Not Dead, But Sleepeth.

Such was the case with an individual that lay stretched out apparently lifeless, on the summit of Sun Set Hill, on Tuesday evening about dusk. Several persons gathered around and their sympathetic hearts were bewailing the sad misfortune that had caused the untimely end of a fellow being in such a lonely place and without loving hands to care him in his dying moments and close the lids over his lustrous eyes.

Found Dead.

A colored boy yesterday, while driving cows in the woods near Market street road, in the vicinity of Mr. Thomas Monk's place, discovered the body of a colored infant lying in the bushes. The body was entirely destitute of clothing and was slightly embedded in the sand, and covered over by brush and straw.

Captured the Rabbit.

A party of young white men went out a day or two ago (not Sunday) for the purpose of having some sport. They were of course duly accompanied with fire-arms and supplied with requisite ammunition, and having arrived over to Eagle Island they attacked a very small plot of ground which was surrounded by water, as their attention had been attracted to that spot, and succeeded in capturing twenty-seven rabbits, all of which they brought home in triumph.
