A Weak Platform.

The President stood upon a weak platform at the Lexington Centennial. Loyal Massachusetts ought to have done better, but failed to do its duty. There was a crash, and almost a panic. The scene is thus described by an eye witness, a correspondent of of Fremont for the ensuing year. one of the New York papers: On a slightly raised platform sat the President and Cabinet, the Governors of the New England States, George William Curtis, Ralph Waldo Emerson, James Russell Lowell, and the many noted guests. Judge Hoar presided, and calling for silence, announced that, according to the Godfearing example of the forefathers, the exercises would be opened with prayer. He introduced the Rev. Grindall Reynolds to ask a blessing. The clergyman stepped forward, butscarcely had the first words fallen from his lips before a crash was heard, and that portion of the platform on which the President was seated was seen to sink. There was a moment of confusion, during which loud jeering cries arose from many a month of "A third term platform!" "Down with it !" "It is a rotten one!" The fall, in which no one was hurt, was about a foot. A moment later the chairs were moved to a sounder spot and the services were resumed: but while Mr. Emerson was delivering his short and stirring address, the planks under the President's chair gave way, and he was driven to seek safety on solid ground. The excitement caused was great, and it was with difficulty that Judge Hoar could secure order sufficient for James Russell Lowell, a native of Concord, to read his poem.

The Vote of Presbyteries on the Eldership.

There are 176 Presbyteries in the Presbyterian Church North. The following is the vote thus far learned of the Presbyteries on the proposed amendment to the constitution, making the office of eldership a time-service, instead of as now a life-tenure. Those Presbyteries which vote in the affirmative are in favor of the timeservice, those who vote in the negative, stands, as far as heard from, twenty negatives to fifteen affirmatives, and is as follows in detail.

Affirmative-Vincennes, Indianap olis, Marion, Portsmouth, Cayuga, Nassau, Philadelphia Central, New York city, Washington city, Zanesville, Brooklyn, St. Lawrence, Utica, Buffalo, Fort Wayne-15.

Negative-Westminster, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New Brunswick, Huntington, Alleghany, Chillicothe, Oxage, Cincinnati, Ebenezer, Chester, Ozark, Iowa, Catawba, Sinclairsville, Westchester, Blairsville, Louisville, Albany, Transylvania-20.

The lanterns were hung out in the tower of the old North Church in Boston on Sunday night, by Robert Newman, son of the sexton of the church, who performed the same duty a hundred years ago, when the British took up their line of march. The grandson and great-grandson of Paul Revere were also present.

- Raleigh News: A white man named W. T. Dickson was brought down by the Sheriff of Person county yesterday, sentenced to five years in the Penitentiary for fighting. At the rate the Penitentiary ontinues to fill, there will be no scarcity of labor for the W. N. C. R. R. when work shall bave begun.

- A shooting affair occurred near Dudley, on last Sunday evening, in which Mr. Chas. P. Elmore and a negro named Jack Robinson were the principals. The negro was the aggressor. Both parties, we learn, drew pistols and Mr. Elmore received a shot through the negro was a shot through a finger, while the negro was shot in the back.

- Duplin Record: A youth named Faison Shaw, residing with Mr. Mathew J. Faison, killed a young negro man last week, unintentionally no doubt, as it is said he struck him with an ordinary walking cane on the back of the head only one blow.

S. VanAmringe, J. The L'Arloso Hop.

The last hop of the season of the L'Arioso Pleasure Club took place last night at Meginney's Hall. It was a very pleasant affair and would compare favorably with any of its predecessors. The music was enchanting and forms, radiant, glorious, golden, floated in delightful harmony with its bewitching strains until long after midnight, when the weary dancers departed.

A Cute Dodge.

Yesterday morning a well grown colored boy called at the house of Mr. Wm. Wilson, located on Harnett, near Fourth street, and told Mrs. Wilson that her son, Mr. James Wilson, had sent for a suit of clothes. The lady knowing that it was the intention of her son to spend the day at a pic-nic, thought of course the request had come from the proper authority and therefore delivered to the boy a valuable new suit of clothes, the property of her son, and the boy took his

Shortly after Mr. Wilson himself arrived at home, when it transpired that no such order had emanated from him and that therefore the colored boy had wrongfully got possession of his clothes. After having the boy described to him, he at once started in pursuit and some time after met a boy at Boney Bridge answering to the description. This boy was approached on the subject and threatened with arrest if he did not produce the clothes. He declared his ignorance of the entire transaction, but later in the day was seen loitering around the store of Messrs. West & Co., where Mr. Wilson holds the position of clerk, and being again threatened on the subject, he disappeared and in about fifteen minutes brought the clothes to the store.

The name of the colored boy, we are in formed, is John Johnson.

This only affords another instance of what extreme care should be exercised in delivering valuable articles to irresponsible parties who can produce no unquestioned authority. We heard of another instance that took place some time ago where a gentleman was victimized to the extent of a portion of his wardrobe; but who was not, however, so fortunate as to recover the articles, or even to identify the sharper.

On yesterday morning, just about dawn, an inmate of his house, hearing stealthy footsteps upon his front piazza, looked through the blinds and discovered a small colored boy who was so anxious "to shine in borrowed light" that he was cautiously picking a STAR from under the door. His arstronomical pilferings were, however, interrupted by a voice which must have fallen upon his ears with the suddenness of thunder proclaiming the proximity of clouds, for he quickly departed as if in search of some chosen atmos-
