THE CHARLESTON MOB.

Culmination of the Strike in an At tack on a Store-Other Outrages. Charleston News and Courier, of yester-PAYING ENGINE LOSSIN.

There were deeds of violence committed the strikers, or rioters, on Tuesday night, which will stand for a long time as a blot upon the fair fame of Charleston. The mob seemed to have a thorough contempt for the law and its officers, and in certain neighborhoods behaved with highhanded violence. The attack on Becker's store, of which mention was made in yesterday's paper, was a gross and unprovoked outrage. The circumstancee, as related by the victim himself, are as follows: Mr. F. W. Becker keeps a grocery store in Gadsden street, in the immediate vicinity of Hudgin's mill. On Tuesday afternoon, he says, two colored men came into his store and asked for a drink of beer. His sen, who was tending the bar, answered that he had no beer, upon which one of the ne groes knocked the boy down and attempted to push the father out of the store. They then left, threatening to come back at night and "clean out the d-d shop."

Their threats alarmed Becker, who went to a mounted policeman in the vicinity, and pointing out the men stated what they had done and threatened to do, and demanded his protec-tion. Becker says the policeman rode up to the men who were just crossing the bridge leading to the mill, and spoke a few words to them. No arrests were made. Some time after dusk the same three villains who had made the first attack returned to the store, in company with about a dozen colored men, and without any provocation, fell upon a negro who was buying groceries from Becker and beat him almost to death. They were armed with clubs and razors Becker tried to interfere to save the man's life, whereupon they set upon him. By this time the crowd retreated to the outside, and began to brickbat the store, Becker drew a pistol and fired a shot into the crowd, which, however, hit no one, and, amid a storm of brickbats, he managed to close his doors. He then ran and concealed himself from the mob, who were attering threats against his life.

The policeman who had been sent for arrived shortly afterwards, but the mob had disappeared. No arrests were made. Becker gives the names of the ringleaders of the mob as Isaac Gouldin, Jim Davis and Ba-by Holmes. Yesterday morning he kept his store closed, and went to Trial Justice Levy and obtained warrants for the arrest of the criminals. A constable and a detective officer were sent after the three ringleaders. Becker's littla son was badly cut with a razor; his show-cases and windowglasses were smashed and his stock was damaged. He will at once institute a suit against the city for dam-

About ten o'clock on Tuesday night two white men, one named Bryce, were walking quietly down Calhoun street. When they approached King street they met a crowd of the strikers who jostled them off the payement. One of them attempted to remonstrate, whereupon the crowd set upon the two men and nearly murdered them. The policeman on the beat, attracted by the noise, arrived on the scene. He found Bryce bleeding from a severe wound from a huge dirk, which had been left on the spot by the murderous villian, and the other beaten almost to death with clubs. No arrests were made.

On the same evening a crowd of twelve or thirteen strikers went into the grocery store of Wm. F. Sieling, at the corner of Lynch and Wentworth streets. They called for drinks and got them. They then asked for out each striker helped himself to a half a dozen cigars, and the crowd thereupon walked out. The proprietor very timidly suggested that he had not been paid, and was politely told to go to h—. There were no West India Molassons.

A Strange Adventure-Two Colored Women in the Act of Being Chlo-reformed. Two colored women named Louise Mitchell and Hannah O'Kane, living on Ann, between Second and Third streets, were startled from their slumbers on Wed nesday night, about 12 or 1 o'clock, by a strange visitor. They were occupying a bed together in a room in the second story, being perfectly alone in the house with the exception of a small child, both being sound asleep, when one of them was awakened by something coming in contact with her nose. She opened her eyes and raised herself in bed, when she discovered a man in a kneeling posture at the side of the bed with a small vial or bottle in his hand and at the same time she detected the scent of chloroform. She immediately screamed at the full strength of her lungs, in which laudable effort she was not slow in being joined by her companion, who had now become aware that something unusual had happened. Continuing their shouts of "murder" and "police," they both sprang from the bed Lastly, in relation to our Order as and followed the intruder down stairs. deavoring to hasten his retreat; but here he seemed determined to make a stand. C., was to have arrived here last night, armed with the necessary documents, with the view of effecting the release of Reaves and his return to the Asylum at Columbia. The father of the young man seemed to be very much distressed at the turn of affairs and it is to be hoped that by some means he may enabled to obtain the release of his son to-

ANOTHER HOMICIDE.

Man Killed by a Blow from the Fist of His Antagonist-The Neck Broken and Death Instantaneous -The Homicide Believed to Have Been Unintentional, &c., &c.

One of the saddest affairs that we have leard or read of in some time happened at small settlement in Columbia township, in this county, known as "Traveller's Rest," on Wednesday afternoon,

A party had congregated at a small store where liquor was kept for sale, and finally two men named E. J. Walker and Frank J. Malpass got into a dispute. Words ran high and at last the proprietor of the store ordered the men out. They then repaired to the street where the difficulty was renewed, resulting finally in a collision between the parties, during which Malpass struck his antagonist, Walker, a severe blow on the side of the neck. Walker immediately fell to the pavement. Malpass sprang upon his prostrate opponent and had inflicted two or three blows upon him, when his suspicions seemed to be aroused that something was the matter and he desisted. During this time Walker had shown no signs of resistance and upon close examination on the part of Malpass and the surrounding spectators they were horror-stricken to find that Walker was a corpse. No doubt is entertained, we learn, that death was caused by the blow inflicted on the neck, as deceased was not seen to move after he fell to the ground. It is supposed that the blow, which, inflicted on most any other part of the body would scarcely have been noticed, must have touched some tender, vital part of the neck, by which it was dislocated. As soon as Malpass became aware of the terrible result he was overcome with grief and remorse, declaring that he had no intention of killing Walker or causing him serious injury. The unfortunate affair is greatly to be deplored, and from what we can understand whiskey was at the bottom

Soon after the occurrence a messenger ras dispatched to this city to notify Coroner Hewlett, who left yesterday morning for the scene of the homicide, which, we learn, is about twenty miles from this city. Edward J. Walker, the victim of this terrible calamity, who is said to have been about twenty-five years of age, leaves a widow and three children to mourn his untimely fate. He was a son of Mr. J. D. Walker, formerly a well known resident of that portion of the county in which the affair occurred, and a nephew of Mr. G. F. Walker, who is also a well known and respected citizen of New Hanover. It is related as a remarkable coincidence that the father and grandfather of the deceased both met with violent deaths. We learn that Malpass made no effort to escape, but quietly surrendered himself, persisting in his declarations that the sad result was altogether unintentional on his part; and this seems to have been the general impression among those who witnessed the affair, so far as we have been able to
