The Farmers' Movement-How it is

Progressing. Let the politicians say what they please about it, the farmers' move ment is going ahead like a prairie on fire out West, whether the organizations in the East be shams or not. Several representative Missonri papers at hand speak the sentiment of that region. One says: "The necessity for that reform in political administration which the united effort of the farmers of the country, especially of the West, can alone obtain is so argent that it cannot fail to be reenguized by even the most superhead." Another-"This movement of the agricultural interests of the Fouriery has not commenced a bit too soon, and, however modest and timid may be their first action, they will soon find themselves caught up in the whirling tide of State and national politics, and will be compelled, whether they wish it or not, to consider all the grave problems now before the country.' Still another-"The farmers' war. as it is sometimes called, is destined to have a great political influence." A Nebraska paper asserts that the grangers are making rapid progress in that State. Common cause is there taken with the farmers of Iowa, Illmois, Missouri, Minnesota and other States on all questions affecting the larmers' interests. Another Western paper declares that "the whole race of dishonest politicians stands in awe of this great movement," which is no doubt the truth. A St. Paul paper says it now looks as if the "potato bags" (grangers) will prove a lively crowd in Minnesota. An Illinois paper declares "the movement to be an independent one, committed to no one and to no party, but commending itself to all." In short, there seems to be a general stampede out West in favor of the movement, regardless of religious predilections or previous political affiliations.

The Connecticut Capital Question, The people of Connecticut, at their annual town elections Monday, voted upon the Constitutional amendment making Hartford the sole capital, and gave a large majority in its favor. LUCETTE MEYERS' LAST STORY. Kate Stoddard and the Missing Roscoe the Murderers of Goodrich.

New York, Oct. 6. The Goodrich murder mystery has finally been solved, if the statement said to have been made by Mrs. Lucette Meyers, on Saturday, while confined in the Rayond Street Jail, Brooklyn, be true. The following is the substance of her story:

On Monday, March 17, she overheard Roscoe and Kate Stoddard agreeing to visit Mr. Goodrich on Thursday, and "fix matters." On that evening she warned deceased that Kate and Roscoe were plotting against him. As soon as he left she disguised herself in men's clothes and called a young man named John H. Beach to accompany her. They followed Goodrich home. Giving him time to get well in, they entered with a key she had and hid themselves. Soon they heard Kate talking angrily. She said, "This is the last time you'll have me to visit any ---," and instantly a shot was fired and a body fell heavily on the floor. Mr. Goodrich said, "Oh! don't!" and then a second shot was fired. She sprang out and saw Kate wiping the blood from the dying man. Rescoe recognized the intruder and threatened death if she informed, and she ran off. This was about two in the morning. She had met Kate and Roscoe since the marder.

English Republicans. Mr. Edward Jenkins, author of "Ging's Baby," submitted to an interview with a reporter of the Boston Post, the other day, in which he expressed his views upon English Republicanism, and other important topics connected with English politics. Questioned about some of the notable Englishmen who are now in this country, Mr. Jenkins, said that Mr. Arch, though a man of humble origin, is remarkably eloquent and able, and has a great personal influence. Of Mr. Bradlaugh he said: "I believe he is a man whose political and religious views are different from mine. He has, I believe, a great influence. Sir Charles Dilke told me that Bradlaugh had the largest personal following of any man in England. In one or two things which have come under my notice, I have certainly been struck with the gentlemanly spirit he has exhibited.

The Forty Four Million Reserve.

The forty-four millions of reserves was drawn upon on Saturday to the extent of about two and a half millions, and again to-day to the amount of about fifty-six thousand dollars. It is thought to be not improbable that the reserves will have to be again drawn upon from time to time for some weeks to come, and it is intimated in official circles that the amount of outstanding circulation will not probably be again reduced to the limit of three hundred and fifty-six millions before the meeting of Congress.

How to Strengthen the Lungs. Of all the means devised for strengthening the lungs and enlarging the chest, exercise of the voice is the best. Singing in our public schools has more than one good effect. On the whole, singing is the best exercise of the vocal apparatus, and, among this weak-chested people, should become universal. - Dio Lewis to To-day.

Coleridge says there are four kinds of readers-the hourglass, whose reading runs in and out and leaves no trace of gain; the second, like the sponge, takes everything; the third retains only refuse that some would throw away; but the fourth, like the miner among gems, keeps the pure and casts aside the clippings.

Thrilling Adventure and Narrow

Capt. Bob Davis, formerly well known in this city, but now a resident of Smithville, made a narrow escape on Monday last. He had been over to the Bald Head light house in a small boat, and was returning about 4 o'clock in the afternoon with a load of wood, when the sudden storm of wind that was so severe here struck his frail craft. Fortunately, she did not capsize, but his sail was carried away by the fury of the blast and he also lost both of his oa5s. Thus left at the mercy of the wind and waves he was fast drifting out to sea, where he must inevitably have perished, when, as luck would have it, the boat was drifted near enough to the beach at Fort Caswell for him to jump out and reach the shore in safety. Parties at Smithville had seen him when he put out from the shore on his homeward trip, and when the storm came on they became uneasy for his safety. This uneasiness increased when it was found that the boat had disappeared and a party started to the rescue. Night was coming on, however, the wind still blowing so hard that they could only carry a small portion of their jib, and they failed to discover any indication of the missing craft or its lonely occupant; whereupon they returned to Smithville and the impression became general that Capt. Davis had shared the fate of the five brave pilots who perished in a somewhat similar storm last Sudden Beath.

A young colored man by the name of Lewis Madison died very suddenly yesterday morning. He had been up very late with some of his friends, but got up at the usual hour, between 3 and 4 o'clock, and went out in the piazza. He had been there but a few moments when he was heard to cry for help. One of his companions, a young colored man by the name of James Monroe, hastened to his assistance. Madison informed him that he was about to die and appealed to him to give him something to help him. Monroe asked him what he would have and he said a dose of assafætida. A bottle of the solution was found and he took a swallow. Monroe then started for a physician, but before he had gone fifty yards the unfortunate man was a corpse.

Deceased was in the employ of Mr. A. H. VanBokkelen and lived in a house near by that gentleman's distillery. He formerly went as a deck hand on the steamer Waccamaw and came here from the Sound. Coroner Hewlett was notified of the circumstance and held an inquest over the body yesterday afternoon, the jury return-death from congestion of the lungs.

By reference to the Sheriff's books, yesterday, we find that a very large proportion of the State and county taxes for New Hanover still remain unpaid. While that officer is of a very accommodating disposition and would willingly indulge the public were it in his power, the law will compel him to resort to extreme measures very shortly, as much as he may regret such a course. Delinquents would do well, therefore, to "come up to the scrafch" at the earliest possible moment.

The Tables Turned Again. A colored woman by the name of Polly Gause was arrested yesterday on a search warrant issued at the instance of a colored individual by the name of Mack Mann. The case came up for a hearing before Justice Wm. M. Harriss, who dismissed the case at the complainant's costs. Unable to raise the "stamps" to meet this unexpected emergency, Mack was conducted to apartments in the County Jail.

A Compliment to the City Marshal. The members of the police force, at the regular hour for assembling at the Station House yesterday evening, presented City Marshal Price with a splendid gold badge as a mark of their esteem for him as an individual

R. H. Brown, of the night force, and was appropriately responded to by the Marshal. Piling Wood. In accordance with an ordinance adopted at the last meeting of the Board of Aldermen, hereafter the piling of wood on the wharves foot of Dock, Market and Princess streets is strictly prohibited. It can be, however, piled on other wharves with cer-

Attempted Robbery.

When the Messrs. Shrier Bros., on Market street, went to their store vesterday morning they were somewhat startled to find that an attempt, which proved very nearly successful, had been made during the night to enter their establishment for the purpose of robbery. The attempt was ments used by the thieves were discovered. ing the keeper took him over to Smithville | These consisted of two chisels and a butchers "steel." The facing of the door had been prized loose and the "steel," which had been used as a prize, was found sticking in the crevice between the facing and door-post. The two chisels were found resting under the edge of the door, but one of them had been used to loosen the "catch" of the door so that it could be forced open. This they would no doubt have accomplished but for the fact that they must have been suddenly frightened from their undertaking by some means or other which is not now understood. In fact, there is every reason to believe that with ten minutes more labor they would have effected an entrance. It is very fortunate for the proprietors that the attempt was a failure, as a quantity of their most valuable clothing was on the counter near the door. They have now made their door secure against any successful attempt of a like character in the future, and we would warn others to do like-

The Opera House. A very large audience assembled at the Opera House last night to witness the first appearance (this season) of Wyman, the well-known ventriloquist and wizard. It was evident that they came expecting something very entertaining, knowing the Professor of old, and in this they were not disappointed. Frequent applause and loud laughter testified their appreciation of the wonderful feats of magic and the comical ing a verdict that deceased came to his results of the Professor's extraordinary powers of ventriloquism. Not the least entertaining feature of the occasion was the distribution of prizes and each holder of a lucky ticket was greeted with applause. Mr. F. Combs was the winner of the handsome ladies' watch.

More Trouble at the Opera House, We regret to learn that another attempt was made last night, by a party of young colored men, to force their way into the parquette at the Opera House, during the performance of Prot. Wyman. In this purpose, however, they failed, and with the assistance of Mayor Canaday, together with a squad of policemen, order was finally restored. We are satisfied that this action on the part of the persons implicated does not meet with the encouragement of the masses of our colored population, and we hope they will use their influence to prevent any more such disgraceful proceedings. The audience, we learn, with a few exceptions, knew nothing of the disturbance while it was going on and were consequently not annoved by it.

The Great Eastern.

We notice from our State exchanges that wherever Colonel Haight pitches his several tents, the people flock by thousands to witness the wonders of the Great . Eastern Circus and Menagerie. Look out for the grand street parade and remember the day and date-Wednesday, 15th.

The Rivered Jak desoft in Steamboatmen report about eight feet of water on the shoals at Fayetteville, which renders this river in good boating order. In fact we learn that there has hardly been a time within the past twenty years when the boating condition of the river has been so uniformly good as it has been this season. I

Rosin and Naval Stores. We learn that there is a large amount of rosin and other naval stores along the Cape Fear, which is being held back for better prices and an easier condition of the money market. At one point we hear there is at least 25,000 or 30,000 barrels of rosin and at another nearly or quite as much.

The cotton crop in most sections of the county where the staple has been planted has been cut short very materially by the cotton worm and the continued excessive rains of the last month or so.
