

CONNECTICUT.

The victory won over Radicalism in Connecticut on the 6th inst., is one that carries joy to the heart of every true lover of the law and the constitation but its real significance is liable to be misinterpreted. We therefore print the annexed extracts from two of the leading Democratic

papers of the State:

[New Haven Register.] The Administration was forced into the canvass; the people have repudiated the party of the Administration. Hundreds of Republicans, men who have acted with the Republican party from the start, voted on Monday the Democratic ticket for the first time. This is a victory for the Liberal Democracy, and they now have it in their power to control the State from this time forward.

[Hartford Times.]

We do not claim this sweeping and alto-gether unparalleled result in Connecticut as a mere Democratic triumph. It is indeed something far more significant than any mere party success. It partakes largely of that impressive character which necessarily belongs to any general and deeply earnest movement of a great people, who after long endurance arise at last in their might, and willingly sacrifice all minor considerations of party, in the one strong purpose of res-cuing their country from shame, and re-storing the Government to honest hands. This extraordinary and overwhelming result in Connecticut expresses just that feel-ing; and it could never have been brought about by any one party alone.

THE GERMAN VOTE LOST TO THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

For two years the leaven of discontent has been working among the Republican Germans in the West. The ascendancy of the Republican party has been maintained chiefly by the German vote in the States of Ohio, Illinois, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa and Minnesota. The elections in these States last year were all adverse to the Republicans. The municipal elections in Ohio last week demonstrated the utter weakness in the Northwest of the party of Butler and Sanborn. But a few years ago all the cities and large towns in that great State were controlled by Republican officials. To-day the Liberal Democracy and Reformers have control of every city in the commonwealth.

Or the Trouble a Man Got Himself, Into. [Chicago Tribune.] A prominent merchant in St. Joseph, Mo., J. B. Johnson, Esq., has got himself into trouble, the Postmaster of St. Joseph into trouble, the Postmaster of Chicago into trouble, and the Government of the United States into trouble; all growing out of a bit of pasteboard with some writing on it. Some weeks ago, Mr. Johnson, having occasion to order goods from Chicago, posted a label about the size of a postage-stamp bearing his business address on the postalcard. The Chicago correspondent received the card in due time, but had to pay 6 cents extra postage, and so notified Mr. Johnson. As the latter had been in the habit of posting these labels for some time and had never before been called upon for extra postage, he consulted the Postmaster of St. Joseph, Mr. Arnholt, about t. The latter authority informed him that he had a right to label the cards and could continue to do so with safely, unless the cards were going to Chicago, whose Postmaster didn't un-derstand the law. Thereupon, in a happy frame of mind, Mr. Johnson addressed a card to the Chicago house in his best handwriting, and with a feeling of exultation triamphantly and m a bold hand wrote these words: "Our Postmaster says your Postmaster is an ass." The Chicago Postmas ter forwarded the obnoxious postalcard to Washington. Mr. Creswell put on his spectacles and read the St. Joseph Postmaster's pithy opinion of the Chicago Postmaster. The result of the reading was a postal-card from Mr. Creswell to the St. Joseph Postmaster which nearly lifted the latter functionary out of his boots, and made him realize, as he had never done before, how frail the tenure of a postoffice may be. Thereupon the Postmaster called upon Johnson, and informed him that he had never said the Postmaster of Chicago was an ass. Mr. Johnson brushed up bis memory, and, after a while, concluded that he was mistaken in the language used, and gave his Postmaster a statement to that effect. This relieved the Postmaster. He forwarded the statement to Mr. Creswell, and once more felt secure in his office. But it did not end here, for on Thursday last an order came for the arrest of Mr. Johnson for using scurrilous

MR. HUNTER.

No false pride prevented Hon. R. M. T. Hunter from accepting the position of Treasurer of Virginia. Once a leader in the Senate of the United States, Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Confederate Senate, in every situation and at all times a sage and a statesman, he goes forth from his honored retirement into the service of his State in a comparatively humble capacity. The experience of Mr. Hunter will be worth much to the financial department of the Virginia government in its present unfortunate derangement. The extrication of the old Commonwealth from present embarrassment by this able veteran of finance will entitle him to the United States Senatorship.

The good news reaches us that the provisions sent by the British Government will be more than sufficient to stop the dreadful famipe which has prevailed in India for some time.

Covenant of Peace Between Hill and Toombs.

An Atlanta letter writer says:

An incident occurred at the supper given ex-Governor Vance the other evening which is exciting much comment and speculation, especially among political outlookers. Among the guests present were Gen, Toombs and Hou. B. H. Hill, who for a long series of years have been at daggers drawn. During the progress of the evening it is said that Gen. Toombs arose from his seat and remarked: "Mr. Hill, I have always believed you to be a --- scoundret, but recent hot bricks, that they are the best of ail known substitutes for a husband, impression, and i trust that henceforth our association may be both friendly and profitable." This little in their sleep nor kick off the bedspeech has been the means of bringing into notice and remark the seeming friendly intercourse between the two gentlemen.

Since and before the delivery of this overture of peace and good will General Toombs and Mr. Hill have the size of a postage-stamp, the St. mometer is down to three degrees Joseph merchant got into a difficulty with the St. Joseph Postmaster and the Chicago Postmaster got the St. Joseph Postmaster into trouble with the Government, and has got himself into a tight place, in which he may have to pay from $100 to $1,000, or go to jail and stay from one year to ten years, before he can extricate himself. He has written a card to the St. Joseph Gazette, in which he says:

"When Shakspeare made the illustrious Dogberry say, "Write me down an ass," he was in blissful ignorance that such language was "ob scene and scurrilous." That discovery was reserved for the genius who presides over the Post-Office at Chicago Webster defines the term ass, "a dull heavy, stupid fellow; a dolt." Worcester and other lexicographers give almost identically the same definition. In such a sense it is used by the best English writers. Such is the sense in which I used the expression, as the connection clearly shows."

In what sense, Websterian, Worcesterian, Dogberryan, or Johnstonian, the St. Joseph merchant called the Chicago Postmaster an ass, it now behooves him to show or pay the penalty. Meanwhile, let us all be thankful that the Government exercises such watchful care over its children, and that none of them can be called asses on postal-cards with impunity. Least of all will it allow one of its Postmasters to receive a longeared compliment of this sort without making the sender pay handsomely for the compliment.

The Anthony and Her Hot Bricks. The Detroit Free Press says: "The season is getting so far advanced that Susan B. Anthony can get along without hot bricks, and she ought to make a reduction in prices." We have more than once, says the wicked Courier-Journal, had occasion to remonstrate with the Free Press for talking to promiscuous crowds about Susan's hot bricks, which are none of the F. P.'s business. And here let us remark, in extennation of the use of for they never get drunk and go to bed with their boots on, never snore clothes; and if a button is missed from their shirts in the morning they make no fuss about it. above zero. What Zaccheus Did.

[N. Y. Letter to Chicago Times.] A story is told of a certain newspaper proprietor who relieved his dishonesty by a spice of humor.

The agent of a large manufacturing house went to him to protest against frequent assaults in the editorial columns. "What the devil is the matter?"

asked the latter. "All you say is an infernal lie. But then we feel that we can't afford to have this thing go on. What shall we do to stop it?" The proprietor appeared abstracted for a sew moments, and then remarked: "I was thinking about a character in the Bible. Let me see! His name was-was Zaccheus. What did he do? Oh, yes; he climbed a tree to see the Lord; and he didn't see him either. What did he do then? Do you remember, Mr. Agent, what he did then?" B.

"He came down, I suppose." "Ah, yes!-thank you-that's it! He came down, sensibe fellow; he came down." The parable was fitting. The agent imitated the example of Zaccheus and Gearing and Shafting, and Saw Mills, Griet Mills and Grates for burning Spent Tar unleached and leached bark; road Frogs, Chairs, &c. the journalistic batteries were instantaneously spiked.

There is no dying principle in nature, for nature throughout is unmixed with life, when, concealed behind the old, begins again and develops itself.
