WILMINGTON N. C. FRIDAY MORNING, NOV. 15, 1872.

ORGANIZED CRITICISM. The true policy of the Liberals i to "watch and wait." The triumph of Grant does not annihilate Liberalism. We are still a strong, active, compact and vigorous opposition if anything is done in the conduct of the Administration that demands opposition.

Passivity at the beginning of the new term is best for obvious reasons. Grant may choose a new set of advisers. He may decide upon a new course as regards the treatment of the South, the appointments and conduct of the civil service and other matters wherein he has heretofore subjected himself to the severest criticism. We ought, with what faith in the man we can possibly muster, wait and see he intends doing any better than he has been doing. For what he has done wilfully or maliciously he should still be denounced. But even in this the language of denunciation should comport with the present surroundings and the situation to-day.

The South cannot give the President a friendly new trial. The best she can do, commanding her Sunday temper, is to hold off from abusing him and give him a fair chance to redeem himself. The South has been cruelly, vilely treated, and Mr. Grant is responsible. True he has had miserable advisers, and his people at the South-that is, the white portion of his people-have been of the worst class of the population, but he is justly held responsible for reposing confidence in such people. But notwithstanding his record, if he will "be just and fear not," if he will cast off visers, if he will cease to persecute the South and lend a helping hand instead, if he will clean out the Augean stables at Washington and reform and purify the public service every where, he will go very far towards restoring confidence in the stability of free institutions and make friends for his Administration of those whom his previous policy has alienated. Will he do these things? Faith is weak. But we must wait and see. Let us give Grant a trial, holding ourselves in powerful, organized criticism ready for whatever the modern Ulysses may turn up. If he unexpectedly should call around him wise and patriotic counsellors and should turn over an entirely new leaf after the fourth of next March, we shall say with all the people, "Well done thou good and faithful servant." If on the other hand he should retain his present Cabinet or change it for the worse, if he should continue to consort with the disreputable ring men, if he should persist in his tyrannical course towards the South, we shall denounce him, the people will rise up in judgment four years hence and condemn him, he will become in the language of Holy Writ "a hissing and a by-word."

The triumph of Grant was the triumph of certain ideas which he had in common with the people. It was not the triumph of Grantism-not the victory of the stern, relentless, irresponsible, one-man power the President believes in. Let him push his conception of the result to any such conclusion and he will find very speedily what the temper and spirit of the people are. But if he is disposed to adopt s wiser, juster, more patriotic course, let him do so untrammelled by hostile criticism. We have little faith, judging by his past policy and conduct. He may, however, improve. Let us half miles from the murdered man. give him a fair, impartial trial. Let the Liberal party constitute itself an organized criticism mete for any occasion. Vituperation now will certainly do us no good, and may do us much harm.

THE PAPERS. Henry Smith, Esq., retires from the Sun, having disposed of his interest to Hon. Alex. H. Stephens, who is now sole proprietor. Mr. Smith is succeeded by Mr. Samuel A. Echols as associate editor and business manager. Mr. Stephens will continue to conduct the political department.

The Aiken Journal will become a morning paper.

larly or at intervals. Quillings or scallops are among the most fashionable trimmings. Velvet is also being a good deal used, and velvet hows at the back of waist are very fashionable; the end of the bow is usually carried toward the side.

Holland practically makes it the same by denying certain rights and privileges to the uneducated. England and France both have this question. Public sentiment in this country, the Chamber of the Senators elect from the district composed of the counties of the Senators elect from the district composed of the counties of the Senators elect from the district composed of the counties of the Senators elect from the district composed of the counties of the Senators elect from the district composed of the counties of the Senators elect from the district composed of the country and Duplin, is speken of as President pro tem of the Senate.

That Grant is no statesman has been demonstrated so often since his administration began that it is a waste of words to assert the fact at this late day. And it is also well known that the men who "run" him are likewise no statesmen. The principal idea of Grant and his Mortons. Conklings and Butlers is to make as much money out of "the machine" as they can grind out of it. They care absolutely nothing for the welfare of the country. Selfish aggrandizement, with them, is the only consideration.

Now will the President during the new term which is to commence next March surround himself with the same men who have disgraced his administration so far? Are we to have Simon Cameron for chief counsellor of the executive, Morton for chief lieutenant of the forces in active service, and shall all the henchmen of high and low degree who have feathered their nests so nicely for four years continue in that pleasant occupation during the next four? Or shall a change come over the spirit of Mr. Grant's dreams and that functionary suddenly remember that he is the first officer of the Republic and custodian of its laws? We are not of those who think there will be a material change of policy in the Administration. We think the President is utterly incapable of rising to the dignity of the occasion, seizing the opportunity so richly offered and becoming at once the Pacificator of the country and Savior of its institutions. It takes mind to do a great thing. The want of intellect in our President is more conspicuous than was ever before known in the case of any public man in all our history. And it requires heart to do a great thing. This, too, the President lacks. Wanting these, we expect nothing of Mr. Grant that is noble, disinterested or statesmanlike. If perchance there Morton & Co. and take to himself | is an abatement of the rigorous treatmore prudent and respectable ad ment of the South, it will be due solely to the fact that there is nothing further to be gained by such a policy, and everything to lose. Grant may get tired of holding the rod of iron, and may let it drop out of sheer disgust. We imagine this to be our only chance for being let alone. A slim one truly; for despots usually have arms that don't tire of holding the sceptre, be it of iron or gold.

The Crescent informs us that Randal Legett, Mark Brigman, Andrew Huggins and Isaac Norton, (all colored) were carried to the State penitentiary in Columbia by the Sheriff's deputies. The two first named are sentenced to 18 months, and the two latter to 12 months confinement at hard labor.

Says the Marion Crescent: On Friday last, during the visit of Robinson's Circus, our town seemed a very pandemonium. Our streets were filled by dranken people, and pro-fanity, such as would fill men's hearts with disgust and horror, was every-where heard. From early in the morning until late in the afternoon this disgraceful scene could be seen on every street corner.

Professor Tyndall's Training as an

Authori The Popular Science Monthly informs us that a Mr. Tyndall, the ancestor of the distinguished professor, who lived at the epoch of Columbus, was devoted to religious reform, and translated the Bible into English for the people. But he found worse navgation on the theological sea than Columbus encountered on the Atlantic, and was burned at the stake for his opinions in 1536. Professor Tyndall's father inherited from his ancestors a taste for religious controversy, and threw himself zealously, as an anti-Romanist, into the Protestant and Catholic warfare. Young Tyndall's early intellectual discipline consisted almost wholly of exercises in theological controversy on the doctrines of infallibility, purgatory, transubstantiation, and invocation of the saints. The boy knew the Bible almost by heart, and with reference to his knowledge his father used to call him Stillingfleet. But he had also an early interest in natural things, and his father flattered this tendency by calling him Newton, and by teach ing him lines concerning the great natural philosopher, before he was seven years old, that are still remembered. The father of Professor Tyndall was not only intellectually gifted, but he was a man of courage, independence, mental delicacy, and scrupulous honor. By the silent influence of his character, by example as well as by precept, he inspired the intellect of his boy and taught him to love a life of manly independence. He died in May, 1847, quoting to his son the words of Wolsey to Cromwell: "Be just and fear nothing."

How Rattlesnakes Bite. A writer in Chamber's Journal contradicts a popular belief as to the manner in which snakes bite and inject their poison. He says: "I can only speak for the rattlesnake, it is true; with every other venomous reptile the orthodox accounts may be correct, but the rattlesnake does not send its poison through its fangs. It is always said that the two fangs, which answer somewhat to the human 'eye-teeth,' are hollow and perforated at the bottom, and that the poison flows from the reservoir through this canal to the point of the fang, and thence into the wound. The rattlesnake's fang is certainly hollow, but the point is solid, and the poison-bag, to use a very homely simile, may be compared to a gum boil; when the animal strikes the pressure instantly causes a drop of venom to run down outside the tooth into the puncture. "I dare say this will be controvertauthority to be referred to. Mr. W. R. Morley, chief surveyor of the ways, running through Colorado and New Mexico, is a skilled naturalist who has killed several hundred of these reptiles, has carefully examined them, and he can speak from more experience than almost any living man, that the poison is injected in the manner described. This accounts for the fact that rattle-snake bites are sometimes harmless when the sufferer is bitten way into the flesh at all."

Authors. In no country do writers spring into general notoriety so suddenly as in this, and in none are they so soon tired of and forgotten. A paragraph is in circulation giving the present status of some of these ephemeral favorites of a whimsical public, who seem to have had their day:

Mortimer Thompson (Doesticks) is editing a paper in Minneapolis, Minn. Locke (Nasby) edits the Toledo Blade, and is worth $250,000, which shows that money and wit are sometimes found in the same possession. R. H. Newell (Orpheus C. Kerr) is on the staff of the World.

S. L. Clemens (Mark Twain) is named, but not located. Bret Harte is supposed to be in or

While the entire community deeply sympathize with the unfortunate ladies, charged with the commission of this terrible crime, yet the general sentiment in regard to the guilt of the parties is divided, the affair being the only topic of street conversation yesterday.—Raleigh News.

THE KEY TO HEALTH. It is the easiest thing in the world to lose the blessing of health, but when lost it is not so easy to regain it. The world has learned from the beneficial referts produced by that admirable preparation, that one medicine may embrace the three properties of a ton-ic, a laxative, and an alterative; that the three curative processes of invigoration, parlifection and regulation may be compassed at the same time by the operation of a single agreeable remedy. There are sound, philosophical reasons for the remarkable improvement which the Bitters occasion in the condition of a deranged and enfeebled system. This pure combination of vegetable juices not only strengthens the stomach, stimulates the appetite and braces the nerves, but also imparts tone and vigor to the secreby the material, and never finds its tory organs as the skin, the liver, and the kidneys; and if the blood has become too thin and watery to nourish the body properly, enriches and vitalizes that " raw material" of all the solid portions of the frame. At this period of the year, when intermittent fevers, bilious disorders, stomach complaints, and dysenteric and diarrhesic aliments are always more or less rife, occasional doses of the Bitters will be found the best safeguard against the atmospheric conditions which generate them. An accession of general vigor is necessary to enable the system to resist the morbid influence of the malarious vapors which rise from the earth at this season, and of all the known invigorants, Hostetter's Bitters is the safest and most potent.
