand, four hundred and seventy-six master-masons are in full affiliation within this jurisdiction. Solomon's Lodge, No. 1, of this city, has the largest membership, there being one hundred and thirty members reported. The second highest number is reported by the Hiram Lodge, No. 68, at Anderson Court House, its roll embracing one hundred and twenty-one members.

THE FAR WEST.

[Correspondence of the Star.] KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 2nd, 1872.

Mr. Editor:—It is seventeen hundred miles, or thereabouts, from Wilmington, N. C., to this city via Baltimore. Railroads are in progress of construction, however, which will greatly reduce the distance to North Carolina, i. e., the Kansas City and Memphis Railroad, and the Air Line from Atlanta to Charlotte. The next direct route now is via Nashville, Atlanta, and Augusta, crossing the Mississippi at Belmont, on the Iron Mountain Railroad.

This city was commenced about the year 1847, a few warehouses were built on the south bank of the Missouri river, near the line of Kansas, and near the junction of the Kansas river with the Missouri. In 1855 the inhabitants numbered about 550. From 1860 to 1870, the population increased six hundred and thirty percentum! The greatest increase in any city in the United States. The census of 1870 gave Kansas City thirty two thousand. It is now claimed that there are near forty thousand people. Scores of houses are now going up; the population is rapidly increasing; the limits of the city are extending east and south, and, in a few years, perhaps less than ten, we shall number one hundred thousand.

It is astonishing to see the vigor and rapidity which mark the movements of our citizens. It takes but a few days to build a house, and get it ready for the occupant. A large and elegant edifice goes up and is finished in a few weeks. The streets and sidewalks are, in divers places, obstructed by piles of sand, brick, and lumber; and on every hand the sound of the saw and hammer is heard. It is remarkable that there has, as yet, been no check to the rise of real estate. High as prices have been, from time to time regarded, they still advance. Capitalists have made large sums of money by the appreciation of building lots. One man bought land on a certain street for $30, per front foot. Three years from that day, this same lot was worth $300 per foot. Property was bought for $1,700; then sold for $5,500, and again it was disposed of for 5,000—all in the course of a few months. Of course these are extreme cases, but they furnish a good representation of many past and current business transactions.

The Hon. T. H. Benton, predicted that there would be great cities at points along the route from St. Louis to the Pacific Ocean, a few hundred miles distant from each other. We have them now rising to influence and opulence—Kansas City, 40,000; Denver, 10,000; Salt Lake City, 17,000; Sacramento, 15,000. These are the great way stations from "the father of waters" to the golden coast. But it must not be supposed that there is everywhere in the West such stir, rapidity, and enlargement. Liberty, 14 miles north of this place, established 45 years ago, has only 1,500 inhabitants. Westport has the same number, but is an old town. Independence, formerly a great outfitting emporium for emigrants and hunters, has about 3,500. Lexington, laid out in 1825, has 5,000. Boonville, one of the oldest towns in the State, has less than 4,000 people. Jefferson City, laid out in 1822, although it is the capital of the State, has only 5,000. There are many places in the West where the waters are still, reminding one of Greensboro' or Waterloo. There is but little advantage to be derived from a move to one of these quiet places. It one cannot get to a growing city or country, and advance with it, he had probably as well continue where he is.

There is some likelihood that the next President will be from Missouri. Hon. B. Gratz Brown, our present Governor, has a fair chance to be the nominee of the Liberal-Republicans. He is now as good a Democrat as the Democrats need want. His antecedents are, of course, not very agreeable to his new friends and supporters. But Brown is out and out opposed to Grant, and, if elected, will certainly look to the Democrats in Congress for support. He will pursue a liberal, or at least just policy towards the Southern States, and will, in fact, do all that a reasonable Democrat could do. He is a man of considerable brilliancy, but not, as I suppose, a great statesman. He is a man of high ability, but not, as I suppose, a great statesman.

A Son Disinherited—Romance of Real Life.

The Lancaster Express says: Twenty years ago Samuel Wise, son of Christian Wise, residing at Millport, Warwick township, this county, left home without giving notice to any one, leaving a young wife and child behind him. Years rolled on, and yet no tidings of the lost son, husband and father. Ten years ago last February Christian Wise, the father of the missing man, died; but before dying he made a will wherein he declared that if the son Samuel should return home ten years after his (the father's) death, he should receive his share of the fortune, a very considerable estate; but in the event of his failure to return it was to go to the sister, in addition to her own share. On Monday a gentleman called at the Cadwell House, this city, armed with power of attorney from the long lost son, who is now and has been all these years in Arizona. The agent finally succeeded in finding Samuel's sister at Rothsville, and she told him all about the will. He at once returned to this city and consulted the Register of Wills, the search revealing the fact that he was just sixteen days too late.

In other words, the claim came in just sixteen days after the expiration of the ten years contemplated in the will! The attorney of Samuel Wise, the missing man, was delayed on the Union Pacific railroad by the snow blockade for a period of more than one month, and Samuel thereby lost his fortune. The missing man has proved recent to his first wife and child, having married a woman in Arizona, by which union he has another child. Verily, truth is stranger than fiction.

The Comet Paralle in 1712.

Whiston, justly celebrated as a mathematician and as the translator of Josephus, predicted in 1712 that a comet would appear on Wednesday, the 14th of October of that year, at five minutes after five o'clock in the morning, and that on the following Friday the earth would be destroyed by fire.

The comet appeared punctually, and this fact added to Whiston's reputation for science, spread the fear and wide that the remainder of the prediction would likewise be fulfilled.

A number of persons, believing in the saving properties of water, got into boats and barges in the Thames, South Sea and India stock fell. It is even related that a frightened Dutch captain threw all his powder overboard, lest it should endanger the ship. One hundred clergymen were ferried over to Sabbath Palace to request the preparation of proper prayers, there being none in the church service appropriate to such an emergency. But the panic, nevertheless, produced great good; for the people universally believed that the Day of Judgment was at hand, and acted upon that belief. Many wrongs were righted, many breaches of morality repaired, and many sins "repented of."

Too Much Buffalo Bill.

Frederick White, a fair haired strippling about seventeen years old, lived with his aged parents at 64 Charles street, and worked in a printing establishment in Wooster street. A few weeks ago, Frederick became infatuated with the wild stories of Buffalo Bill's "moving accidents," as told in the blood and thunder periodicals. His evenings were spent in pouring over the six cent weeklies, and wishing himself on the plains. Sometimes he got up in his sleep, and seizing a broomstick made ferocious attacks on innocent bureau and chairs, and pointed to his little brother as "shoot 'em." Last Saturday, with $10 in his pocket, he started for the West to hunt buffalo. His aged parents, who are grieved-stricken at their son's flight, have advertised for him in the Y. Sun.

Julius A. Sumner, of Akron, Ohio, says he rode on the first passenger car ever drawn upon a railroad in the United States, that he rode upon the first steamboat that ever navigated Lake Erie, and that he was the first man to build a rolling mill and nail factory in the State of Ohio.

The Burial of General Anderson.

The Sun states that no ceremonies were accorded the remains of General Anderson at West Point; no troops were drawn up to music, no salute, and not a man raised his hat. The casket on which the coffin was placed was drawn by four spavined horses, one of which nearly died before reaching the academy grounds. Gen. Ruger stated to the Sun reporter that he "had special orders from the War Department to pay no funeral honors to General Anderson at West Point."

The local editor of the Jacksonville Journal wrote the other day an item to the effect that "winter was lingering in the lap of spring," but the managing editor "cut it out." He said the idea was good enough, and original, and all that sort of thing, but it would not do to publish, because the high moral tone of the paper had to be maintained in a town full of seminary girls.

A little boy in Palmyra, playing with a ball of worsted thread attached to his mother's crochet-work, accidentally swallowed it, and had to be held by several able bodied Irish women while every yard of it was unwound in his blessed little stomach by reeling the end projecting from his mouth. So, at least, a local chronicler relates.

A Washington editor is mad because a compositor headed his editorial, "The Champagne Opened," when he wrote "The Campaign Opened." He says that printer is always thinking about something to drink.
