WILMINGTON, N. C .: WEDNESDAY MORNING, Jan. 20, 1875.

THE LORDLY WILLIAMS BEFORE THE SUPREME COURT.

We are known to be fond of the Attorney General and proud of his brilliant attainments as lawyer, statesman and conqueror of the helpless, to whom he administers justice with the soothing amiability of a Draco and by the suasive instrumentalities of a Marat. Mr. Williams has been before the Supreme Court lately, having found time from his diversions in Louisiana, and it is needless to say Mr. Williams has made a record. Mr. Williams has always made a record everywhere he has ever been and in everything he has ever touched. Mr. Williams, like some of the smaller Republicans, Grant and Logan for instance, believes in making records. Usually, we will do the Attorney General the justice to say, his records have been consistent in audacity, harrowing to the soul and deplored by his comrades, while Grant and Logan have startled and amused by turns as they would perform feats on the political trapeze-to-day a Democrat, to-morrow a Republican; to-day seeing the South in smiles, all peacemorrow in wrath all storms, according as they looked through Democratic or Republican spectacles. Mr. Williams is the incarnation of diabolism all the time. The same imperturbable devil morning, noon and night is Mr. Williams. Whether he is ever afraid of popular sentiment we do not know .-He has Gen. Sheridan, who says he is "not afraid," between himself and danger. The Attorney General ought to be pretty safe behind such a

"a great god of war"

as P. H. Sheridan. Afraid or not, Mr. Williams appeared before the Supreme Court at Washington last week in a "hold soger" sort of way that did us and the rest of his admirers very proud. It was the case of the United States vs. Hiram Resse and Matthew Fanshel an appeal from the United States Circuit Court for Kentucky. The parties named were inspectors of a municipal election held in Lexington, Kentucky, on January 30, 1873, and the vote of a negro who was unable to produce evidence that he had paid the capitation tax. They were indicted on a charge of violation of the enforcement act of May 31, 1870, and on a demurrer to each count of the indictment, the United States Circuit and District Judges being divided in opinion, the case was certified to the ish case, it involves the constitution- says: ality of the enforcement act .-The argument was listened to by a great number of leading jurists who were highly entertained of course by Raleigh, oppose, by a very considerable majority, the proposition to call a Conventhe lofty erudition of the law officer of the Government. It was certainly well for those men to have been there. Mr. Williams' mighty reputation and than in other men; but one of their fundahis well-known confidential relations with the President made it especially incumbent on learned gentlemen and the rest of mankind to pay heed to the words that fell from lips so sacred. A great and venerable name always commands attention in that court .-So does Mr. Williams. The case was ably argued for the defendants by ex-Attorney General Stanbery and Mr. Buckner, and was argued for the United States by the Attorney General and the Solicitor General. This functionary is our Mr. Samuel F. Phillips, himself no mean lawyer, whatever his political views and associations. Mr. Williams announced to the court with great vehemence that State rights were nothing but a breath that had passed out of existence. He said that it would be impossible for the Union to exist without a strong central government in Washington, and if his words, addressed directly to the court, meant anything, they meant that that tribunal had no right to undertake to pass in review any of the political legislation of Congress.

Bravo! He beards the venerable judicial lions in their very den. Transcendent valor! Mighty man!

The law officer intimated to the court that it would be a very serious thing for it to assume to curb in any respect the will of Congress as to what was appropriate legislation under the recent amendments. He said that in only a very few instances had the Supreme Court reversed the action of Congress. The argument addressed to the court was similar in spirit, if not precisely in form, to that he addresses to the Louislanians whenever they insist on considering themselves free of stark, utter and hard-visaged despotism. And this to the Supreme Court, over which a Marshall and a Taney once presided-a tribune at once awful in its dignity and inflexible, and stern, though just and impartial, in its decrees! Descensus averni facilis est.

DISCUSSION ON THE CONVENTION

QUESTION. The consideration of the Conven tion question has developed greater difference of opinion among Conservatives than any discussion that has arisen since the winter of 1860-'61. The very fact that there is a division of sentiment ought of itself to table the whole matter until such time as the press and people can agree on a policy. This we have time and again urged. The Conventionists have pursued a course that will end, we fear, in disaster, sooner or later; that is, if they succeed in passing a bill throughthe Legislature at this session.

We are glad the discussion is about to conclude. It has not done the Democratic Conservative party any good, but rather the reverse. Opposition to the proposed policy among the people is stronger to-day than it was last September. We mean, those who are hostile to the measure are now more firmly set in their opposition. There is no reason at this moment to hope for unanimity. So far as this journal is concerned every effort will be made to hold the party and true people of the State together. The fact, however, that all zeslous newspapers and citizens will subordinate private opinion to the general welfare of State and party, prefering in an emergency to surrender wellgrounded convictions of right and policy rather than by standing out to engulf all in perhaps irremediable ruin, should not encourage those who are over-eager in the Convention cause to push the matter to desperation. There are many Conservatives who do not take a broad view of the question, and who will not vote at all in an election for delegates.

Let this fact warn the Legislature against precipitate action. If there be found, as we allege on just grounds, that there is considerable, opposition to the measure, let it be abandoned. It is better to hart the feelings of some urgent gentlemen than to jeopardize the rule of the Conservative party and thereby pave the way for on that occasion refused to receive the return of the thieving party we kicked out in 1870.

THE PEOPLE OPPOSED TO COM

As sustaining our position that the people are not prepared for a Convention at this time, and indeed are opposed to it, we quote from a long article in the last number of the Fayetteville Gazette, a carefully-edited Supreme Court. Like the Grant par- and reliable newspaper. The Gazette

> "We are very hopeful that, should the members of the General Assembly consult the plain and unmistakable wishes of their constituents, they will, on their return to tion. That they will thus do justice and pay respect to the opinions of those who sent them to the Legislature, we do not doubt. We believe in independence of thought and action in legislators no less mental duties is to represent faithfully, in the State halls of council, the views of those who, by their votes at the ballot-box, have > entrusted to them office and position. "Hence we are sanguine, as we said in the outset, that many members of the Legislature will return to Raleigh with changed ideas touching this important matter, and that numbers who went home for the Christmas holidays, favoring Convention, will go back to their places in the General Assembly feeling it their duty-no matter what may be their own inclination—to vote against the Convention call, in justice to the people whom they represent."

This much in general terms. But the Gazette gives the result of its own efforts to obtain information. It goes on to say:

"We are more than ever inclined to trust he accuracy of the statement which we have repeatedly made: that a large majority of the voters of North Carolina are opposed to convention. We have pretty thoroughly canvassed Cumberland, Sampson, a part of Robeson, Moore and Harnett on this subect, and have received by letter very strong evidence from Richmond and Montgomery, and, relying upon the information thus gathered, we confidently express the opinion that in the counties above named at least two-thirds of the people are with us in this matter. We think from so large a section we can form an opinion of the general sentiment of the State."

Returning to discussion: "We are told by several papers that the measure is gaining ground, and that the masses only need to be informed, to bring them into a warm support of the proposi-tion. 'The masses,' if you please, are not so uninformed as many would have us believe: North Carolina voters are an intelligent class, knowing, thoroughly, their own wants, and abundantly able to decide as to what is best for their own interests." We give these statements and views of our Fayetteville contemporary, not without the hope that the voice of reason and patriotism will be potent at the last hour to save the State from harm and the Conservative party from demoralization.

THAT THIRD TERM EXPECTA-

in relation to personal and political topics. In the course of the conversation the subject of Mexico was introduced, and the Senator expressed the opinion that there is no possibility of the mineral riches of that country being properly developed under Mexican rule. He thought, however, it would not be long before the northern provinces at least would belong to the United States, for Grant, he said, warmly favored their annexation, "and would in all likelihood inaugurate some policy to that end before the close of the Administration.' On this the New York Sun remarks: "There have been reports in circulation for some time that Grant entertains a project for the acquisition of a portion of Mexico, though we do not know that it has before been plainly spoken of by any one having as confidential relations with the President as the Nevada Senator. The general impression has been that the scheme was to be held in reserve as a final stroke for the third term, when, if it should be deemed necessary, it would be easy to invent a pretext for involving this country in a war with the neighboring republic, which is so rich in silver but so poor in such men as are used for Senatorial timber in Nevada."

We hope this final stroke for the third term will meet with the same good fortune that "all of us" met with in Louisiana.

I have not been able to join in the debate of the last week or ten days, but the people of the South have been so maligned that really I think as a matter of courtesy the Senate ought to allow every Southern Senator who desires to speak an opportunity to be heard. They know more about this matter than anybody else. I hope the Senator from Maine will not press his motion.

Mr. Ransom-I desire to say to the Senate that I trust the request of the Senator from Virginia will be acceded to, that after the appropriation bill of the Senator from Maine has been passed by the Senate this debate will be resumed.
