THE NEW SENSATION—The Female Minstrels and the Can-Can.

Under this head the Savannah Morning News thus comments on the appearance in that city of the "new sensation," by which our play-goers may be enabled to judge for themselves whether it will be "good for them to be there?"

During the past week and the advent of the Female Minstrels and Can-Can Troupe has been the topic of conversation in every quarter. The accounts which had been published concerning their performance set the whole masculine fraternity agog, and curiosity was keenly aroused at the bare anticipation of something startling, terrible and novel.

Sometimes before the hour announced for the commencement of the performance, parties of four, six and more could be seen "wending" their way to the theatre, and it was everywhere to be heard the mysterious words, "to the Can-Can." As soon as the doors were opened the crowd began to shove in, and the ushers had as much as they could do in placing those who had prudently secured seats.

Scattered through the parquet sat some forty or fifty gentlemen, upon the summit of whose craniums not a hair had flourished for so these many years. Glancing around one could detect many who "had important business down town," men who were "out at the lodge" or "at the fair."

Some who had sent their clerks to their residences with the information that "urgent business had detained them." As far as sedate masculine respectability is concerned rarely has been seen an audience which represents it more fully.

After waiting some time, the audience grew impatient, and the "gods of the gallery" clamored for the show to open, and their demands were echoed by the respectable auditorium with stamping of feet. Finally the curtain arose; there was a flutter of excitement, and the lady, and it was evident that she and her escort were strangers, and probably would not have remained had it been possible to have gotten through the dense crowd.

The minstrel performance was passably fair, some of the songs were well given, the jokes were new and the dancing good. Miss Mollie DeMar, Miss Forrest and Miss Lulu Francis, three well formed, fine looking women, took with them a close and frequently encircled. In this part of the performance there was nothing in the least objectionable to the theatre-goer, in fact it may be that a few of the audience were rather disappointed that it was so tame, after the accounts which had been given of the naughtiness of its character.

Strangeness as it may appear during the brief intermission there was not that desire among the auditors to step out and "see a man" which is noticeable, as none left their seats. This possibly may have been from fear that they would lose them, and not have the pleasure of seeing the can-can. At last the old entertainment—one of the principal features of which was the Indian club exercise by Miss Sallie Swift—closed, and the curtain rolled up, disclosing the "Jardin Mabille." Such a stretching of necks and shifting of places for better observation was probably never witnessed before, and when the can-caners made their appearance there was a general buzz of excitement.

We cannot say a word in favor of this part of the exhibition, for while it was not by any means as indecent or indecent as there was reason from the reports to expect, it certainly was not an exhibition calculated to elevate the taste or improve the morals. However, a large portion of the audience may have thought otherwise, judging from the guffaws and applause which greeted some extra display of comely limbs.

But we regret to see a disposition in our community to patronize entertainments of the kind, which have a tendency to render our theatre-going a mere matter of habit, to which no gentleman would take any female member of his family. The troupe give their last performance to-night, and there will likely be another crowded house to greet them.

Mr. W. A. Gill, late master mechanic in charge of the railroad shops at Laurinburg, who has recently turned his attention to mercantile pursuits in that thriving burg, was on Monday the recipient of a present in the shape of a handsome and valuable gold watch and chain, an offering of confidence and esteem from the employes in the shops. The presentation address was delivered in appropriate terms by Mr. Henry Northrop, which was neatly responded to by Mr. Gill, who evidently appreciated to the fullest extent the handsome testimonial from his friends and late co-workers.

Yesterday afternoon, about 6 o'clock, a little boy, aged about 9 years, a son of Mr. W. P. Holland, who boards with Mrs. Averett, on Second, between Market and Dock streets, was playing on a shed in the rear of Messrs. Fowler & Bishop's store, when he accidentally fell to the ground, a distance of about eight or ten feet, breaking his right leg near the thigh. The broken limb was set by a physician who was immediately called in and the little sufferer, at last accounts, was doing as well as could be expected.

OPERA HOUSE.

The audience at the Opera House last night was rather limited, we regret to say, to hear Miss Anna E. Dickinson in her celebrated historical lecture, Joan of Arc. We have no hesitation in saying that those who were absent missed a rich literary treat that should be heard to be fully appreciated.

Miss Dickinson's style is grandly winning and attractive. Now she portrays with real characteristic emotion the pleadings and prayers of the poor peasant girl of France, again she utters the haughty tones of the proud king and still again she imitates in a masterly manner the reproachful revellings of the cruel judges of Joan. In a word she paints the scenes, incidents and struggles of the eventful life and history of the remarkable character, embellishing each portion with so much spirit and beauty that the audience at once enters with interest and appreciation into the oft reiterated story and are borne along with its current until the end. The career of a historical character of great prominence—again told in words of more than ordinary power.

The subject is polished and modernized in a literary style replete with interest and attractiveness and no longer seems so old but rather a theme of to-day.

The lecture is chaste and elegant, and Miss Dickinson we might say acts each portion, portraying in a life-like manner the emotions of each actor in the grand drama in a style showing her an elocutionist of more than ordinary power and intelligence.

Magistrate's Court. Before Justice McQuigg, yesterday, Edward Staley, colored, was arraigned on the charge of assault and battery with a deadly weapon. He was ordered to give bond in the sum of $100 for his appearance at the next term of the Superior Court. The evidence in this case was to the effect that a number of white and colored boys were playing together, when one of the white boys and a colored youth got into a difficulty together about a "shinney" stick. The dispute was in progress, when another colored boy came up suddenly behind the white boy and struck him a heavy blow over the head with a ball club, knocking him down and injuring him severely, so much so, in fact, that the services of a physician had to be called into requisition. The boy Stanley, who inflicted the blow, was in no way concerned in the dispute between the other two boys.

Mollie Dove was arraigned before Justice Cassidy on the charge of creating a disturbance on the streets. Judgment suspended on the payment of costs.

The same, charged with assault and battery on the person of a white man. Defendant was sentenced to imprisonment in the county jail for thirty days and to pay the costs.

The complainant in the above case was not arraigned on the charge of assault and battery on the person of Mollie Dove. Case dismissed at the cost of the prosecutor.

Alex. McVeer, colored, charged with stealing a gold finger ring and button from Mrs. Maggie Skipper, was found guilty and ordered to give security in the sum of $50 for his appearance at the next term of the Superior Court, in default of which he was committed to jail.

Wants to Know. A resident in the vicinity thinks it very strange that the lamp on the corner of Third and Brunswick streets has not been lit for the past two weeks, and wants to know what has become of the lamplighter. The same individual complains that thieves steal everything they can lay their hands on in that neighborhood, even to the best inclosures around the shade trees of a poor widow lady, and wants to know where are the police.

Personal. Maj. John W. Dunham, Editor of the Raleigh News, arrived here on Tuesday evening and is stopping at the residence of his father on Second, between Market and Dock streets. His many friends will be glad to learn that his health has much improved and is still improving.

A Growing Order. We learn that the I. O. of Reclaimers, of this city, is in a flourishing condition, being one of the growing orders of this orderly place. There were three initiations on Tuesday night and five new applications for membership.

COPIES OF TESTIMONIAL.—HARRISON, Mo., May 30, 1874.—Messrs. J. W. Tolley, 29 Maiden Lane, New York.—Gent: The 19 Gun which you built for me, No. 2068, has arrived safely to hand. Allow me to thank you for the fidelity with which you carried out my instructions. The general outline, beauty of proportion and excellent finish, are all that could be desired, and more than meets my expectations. I am more than ever impressed with the idea that it is as necessary for a man to have a gun built to measurement as to have a boot so built to ensure a good fit. The pattern is as close as I desire, and the penetration I think is seldom attained, being far ahead of any public record which I have seen.
