Notes and Gleanings.

The retirement of Secretary Boutwell from the Cabinet is no longer a question of doubt. He has decided. against the advice of the President and other friends, who were anxious to have him remain through General Grant's second administration at the head of the Treasury Department, to become a candidate for United States Senator from Massachusetts. Governor Boutwell has prepared his letter of resignation, to take effect on the 15th of February, though he has not yet sent it to the President. After that he will proceed to Massachusetts. Secretary Boutwell's intention to withdraw from the Cabinet was made known to the President is understood, has already fixed upo Judged Richardson, the Assistant Secretary, as Governor Boutwell's successor. It is understood that in doing so he has followed the recommendation of the retiring Secretary, whose opinion of Judge Richardson's abilities is of the highest character.

The Stokes trial still proceeds without novelty or increased interest. As regards the matter brought forward in evidence, while of the same general features as on the first trial, there is less of it. The medical part has not been reached, so the doses of morphine administered internally and sub-entaneously are yet, we suppose, to be wrangled over, as well as the story of the probing of the wound. prisoner for the shooting of Fisk will be nearly reached.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue contemplates a change in the whiskey regulations on the 1st of January, under which alteration an allowance of one fermenting period will be made, but in no case will more than forty-eight hours be allowed upon the opening of additional tubs before those additional tubs are included in arriving at the producing capacity. Heretofore additional tubs have been included from the moment they were opened. This new ruling will be prospective from the 1st of January, but in no case will it be retroactive, or, in other words, will relate entirely and only to the products of January and future periods.

Among the rumors originating with the kitchen cabinet is one that Secretary Belknap's services will not be desired by the President in the War Department after the 4th of March. The friendship of the editor of The Sunday Capital newspaper for Belknap is said to have mortally offended the kitchen cabinet, which has a mortal quarrel with that paper, everybody connected with it, and everybody whom it befriends. It is also hinted that Gen. Belknap, having taken no part in the late campaign, has no claim on the Administration, and that the President will give the war budget to some New York man as a reward for his services in carrying that State.

The Masque Ball. The late hour at which this elegant en tertainment closed, precluded the possibil ity of the extended notice it deserved. The scene presented in City Hall. Tues day night at 10 o'clock, might well be denominated "rich, rare and racy." The great variety of characters present-aristocratic, plebeian and grotesque—the blending of every shade of color in rich profusion, formed a tout ensemble rarely witnessed.

It seemed that one was thrust suddenly into the midst of a World's Fair, where every nation and every race and caste were represented, their chief business being to enjoy themselves. As one wandered on midst the mazes of the crowd, well bottled "Paregoric" advances to soothe into repose all aches and pains; or the wandering "Mouning Stan" beamed forth with latest intelligence, arrayed in a neat dress of that paper; while the "Old Organ Grinder" turned his tune, and the "Clown" gambolled lithely for the amusement of the faithfully represented "Mary, Queen of Scots," or her French Majesty "Marie Antoinette." "Flower Girls," "Gipsies," "Peasant Girls," waltzed, chatted and flirted with "Sir Walter Raleigh," "Highland Chiefs," kings, princes and the "Great Unknown," in dominoes of many colors, while the "Maid of the Mist" mystified all around her. Venetian boatmen warbled forth the "Songs of Adria's Gondolier," and "Eyes looked love to eyes which spake again." Matronly dames were there to chaperon and "Dolly Varden" came forth again to do honor to the night, and all around played, some time ago, and the President, it in Lincoln Green, Robin Hood and his was picturesque and beautiful in the extreme, and as "music arose with its voluptuous swell" and the fantastic crowd swaved to and fro in the undulations of the dance. the spectators might well imagine that, seated on the wonderful carpet of the "Arabian Knights," they had been carried into the poetic realms of Oriental fairy land.

As the hour of midnight approached that should shut out of existence 1872, with its checkered scenes of joy and woe, a circle round the room was formed and all joined hands to dance the new year in. In the centre of this circle stood, in youth and maiden modesty, the "New Year," waiting to be unveiled. As the minutes glided away expectation stood on tip-toe, as all were then to unmask and be "seen face to face" and It is probable that by the anniversary of the deed, the 6th of January, a deso puzzled them before should be revealed liverance between the people and the in the light of the "New Year." At twelve the veil was lifted from the brow of 1873, and all uncovered to do homage, with fond hopes that the fair vision before them might be typical of the year that Old Time had just dropped from his glass upon them. Friends now greeted each other with "Happy New Year," and the dance was renewed

That "Industrious Lad."

A few days since a mercantile house in this city advertised in THE MORNING STAR for an industrious lad to act as clerk in their establishment. Of course, the inevitable 'Apply at this office" was appended to the advertisement. And they did "apply"; beginning that operation about sunrise on the morning the advertisement appeared; and the "application" is still kept up with all who believes in nothing but mustard-

On a close estimate, we think we have sent to the mercantile house aforesaid about three hundred and seventy-five "lads," and every one of 'em "industrious." Such industry in "applying at this office;" such industry in getting to that mercantile house. we have never seen equalled. It is a dry goods house, and it was funny to see the industrious lads" crowding into the store by scores, and fifties, and hundreds. The public thought the establishment was doing the biggest holiday business ever known in ilmington; but they couldn't understand how it was that all the customers were "industrious lads." The proprietor was so closely questioned by the excited popuwho crowded around his door. that he sought refuge in stratagem. he : "Gentlemen, there's nothing unusual the matter; I have added a merchant tailoring department to my business; there's been a new military school es tablished here; and these young gentlemen are the ca-dets, who have come down to have their uniforms made; that's all." This gave the proprietor a short breathing spell. and before the populace could make another rally that mercantile house was closed, and it remained close for seventy-five or

The long and the short of this matter i this: that "industrious lad" has been found: a small brigade of 'em have been found; the mercantile house aforesaid don't want any more "industrious lads," unless they come to buy a stock of dry goods; we don't want but very few of 'em to "apply at this office," and our country correspondence on this subject may as well be discontinued. We cannot, however, dismiss this subject vithout an expression of our admiration of a city that can produce so many lads, and every one of 'em industrious. It is marvellous; and we would advise all merchants who need such appendages to their estab lishments to advertise in THE MORNING STAR: but they can't say "apply at this office" any more in these columns.

New Year's Day.

New Year's Day was observed in much the usual manner by our white citizens. Business as a general thing was suspended and about the average number of "calls" peculiar to the day were made. At least the indications would lead one to suppose such to be the case.

The colored population enjoyed themselves hugely, the streets being thronged with men, women and children to witness the parade of the Wilmington Rifle Guards. colored military organization, and the D. Q. I.'s, or whatever they may be called, who rode through the streets dressed in costumes of the most grotesque and ridiculous descriptions and wearing masques upon their faces. These latter drew up in front of the Market House d ing the afternoon, where they indulged in certain cabalistic performances which seemed to be highly edifying and amusing to the large numbers crowded around them.

Trick on a Colored Military Company. It has been known for sometime that there existed in Harnett Township, in this county, a sort of military organization, composed of a number of the colored people of that township. They were heard from during one of the late elections, when they marched up to the polls while the voting was going on and created quite a sensation among the "sovereigns" there assembled. The company has never been supplied with arms, but has been drilling regularly without them. It seems that recently some of the residents of the township found it expedient to complain against them, which resulted in capias being issued by the Clerk of the Superior Court for the arrest of some of the ring leaders connected with the organization, on the ground that it was illegal and calculated to cause mischief.

The documents were placed in the hands of one Highsmith, the colored Constable of that township, who, to save trouble, conceived the happy thought of enticing the parties to the city, where they could be seized and lodged in fail, or bound over, as the case might be. With this object in view he proposed to the company to act as their captain and march them up to Wilmington, where they could pass Emancipation Day in a manner suited to the occasion. De luded by the brilliant prospect held out before them, they consented to the arrangement without a moment's hesitation, and during the afternoon, yesterday, Constable Highsmith drew the company up in front of the Court House, when he proceeded to read the papers designating five of their number to be placed under arrest. They gave bail for their appearance at Court, but the whole company were loud and emphatic in their depunciations of the officer who had led them into the trap.

- There was very little business transacted in this city yesterday. The wharves were almost deserted.

A POLYGLOT BUSINESS.—The widespread influence of American skill and enterprise has outstripped the comprehension of the Americans themselves. The comprehension of the Americans themselves. The fabrics of our mills clothe the savages of both continents. They wrap the loins of Africa, and the tawny skins of South American pampas. But wider still are spread the products of our skill in medicines. A late visit to Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co.'s laboratory and A late visit to Dr. J. C. Their publications are in the many tongues that widely-severed people use. Their letters must be read from and written in many tongues, for which there sits a long range of correspondents with the indispensable accomplishments for their duties. Their daily mail of half a bushel of letters brings them advices, orders and remittances from the circle of the world. We were overwhelmed with amazement, and our readers would be by an inspection of this wonderfully extensive, health-dealing enterprise.—Holly Springs (Miss.) Conservative.

Mr. Means attempted to wrench the gun from the negro's hands, when, after a short scuffle, he released his hold and the negro, losing his balance, fell out of the wagon, one of the wheels passing over his body. He lived about six hours after the fall. Mr. Means then rode on to town, not knowing that the negro was dead until he was arrested Satur-day night, as before stated.
