

Thursday night, Hon. R. M. T. Hunter came forth from his retirement of years and delivered one of his most scholarly and philosophical addresses. He reviewed the policy of hate pursued at the South by the Administration party, and showed that Greelev's policy of reconciliation was the only thing to save the country and make it tolerable to live in. The danger of Imperialism was faithfully portrayed by the distinguished and venerable Virginian.

We quote portions of Mr. Hunter's able speech:

With the candidates whose cause I support I have no personal acquaintance. never exchanged a word or line with either of them in my life. In times past Mr. Greeley and I have differed on nearly all the great public questions which have divided parties in their political action. As I under-stand it, these differences still exist. He is a Republican, and I a Democrat, neither having changed or professed to change on those subjects of discussion. And yet I sincerely desire his election, and stand here to aid it as far as I can. His friends have put him in the lead in the great cause of national harmony, and in the important issue between popular government and the coming empire he is the standard-bearer of those who maintain the popular supremacy. For the sake of these great issues he will command my earnest support; in their sacred names I will follow him so long as he leads us faithfully, and his fidelity to his pledges on these issues no man has ever doubted. For the present I will bury all consideration of the questions upon which we may differ, for the sake of his aid upon those which I hold to be of transcendant importance. Indeed I could make no issue upon these other questions if I desired it. Upon them his opponent is as much opposed to me as he is, but I will not forbear to do the good which, I myself may do because I cannot effect all I myself may do because I cannot effect an that I would. Let us secure peace, not pre-tended, but real, between all the sections and people of this great country, and arrest the rapid progress of the centralization of all power in the General Government, so as to check the advent of despotism, and he will look afterward to other and minor causes of division. Questions of finance, of currency, of commerce, are worthy of all currency, of commerce, are worthy of all attention, but in importance they sink far below those which concern the social life itself. To infuse social sympathies and af-fections among all the sections of this great people is a mighty task; and the man who leads and successis in it will deserve the Presidency for this, if for nothing else.

Of the danger to our Republican institutions Mr. Hunter says:

That there is a deliberate purpose already entertained by any great party in this coun-try to change from a popular to an imperial form of government I do not charge. But form of government I do not charge. But I do assert that the system of measures and course of policy pursued by the Radical party must have this result, whether they design it or not. And further, I believe that the number of those who secretly pre-fer an empire to a republic is far greater than any of us would reckon it if called upon for an estimate. Nor is this all. I de-clare to you in trath and sincerity that in my opinion there is no small danger of such a change, unless the people are warned
