FOUL AND FAIR.

The acquittal of Laura Fair by a San Francisco jury points a moral terribly significant for the times and adorns with hideous malevolence one of the darkest tales in all the annals of crime. That a jury of men, some of whom are supposed to be heads of families, should so solemnly give their sanction to lawless inroads upon the peace of the domestic circle by a base beauty and should pronounce her slaving her victim in the presence of his wife no murder, shows the weakness of human nature and the degeneracy of our system of indicial trials. It virtually offers a premium for blood-crowned prostitution. It saps the social system, confounds and confuses justice with license, blunts the public conscience and degrades our civilization. Against such monstrous perversions of justice and morals the indignation of the press all over the land ought to be Handsome and Valuable Testimonials to Maj. J. C. Winder, Late Superintendent of the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta Ballroad-The Presentation Addresses and Response-Refreshments, &c.

Yesterday, at 12 M., a large number of the merchants of the city and others, together with officers and employees of the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta Railroad, assembled at the Commercial Exchange for the purpose of presenting to Maj. J. C. Winder, on his retiring from the position of superintendent of that road. some fitting testimonials of their high appreciation of the able and faithful manner in which he has discharged his arduous and difficult duties. The presents consisted of an elegant silver water service, a handsome clock and mantel ornaments from the merchants of Wilmington and a magnificent gold watch and chain from the employees of the Railroad. Dr. A. J. DeRosset made the presentation in behalf of the merchants in the following words:

MAJOR WINDER:-A number of the merchants of Wilmington (many of whom are here present) are desirous of offering you this silver water service and this set of mantel ornaments, in testimony of their appreciation of your able, gentlemanly and satisfactory administration of the office of Superintendent of the Wilmington, Columoia and Augusta Railroad, from which (to their great regret) you have recently retired. To me, as one of the oldest among them, has been assigned the agreeable duty of pre-ing your acceptance of them. All of us have had more or less frequent and important business transactions with you as an officer of the Company, and have experienced the courtesy and kindness which have uniformly characterized your management of its affairs, without for one moment witnessing the slightest deviation from the line of your duty as guardian of the interests confided to your care. Next to the inward satisfaction which every one must feel who is conscious of having faithfully discharged his duties, the knowledge that his course has been approved by those with whom he has been brought in contact, and who have closely observed his actions, senting the gifts in their behalf, and of ask-must be most grateful to the heart and feel-It is this consideration, sir, which gives a value to the testimonial, of which we now ask your acceptance, far beyond its intrin-sic worth, and which, I feel sure, will induce you to receive it in the spirit of kindness which has prompted the offer.

Permit me to add for myself, that, apart from relations to you as a personal friend my judgment fully approves of this public expression of confidence and good-will towards you as an officer and a gentleman; and I doubt not that this whole community unites with me in the wish that your separation from us will not be final, but that you may soon be called to fill some position which will insure your continued and permanent residence in our growing city.

But wherever your future lot may be cast, be assured that you will carry with you our best wishes for your earthly pros-perity and happiness, and when at length your work of life shall be ended, may you be received into the joys of the eternal world, with the approving words of our Great Ruler and Judge—"Well done thou good and faithful servant."

Mr. H. W. Shure, in behalf of the Railroad employees, in presenting the watch,

MAJ. JOHN C. WINDER:-I have the pleasure of addressing a few remarks to you in behalf of the employees of the Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta Railroad, of which you were lately Superintendent.

It is unfortunate that, in the history of our lives, there are passages which separate friends from one another and which drift us in opposite directions upon the sea of life; yet it is consoling to know that Dame Justice crowns, with honor and success, those who are worthy of her bright rewards. We feel that it would be unkind in us to part with you without some token of our gratitude and high appreciation of your kind, courteous and successful administra

A little over two years ago, when the gate to Northern and Southern intercourse, by rail, was closed and the petty local influ ences of private roads and individuals barred the progress of railroad improve-ments and quick transit, it was your good fortune to connect yourself with a road that was destined to be the first to break the barrier and to open the gate to fair compe-tition. The road, then a wreck, and destitute of material, with a state of demoralization existing among its employees, looked a weak opponent to its well equipped competitors; but, thanks to your energy and perseverance and your watchful, practical eye, it soon rose from its dilapidated condition and is now conducting its heavy business with safety and dispatch. Of the new link, from Columbia to Sum-ter, which was built by you, I am unable to do justice to its merits, or to your skill. Built, as it was, through every obstacle and opposition, it stands to-day the best road of the South. Stretching out its iron arms and thrusting them deep into its rivals' trade and prosperity, it will forever stand a monument of your engineering skill.

Many of us have linked our fortunes with the railroads of our land and observe with watchful eye their progress and improve-ment. Deeper into the wild West; deeper into the frozen North; deeper into the sunny South, the locomotive whistle thrills a new life and the echo of wheels sounds on over hill and dale, and soon the webb of ails will cover our land.

In parting with you, we beg you to accept this slight token of our regard and friend-This watch we give you that you may always keep time and pace with the railroad improvements of our land; and this chain, that its links may always be emblematical of our linked fortunes and our unbroken friendship. Take them; and may the day soon be here when every revolution of its second-hand will carry the traveller a mile further on his journey.

Major Winder then responded in the following words: Dr. DeRosset and Gentlemen; and Mr. Shure and Gentlemen of the W., C. & A. Rail-

Would that I could command the language to express to you the gratification I feel at this manifestation of your regard for me; but I am overwhelmed, and words fail me; yet would I be doing violence to my feelings yet would I be doing violence to my feelings were I not, in my own humble way, to attempt to thank you for the honor you do me this day. I can imagine no greater pleasure, nor anything more gratifying to my pride, than that my official course, while connected with the Wilmington, Columbia & Augusta Railroad, should be approved of by the merchants of Wilmington, and that these under me should remember with pleasure and kind feeling my association with them.

Gentlemen, you have been pleased to refer ing than I deserve. I did no more than was my duty; this I tried to do, and it was always my effort to treat the merchants with that consideration due them as gentlemen and as patrons of the road. This was their right, and sir, I thank you with all my heart for the assurances which you have given me of the approval of the merchants, and am none the ess gratified at the personal regard you have been pleased to express, which is more valued, coming, as it does, from one whom I have known from my earliest childhood. To you, my associates, I owe much, for whatever credit is due me I am in a great measure indebted to you. It was my good fortune to be associated with you for more than two years. During that time we labored hard and earnestly for the best interest of the company in whose employ we were. When we began together you will remember the road was very much run down and, we may say, ended in the swamps of the Congaree. My distinguished predecessor had done all that man could do with the means at hand, but they were lim-But, thanks to the wealth of the present owners, you have seen our own city connected with the beautiful city of Columbia, new engines added to assist your ex-hausted machinery, hundreds of new cars added to the list, new warehouses constructed, and, in short, hundreds of thousands of dollars spent in improvements, and I congratulate you and my successor that the work is done and the unpleasant and unpopular duty of spending money is at an end, at least in a great degree. During all this time it gives me pleasure to say that you all did your duty faithfully, and I

Clubs Out of Order.

Clubs seem to be "trumps" with some of the policemen here lately. It was only a few weeks since that our Mayor, in his usual address upon the reorganization of the police force, informed them that they 'must maintain command of temper, observe decorum, and exercise patience under personal prococation." Yet, if we are correctly informed by persons who witnessed the transaction, this advice of the chief exexutive officer of the city was utterly ignored in an unfortunate affair that occurred on our streets yesterday, the club being used unmercifully where there was no actual necessity for it. We did not witness the affair, and speak only from hearsay, but we think it due to the community that a full and impartial investigation into the matter should be had by the authorities.

Unsuccessful Venture. On Saturday night, about half-past 2 o'clock, a negro effected an entrance into the room occupied by Mr. John S. James, at his residence on the corner of Third and Dock streets. He jumped out of the open window when detected and two or three shots from a well loaded pistol hastened his movements as he retired from the scene of his unprofitable experiment.

At the head of this illustrious house is Hiram E. Stilley, United States Assessor of Internal Revenue, member of the Lower House of the North Carolino Legislature in 1868-70, and just elected to the State Senate from this district. As a member of the last Republican Legislature, Stilley was one of the most pliant tools in the hands of Littlefield, and, of course, his vote was never wanting when a robbery of unusual proportions was to be put through. United States Marshal Carrow has elected him to serve another two years, in consideration of his eminent services during his former term. Second on the list is Stephen W. Stilley, clerk to the Internal Revenue Assessor, and an aspirant for promotion if Grant is re-elected, Sydney F. Stilley, is Postmaster at this place, and one of Carrow's lieutenants in running the political machine. Henry D. Stilley is Deputy Postmaster. William Stilley, jr., was, until recently, mail-carrier from Washing-ton to Goose Creek, in this county. He is now out of employment, but will have to be provided for before the November election. James E. Merriam, brother-in-law of all the Stilleys, is Assistant Assessor of Internal Revenue, and recently elected one of the Board of County Commissioners. To gratify this wish Hagan's Magnonia Balm was introduced. The cosmetics of the day had been pronounced poisonous by the most distinguished chemists, and it was also found that their ultimate effect was to wither the skin as well as to paralize the external nerves. The ladies hailed with delight the advent of a healthful, herbal and floral preparation capable of imparting to their faces, necks and arms a porcelain smoothness and a tinge like that of the finest oriental pearl. They soon discovered that it was a "new thing under the sun." incomparable and unapproachable. Unquestionably the Magnolia Balm has been the great toilet success of the present century.
