THE QUESTION OF MORE CUR-RENCY.

As this journal has repeatedly said, an issue of more currency by the Government is what is needed to set the country right. If we can't get inflation we will take the next best thing to inflation that offers. We are opposed to any scheme that proposes to contract the volume of the currency. The country does not want specie payments half as much as it wants more money to carry on its business.

We are not prepared to endorse fully any of the schemes before Congress for easing the condition of the industrial interests. None that we have seen goes anything like far enough. Perhaps, if nothing better is offered, Mr. Kelley's proposition for a temporary loan bearing a low rate of interest in currency, and re deemable in United States notes, would do something for the betterment of business. One thing is evident: we of the South are unalterably opposed to increased taxation for the purpose of meeting the increasing expenses of the Government under the present Administration. We believe with Mr. Holman and the New York Herald that the Government should cut down its expenses. There is the source of much of the evil we suffer in common with the whole country. We are eaten up by the ravenous hordes of office-holders who batten on the spoils legitimate and illegitimate of their places. Let us have a cleaning out of the Augean stables, and let the reform extend from lowest to highest. But if any other measure than this be deemed necessary to supply the land with currency let a loan be made, if the better pollcy of a new issue cannot prevail. The South would more gladly welcome the latter than any other measure of relief. She is opposed to contraction under any and all circumstances, and she is equally averse to the proposition of Secretary Richardson to tax certain luxuries and necessaries for the purpose of increasing the revenue that thieves and their companions may have a good time. A LITTLE FELLOW'S PETITION. One of those beautiful stories that seem to illuminate all the society whence they spring and to give a hale to life itself comes to us from the great metropolis. In that vast, pulsing city, with its innumerable arteries of business and social life, its glitter, its wretchedness, there are so many studies for the contemplative observer that the little under-scenes of misery and woe hidden in garrets or cellars will escape the attention they deserve, unless the eye is wary and the heart unusually soft. Not all of earth's fierce woe is breathed out in fumes of liquor or the shadow of the pestilence. The gutter exposes not the human heart's worst infirmities, nor do charnel house and potter's field cover up the deepest life anguish in the surcease of pain they offer. Wherever the language of the soul's struggles and aspirings-its weepings, its wrecked hopes bravely borne, its dying in life and living in death-is spoken, there the tragic death of the little Italian musician will touch a pure-toned, teuder chord A violinist | have married at all. of very tender years and supereminent gifts even for his nation, his little life poured forth in melody, his heart beating in divine symphonies, | boats attempting to prevent his be-

William Allen, Governor of Ohio. [From the Cincinnati Commercial.] William Allen was born in Edenton, Chowan county, at the head of Albemarle Sound, North Carolina, in the year 1807, and is now sixty-seven years of age-more than one year the junior of Judge Swayne, of the Supreme Court. He was by the death of both father and mother left an orphan in his infancy. His parents were tion. poor.

Allen's sister, elder by many years than he, was married to pleasant Thurman, and they were living at Lynchburg, Va., where their only son. Allen G. Thurman, was born. They had, I think, three daughters, but one of whom is living. Pleasant Thurman had been originally possessed of means, but by becoming surety was rendered poor. He was not a man of more than ordinary intellect or ener gy, but he was still "the noblest work of God-an honest man." This reputation he bore through life, and has left behind him as an inheritance to his children and a remembrance to others. He lived and died a member and exhorter of the Methodist Church. To Mrs. Thurman both her brother and son are more indebted than to any other person for their advancement in the world. When the son Allen G. was but that he was either intoxicated or had four years old his father and mother not recovered from the effects of some removed from Lynchburg, Va., to Chillicothe, Ohio, where they resided until their death, and where the son lived until his election to the Supreme Bench in 1852. William Allen remained at Lynchburg, supporting himself, working, I believe, as a sadler's apprentice, until he was about sixteen years of age. He then collected together his worldly goods, tied them in a handkerchief, and set out on foot to seek the home of his sister in Ohio. After taking up his residence in Chillicothe, at which place he has ever since resided, young Allen was by his sister placed in the old Chillicothe Academy, where he received his only real instruction from a teacher. Allen's sister, Mrs. Thurman, selected and supervised his general reading. In this he considers that he derived the greatest advantage. Shortly after his election to the Senate Mr. Allen married Mrs. Effie Coons, formerly McArthur, the beautiful and accomplished daughter of General Duncan McArthur-hisearly, true and only love, she chose Allen from among a host of distinguished suitors from several States. She inherited the old homestead and farm, where Allen, having added many acres to the latter, still, with his daughter (Mrs. Scott), her husband, and their children and his grand-8878: children, resides. It is well known that prior to her first marriage she and Mr. Allen were devoted to each other, and while her father, Governor McArthur, was not personally unfriendly to Mr. Allen, yet their opposition in politics and strong positive

Judge Durell. Notwithstanding the secrecy with which the investigation of Judge Durell, of Louisiana, has been conducted, the New Orleans papers have gathered sufficient of the evidence to show the very dirty character of the ermine which that functionary is wearing. An ex-Judge of the Supreme Court of the United States, an ex-Chief Justice of the State, several members of the Bar, and leading citizens testified to his too free use of intoxicating spirits, both on and off the Bench. There was positive evidence that he had been drunk on the streets and in the streetcars, and that he had more than once so demeaned himself upon the Bench that his conduct could not be explained, except upon the hypothesis recent debauch. There were many leading members of the Bar who testified that his conduct on the Bench was violent and insulting, and on the occasion of a certain trial Judge John A. Campbell, who appeared in the case, was denounced by him as a hoary-headed rebel, who ought to be hung. The evidence in regard to his administration of the bankrupt law was of such a character that one of the Committee exclaims, "My God! how could any people submit to such extortions?" The answer to which is, that they have been compelled to submit to it, just as they have been compelled to submit to the recent indignity imposed upon them by Gov. Kellogg, in granting the use of the House of Representatives for a Cyprians' ball, and numerous other official outrages. In regard to this charge it was shown that there was no conceivable oppression of parties involved in bankruptcy proceedings which had not been practised by the general Assignee, and that the latter exercised such an influence over Durell that it was impossible to obtain from him any relief from these persecutions.

Concert at Midnight.

The Hartford Times of Friday last Theodore Thomas was announced to give a concert in Waterbury last night. The company, about seventy in number, left New York on the noon train. On arriving at Bridgeport they found that owing to the washing away of several bridges by the flood on the Naugatuck railroad they would be unable to reach Waterbury by that route. They dined and talked over the situation, and then took the train via New Haven to Berlin; thence they went by branck road to New Britain,

Here they obtained a special train for Waterbury. All went well until the train reached Terryville. There it was found that a heavily-laden train had got off the track. A special train came out from Waterbury to find them, and eventually the company arrived in Waterbury at a time when the concert should have been over. Proceeding to the hall, where there was yet a patient and goodly andience, the company, with swallow-tailed coats and white cravats, began. It was a fine one, and was Allen's vocal organization is a mar-el.
