[Raleigh News.] A Singular Colucidence.

Ir is rather a singular coincidence that the Badger family served one term each in the State Legislature for three successive generations. Thos. Badger from Newbern, in 1796; Hon. Geo. E. Badger from Newbern, in 1815, and R. C. Badger from Wake,

The Graham family also served in the State Legislature for three successive generations, Gen. Joseph Graham from Mecklenburg, from 1788 to 1794; Hon. W. A. Graham from Orange, from 1835 to 1855, and Jno. W. and J. A. Graham, the former from Orange, in 1868 and 1870, and the latter from Alamance, in

Of the above named leading famihes of the State it is singular that the second generation of each were the most distinguished-Geo. E. Badger and Win, A. Graham. It is furthermore singular that each of them should enter the General Assembly as borough representatives in the lower House, and each held positions under two departments of the State government, Graham in the legisla tive and executive departments, and Badger in the legislative and judicial departments. Both belonged to the same profession and the same political party, served their State in the United States Senate, and filled at different times the position of Secretary of the Navy in the United States Cabinet, and both were the sons of Northern men that came to North Caro-

A Sharp Trick-A Novel Way of "Raising the Wind"-The Trick Exposed and the Guilty Party Probably Arrested, &c.

Mr. Wm. Hottendorf, of the firm of Hottendorf & Hashagen, wholesale merchants of this city, who has just arrived from a pleasure tonr in Europe, came near being victimized by one of the numerous sharpers which infest New York. It seems that on Wednesday afternoon a telegram from New York, purporting to come from Mr. Hottendorf, was received by his partner here, saying in substance:

"I leave for Philadelphia this evening.

Send me $250 at that place without fail.'

As Mr. H. had been expected to arrive home soon not the slightest suspicion was entertained that the telegram was a forgery, and so a check was obtained from the Bank of New Hanover on the Importers' and Traders' National Bank of Philadelphia for the amount, which was sent to Messrs. Matthieu & Sons, of Philadelphia, with a request from Mr. Hashagen that they should cash the check, as Mr. Hottendorf was not known there, and hand over the amount to him on his arrival. They also wrote to Mr. Hottendorf, stating that the check for the amount requested had been sent to Messrs. Mathieu & Sons, to whom he was to apply for the money. Fortunately for the firm and unfortunately for the shrewd scamp who had adopted this novel method of "raising the wind," Mr. Hottendorf arrived in this city vesterday afternoon direct from New York, not having visited Philadelphia at all, and not having had any latention of doing so. He was questioned in reference to the telegram purporting to have been sent by him and he pronounced it a forgery. A telegram was accordingly sent immediately to Messrs, Mathieu & Sons, of Philadelphia informing them of the facts in the case and requesting the arrest of the party calling for the money. Had Mr. H. arrived here one day later the author of the forged dispatch would have obtained the money without difficulty, as the letter to Mr. H., which he would have taken from the office, would have posted him as to the course to take in the remises, it being understood that Mr. Hot endorf is personally a stranger to the firm As it is, however, the fraud has no doubt been exposed in time to eucher the rascal and ensure his arrest.

This should be a warning to our business men, and make them cautious how they send money abroad on such applications.

The City Clock. The sexton of the First Presbyterian Church says complaints are made in certain quarters that he does not keep the city clock in proper order and her failure to "get on a strike" is attributed to his neglect. He as nothing at all to do with the clock, the duty of keeping it in order not coming within the province of his duties. It is great pity, however, that this useful piece of mechanism is not made to perform its functions. Let the clock speak in its own defencer (FT ( )

Heavy Storm. We learn that the heaviest thunder storm of the season visited Argyle and the region about Moss Neck, on the line of the Carolina Central railroad, on Thursday morning. The lightning struck a number of telegraph poles, shattering them to atoms, and also struck a number of trees.

No other damage as far as heard from.

THE REGATTA.

The Carolina Yacht Club-The Last Race of the Season-Wrightsville Alive with Excitement-The Retta Victorious The Prizes, &c.

The oriflamme of day rose in all its refulgent grandeur, lighting up with radiance the Sound and its charming surroundings. Owners of yachts tarried not in their dreamy couches, but inhaled the early dew. as they titivated with carnest solicitude, their beloved crafts that were once again to enter the arena-to win, or not to winand that is the absorbing question of the day. The late owner of the defeated Carolina re-Morse-fully descanted upon the cause of her unexpected failure, and his many suggestions have been duly carried into execution by her present liberal proprietor. The same care has been bestowed upon the champion Retta, who though floating in Grease, expects to add new laurels to her renown in Wrightsville Sound. In Lewis' Creek, a romantic tributary to the acqueous arena, the energetic and earnest brothers are assiduously attentive to the coquettish Little Sister, who, redressed in the most ample, nautical excess, promises to become a decided belle of the season. There is another wide awake vacht, who is also on the qui vice, and the wounded Knight of the helm intends to battle for additional honors. In truth, all contestants for success blithly work in the sunshine, and carefully re-reeve their running rigging, and inspect each strapping of the blocks, that no untimely accident may mar their prospects of success. But the brightness of the morning becomes clouded, and to the southward and eastward mutter ing thunder threatens the fortune of the day, Anxiously the ambitious yachtmen watch the scenery of the heavens, and in their anxiety become weatherwise. The chief excitement of the regatta concentrates upon the Retta and the Carolina, though every boat has its solicitous friends who are individually interested. Thus collectively there exists a pleasant excitement, which gives zest to the occasion, and renders yachting, as it should be, a source of real, genuine amusement. The threating growl, and mantle of clouds, deterred many from witnessing the regatta from the banks. But an exercise of opera glasses, with focus drawn upon each surrounding cottage, gave evidence that the dear ones were clustered in every porch, piazza and window, where the race could be distinctly observed, regardless of all weather contingences. As the hour of starting drew near, through the decreasing clouds the bright sun of the morning once again struggles to illuminate the day, and cheer up the members of the club, who had, like the zenith canopy, become darkly blue. Every yacht comes freshly painted and in fine condition for the contest. Capt. W. A. Cumming, Capt. O. A. Wiggins and R. J. Jones, Esq., the zealous judges, call attention, and Capt. Cumming cries out, in real Admiral Bevolo intonation, the name of each racer as they fly the track. One by one, off they go in quick succession, their departure being carefully noted by the standard watch held by Messrs. Jones and Bradley. Huzzah for the Retta! exclaims a cluster of Masonborians; huzzah for the Carolina re-echoes a Wrightsville crowd; and away they went, "nip and tuck," a jolly party over the oft-repeated track. All are doing well. The Little Sister, proud of her furbe lows, dashed coquettishly through the merry dance, light of foot and joyously. Our Knight of the Qui Vice, regardless of his wound, performs his devoirs at the helm, and permits no flaw of the breeze to pass without obtaining the benefit of every favorable slant. But notwithstanding the interest thus excited—Ivanhoe and Brian de Bois Gilbert-the Retta and the Carolina, absorb almost the entire attention, and the former shows her stern to the whole fleet from the first moment of departure, and this unexpected denouement continued without change during the whole race. For a time the Little Sister bore hard upon the ex-champion Carolina and threatened to leave this former water-witch of the Sound as third in the regatta. The struggle between these two yachts became the only episode of the day, and was a trial of marked interest, as the Retta seemed easily to distance the whole party, and triumphantly lead the van. With the exception of the Quit Vive, Little Sister, Carolina and the Retta, there was little to excite enthusiasm among the spectators, for a straggling race is not calculated to produce the slightest degree of favorable consideration. It behooves our gentlemen of the Yacht Club to part company with their old coaches, and, as ability permits, obtain yachts that will render the amusement more pleasurable and exciting. As the entire Yacht Club are citizens of Wilmington, would not the pleasure as well as the physical benefit of the Club be much enhanced by adding boat races on the Cape Fear, as a sequence to yachting on Wrightsville Sound? When the stores are closed and the duties of the day are over, or when the queen of night casts her merry radiance upon the jovial surface of our river, then the athletes of the Club could by one hour's daily exercise perfect themselves with the oars, and add another pleasure to the aquatic proclivities of good old Wilmington. But "Revenon. a' nos moutons"-the wind simmers down to what would be termed in naval parlance a "sky-sail breeze," hardly suffi cient to scatter the ringlets of a most fashionable belle, and this want of energy

on the part of old Albius, rendered the race more slugglish than was compatible with tience of an audience who had many miles | The Carraway Case. to travel ere the lamp light of the mystic upon the fortunes of the day.

The result as announced by the judges was as follows: 1 hour, 57 minutes. 2 hours, 30 seconds. 2 hours, 40 seconds. 2 hours, 6 min. 30 sec.

No time was recorded of the Undine, Annie, and Gazelle, which arrived next in

A loud shout from the Masonborolans proclaimed the Retta as champion of the regatta. The Curoling, under many adverse circumstances, came in second best, and to-day ceased to be queen of the waters, losing a prestige that may yet be recovered by several changes that will no doubt be resorted to ere the next race of the yacht club. When all the crafts had arrived, both swift and slow, there was a rush to the club house, when Mr. J. N. Hinton, the orator of the day, mounted the rostrum, and assuming an oratorical attitude, he thus ventilated: "Gentlemen of the Retta, victorious heroes of the race: After a successful contest, you have entered this metropolis of the banks, whose frescoed ceilings and architectural magnificence proudly smiles upon this gathered multitude; the cheering ocean echoes its salutes upon the surfbound banks, and the regatta fraternity applaud the exertions of the day. [Hear, hear, and cheers. I In my hand I hold for public view the first prize of the regatta that has been won by the indefatigable heroes of the Retta. It is a beautiful marine telescope, a nautical or astronomical instrument of peculiar import, at the present status of research and scientific expeditions. Gentlemen of the Retta, on the sand dunes of Masonboro, with the prize you have won to-day, it is only necessary to erect an observatory, and in clear, undisturbed nights cast your focus upon Jupiter, Saturn and the Moon, there to witness the gyrations of Robinson and Rice's circus, who have entered into special contracts with the proprietors of the grand graphic balloon, when the Wise men of New York shall have returned from their European tour. We congratulate you upon the wondrous facilities this successful race has placed at your disposal. Be modest and virtuous and keep the Retta well greased. Gentlemen of the Carolina, in the last race you had the misfortune to lose a tickler; but, my friends, what is a tickler without a goblet? As Moore says, "When you take a sip it will chase away the pensive tear." I ignore, though, the sincerity which concludes his couplet. In generous bumpers you can drink to your rival and toast your level best to the issue of another race."

The prizes offered were givided into two classes. Nos. 1 and 2, and are as follows: Class No. 1-A pair of opera or marine glasses, to be awarded to the fastest boat. Contended for by the Carolina and Retta.

Won by the Retta. Class No. 2-A pair of silver goblets; contested for by the remainder of the fleet. Won by the Little Sister.

There was a special prize, a set of rattan mast-hoops and a fly-staff with a silver balance arrow, offered by Mr. J. McD. French, for the fastest boat, and two other prizes by the same gentleman, an anchor, to be awarded to the slowest boat, and a pair of oars to the "next best." The Retta, of course, got the first, and the pars were awarded to the Annie, and the anchor to the Gazelle. In the sandirest ald

The prizes were received in appropriate and becoming remarks, those of Mr. Norwood Giles being interspersed with much renuine wit.

- This is the colored way of harikari about Raleigh; according to the Senti-nel of yesterday. On yesterday morning Sol. Buffaloe, a big black negro, was com mitted to the county jail, having been ar-rested for attempting to take the life of his wife, whom he suspected of infidelity. Sat-urday morning he charged it upon her and abused her in a most shameful manner. On Saturday night he appeared to be very pen-itent and desirous of making amends for his harshness in the morning. The wife was only too anxious to be restored to favor with her husband and meeting him in that spirit permitted him to take hold of her, and while pretendingly caressing her he took from his person a large butcher knife, and plunged it into her abdomen, For three days her condition was very critical and it was thought she could not live, but she is now able to sit up and hopes are entertained of her recovery.

- At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the State Agricultural Society, held in the city of Raleigh, on the 4th of September, 1873, on motion, Jordan Stone, Colonel J. M. Heck and Dr. B. F. Arrington, were appointed a committee to draft resolutions of respect to the memory of Hon. Daniel D. Barringer, who recently died at the White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia. These reported the following with a preamble, which were adopted: That this society has received with feelings of profound sadness the intelligence of the death of Hon. D. M. Barringer, of this city, whose life, during a long and distinguished public and private career, has been characterized by strict integrity, a patriotic public spirit, and an honest zeal for the welfare, prosperity and honor of his native State. That the high character which the deceased has ever maintained in the discharge of the official trusts which have been confided to his hands in the councils of the State and nation, and in the discharge of the private obligations which rested upon him as a man and as a citizen, as well as the eminent virtues which diswith a preamble, which were adopted as well as the eminent virtues which dis-tinguished him in life, are worthy of our highest admiration and emulation.
