AN ILLINOIS TRAGEDY.

Mysterious Murder Near Champaign, (Champaign Ill. Union, Oct. 30.)

On Friday last, a young man named William Harrison, about 17 years of age, went out squirrel-hunting in the timber east of the old fair-grounds. Night-time came, and he failed to return. This caused his parents much uneasiness, yet they were reassured by neighbors, who deemed it most probable that the boy, being unacquainted with the woods, had got lost, and would find his way to some house, stay all night, and return in the morning. But morning came, and the absent one returned not. Search was instituted. A couple of neighbors' children started out into the grove, and after wandering about for a while, met two little boys, who asked them if they had seen that dead man down there, pointing to a short distance beyond. They went and found the object of the search—or, rather, the lifeless body of their former comrade. He was seated in the center of a little open space of the underbrush and trees, upon the skull-bones of a hog. In his left hand was grasped a squirrel, around which he had tied a string, and which he was evidently attaching to the button-hole of his coat, when the murderous shot struck him. The shot entered the back part of his neck, at a point corresponding with the two first joints of the vertebral column, breaking the neck and causing instant death. So quickly was life extinct that not a struggle or spasm of a single muscle was made, save the closing of the hands; the body reclined over upon the left side, and thus he was found. His gun, which was quite a valuable one, was gone, and it was supposed to be carried away by the murderer.

The body was removed to Urbana, and Judge Tebbrock, in the absence of the Coroner, called a jury and held an inquest thereon, on Saturday night, Dr. Allen making a post mortem examination. The evidence in the inquest developed only the facts above stated, and the verdict was that the deceased came to his death by a gunshot from some unknown hand. And thus the matter remains a profound mystery to all save the wretch who committed the terrible act. That it was accidentally done by himself, is placed beyond the range of a possibility, by the location of the fatal shot and the position in which the body was found; and, too, the absence of the gun has to be accounted for. It is evident that the murderer crept slyly and cautiously up to within a very short distance of his unsuspecting victim, as he sat in that lonely little glade, placed his gun on a level with the sitting posture, and fired the fatal shot. What the motive of the awful deed was cannot even be conjectured.

A Russian Love Tragedy.
There are social tragedies that often transcend in depth of pathos the imagination of fiction. Yet skillfully wrought up by the novelist, with all the causes that led up to them, all the minutest agencies that surround them, all the despairing accessories that add gloom to the act, they fascinate many of us; while in real life they happen, are told boldly in a few words, and forgotten. Here is one from a Russian paper. A young girl and young man, living near Moscow, were betrothed. The girl was of great beauty, the lover was the son of rich parents, and on her birthday obtained leave to celebrate it with festivities to be given at her father's house. The first evening at dinner the young man drank deeply, and became intoxicated, when his conduct was so violent that the guests all retired, and he was with difficulty conveyed to his father's house. The next day, however, he presented himself at the ball which he had arranged, and danced with his betrothed. When the dance was ended the young lady requested the band to play a favorite air, and retired alone to the balcony, whence immediately afterwards was heard the sound of firearms, and the unhappy girl was found to have shot herself through the heart with a revolver she had concealed. A letter found upon her assigned the discovery of her intended husband's brutal nature as the motive for her fatal act.

The Concord Sun understands a gentleman in Cabarrus county made 800 bushels of sweet potatoes from one acre of ground.

GEORGIA.

Press Convention in Columbus.
Columbus Council will devote $100,000 to water works. Muscogee (Columbus) factory works three-fourths time. The gin house of Mr. W. C. Garner, of Putnam county, was burned on Wednesday or Thursday last, together with forty bales of cotton. Forty-four grangers in Georgia report 64,800 acres in cotton and yield 20,378 bales, or an average of a bale to three and a half acres. They also report 46,091 acres in corn; probable yield 422,008, or an average of nine bushels per acre.

The Thomson Herald announces the suspension of James M. Dallas, the largest planter in Upson county, and says Mr. Cid Brooks, the next largest, is on the verge of suspension. The Herald, in a later paragraph, says: "The strong arm of Cid Brooks has suspended. Other minor farmers have given notice of their suspensions. Upson county is in a general tumult."

Among other customs enforced by Persian etiquette (says a contemporary) is a rule that, where a superior dines with an inferior the latter brings in the first dish himself—a practice not without precedent at Western courts. The bringing in of a dish is, however, in Persia no light undertaking, and requires considerable skill, strength and practice, for the manner in which the operation is to be performed is, especially at court, strictly prescribed. The dish or tray must be held at arm's length, carried perfectly horizontal, and deposited precisely in the right place at once. Some ludicrous stories are related about this practice. One old gentleman with a magnificent beard had to bring in a large tray containing several dishes, and place it in front of the Shah. The tray was heavy, the bearer feeble, and, to make matters worse, just as he was about to deposit it, a candle, which he had not observed, set fire to his magnificent beard. For a moment he was in a state of the utmost perplexity. To put down the tray elsewhere than in its appointed place—an operation which required some deliberation—was out of the question. To allow his cherished beard to be consumed was also impossible. He was equal to the occasion, and, plunging his flaming beard into a dish of eardrops which stood on the tray, he calmly completed his task, amidst the applause and amusement of the beholders.

The Ohio Constitutional Convention, it is presumed, will submit the result of its labors for the adoption of the people on the first day of April next. The new Constitution will re-district the State and provide for a new Legislature and State officers, to be elected next October.

A writ of habeas corpus in the case of Olie Beeton, the alleged child murderer, is likely to be issued.

U. S. MARSHAL COURT.

Before this tribunal yesterday the day was occupied in the consideration of the cases of Wm. Woodberry, and Taylor Evans, colored, charged with mail robbery. The evidence in this case was almost entirely of a circumstantial character, and Foremaster Brink, who devoted his attention to working it up and bringing it to a successful issue, deserves much credit for his efforts in behalf of the department. The circumstances of the case as we gather them are as follows: The letter which Woodberry was charged with abstracting from the postoffice was mailed at Philadelphia on the 21st of April, 1873, and contained a check for $100, made payable to Mr. J. D. Adams, then doing business in this city. On the 22nd of April, just two days afterwards, the check alluded to was found in the possession of Woodberry, who undertook to negotiate the same with Gen. S. H. Manning for goods. Gen. Manning had his suspicions aroused that Woodberry had become possessed of the check wrongfully and retained it in his hands. Thereupon Woodberry, at the instance of one Taylor Evans, went before Justice Wm. H. Merrick and got out a warrant against Gen. Manning for forcible trespass in withholding the check, upon which he was convicted. In the trial Justice Merrick called for the check in evidence under the promise to hand it back after the trial. Instead of doing so, however, as it appeared in evidence he took it to the Freedmen's Savings Bank, and asked the cashier to pay him the money for it. The cashier refused to cash the check and it was left there for collection. Payment of the check had, in the meantime, been stopped in Philadelphia. Before Justice Merrick, Woodberry claimed to have received the check from Capt. R. B. Padgett for services, and introduced Taylor Evans as a witness to prove that he did get it from Capt. Padgett. Upon that testimony Col. Brink got out a warrant against Wm. Woodberry and Taylor Evans, for perjury, upon which an examination was had before Justice J. J. Casaday, who bound them over to the Superior Court. Col. Brink then went to the District Attorney and got him to draw up a bill of indictment for mail robbery against both of the parties, Woodberry as principal and Evans as accessory, and a true bill was found against them. At the request of the Superior Court Woodberry was convicted of perjury in connection with the case and Evans was acquitted. Judgment was suspended as to Woodberry and he was held to appear at the present term of the United States District Court.

District Attorney Badger conducted the prosecution and Messrs. Jas. C. McRae and Alex. T. London, being assigned by the Court, appeared for the defense.

The jury, after a short absence, returned a verdict of guilty as to Wm. Woodberry and not guilty as to Taylor Evans. Judgment in Woodberry's case will be pronounced this morning.

Several bankruptcy cases yet remain to be disposed of, which will probably take up the greater part of to-day.

Munson, R. C. Myers, E. Peachau, G. A. Peck, and Alex. Strause.

More Sack Thieving.

Some thief entered the private boarding house of Col. E. D. Hall on Front, between Princess and Chestnut streets, on Tuesday evening, and stripped the rack in the hall of all the hats and caps it contained, several in number, and made good his escape with them. This daring robbery was committed early in the evening, when all the family were congregated in the parlor. We cannot, in view of the frequent occurrences of such robberies, too earnestly impress upon the minds of our citizens the importance of caution. Every body should be on the alert for such visitors and give them no opportunities to succeed in their thievish propensities.

After the Officeholders.

It is understood that the object of "Col. Geo. M. Arnold's" visit to his old "stamping-ground" is for the purpose of agitating the question of a "recognition of colored men under the Federal Government in the distribution of patronage," and he intimates we learn, that he is fixing up a job now that will result in making a few openings in that direction. The "true and tried Republicans" of the white persuasion are advised to stand firm under, as Arnold expects to locate here again and open his batteries in earnest. What he will accomplish remains to be seen, but we can count on lively times in the camp of the "truly loyal."

To the Postmistress and Work Women.
The following are among the convictions at the late term of the Superior Court, for whom commitments were issued to Sheriff Black yesterday:
