

GEN. BEAUREGARD'S ADDRESS. In defence of himself and the gentlemen who lately signed certain resolutions that have been extensively published and commented by in the press of the country, Gen. Beauregard has written an address which we find in the new Orleans papers, and reproduce in our own columns this morning.

THE DUEL. Scenes and Incidents. Condensed from the New Orleans Times. STATEMENT OF AN EYE-WITNESS. Learning through a private telegram addressed to me at Mississippi City that the duel was to take place, I concluded to intercept the train and if possible accompany the party. With this object I left Mississippi City on the morning train and met the other on this side of the Bigoties the usual meeting place.

moved to that institution, Colonel Rhett's friends assisting those of the deceased. Colonel Rhett and party stopped at a farmhouse near... Reminiscing the scene as I do now, I am under the impression that the injury to Judge Cooley's foot placed him at a terrible disadvantage. I observed that he sat down while the seconds were measuring the ground, and I do not think he could bear the weight of his body upon his foot without feeling some pain.

is only endemic and proper care will prevent. Though all classes of people have been attacked, he said only the poor and the negroes have died. The poor white of the negroes are selfish and will not employ physicians until too late, for fear of the charges.
