THE HERALD AND THE CENTEN-NIAL.

THE MOENING STAR and other Southern journals having rebuked the New York Herald for its sensational attempts through its correspondents to disparage the North Carolina Centennial of Independence, the Herald replies that its chief aim is to popularize and stir up interest in the matter. It says its wish is to make the Centennial Celebration a means of rereviving in that section of the country a sense of indebtedness to Southern patriotism and zeal, and to obliterate the alienation by a mutual appreciation between the South and the North of the noble deeds performed by each when they struggled together for the independence of the country.

The Herald says: The illustrious services of the South can never be disputed. The author of the National Declaration of Independence was a Southern citizen; the Commander-in-Chief of our armies in that heroic war, the most resplendent name in our history, was also a Southern citizen. Patrick Henry, "the forest born Demosthenes," whose eloquence has never perhaps been equalled in modern times, and who was the first to declare, with the winged words of a soul on fire, "We must fight!" was also a Southerner. The crowning event of the war, the surrender of Cornwallis, took place in a Southern town. The most important battles in the earlier years of the war were fought in the Northern States; but, with the exception of Bunker Hill and Saratoga, those battles were fought on our side by troops under the immediate command of Washingtou, a Southern General. The series of battles by which the war was brought to its glorious close were fought on Southern soil. These great and conspicuous facts, which can never be disputed or belittled, take out of our hands and out of everybody's hands the question whether the South did its full share of efficient service in "the times which tried men's souls." We are amazed that any Southern journal can suppose the Herald is disposed to undervalue the services of the South in the Revolution." All this is very true. The Herald could but recognize the facts, which it does with some approach to eloquence. But why, on the eve of the event, does it hunt up in the hedges and byways unreliable evidence that tends to the disparagement of North Carolina and to the injury of our great celebration? Earnest journalism would have suggested a differ-

To do our New York contemporary full justice we will state that its Tuesday's issue contains a long and interesting account of the Centennial preparations written on the spot by its own correspondent. The letter is dated April 29, and throws all the light possible on the subject at that

BEATH OF A PROMINENT NORTH

We deeply regret to publish information of the death in Greensboro on Tuesday afternoon at 5 o'clock of Hon. James T. Morehead.

Mr. Morehead was brother of the late Gov. Jno. M. Morehead, and was himself a noted man in this State years ago. He had not actively participated in affairs since the war. The deceased was quite an old man.

That was a spectacle to wring the hearts of all agitators when half the negro voters of Montgomery, Alabama, voted the Democratic ticket. There was general jubilation Tuesday might at the great victory won over Radicalism. For the first time since reconstruction the first capital of the Confederacy has a decent govern-

One of the waifs of the unfortunate Polaris expedition died at Groton, carried away on an ice floe and suffered with the rest of that party of unfortunates. She has lived in Groton since, being the first Equimaux child known to have survived the change of climate for over two years.

The centennial of the birth of Daniel O'Connell will be celebrated in Ireland on the 6th of next August. He was born near Cahirciveen, county Kerry, and died May 15, 1847, in Genoa, Italy.

Vice President Wilson did not go West to visit ex-Vice President J. C. Breckinridge.

Since trying the above remedy for a while he has improved steadily until he is now in perfect health. Although 63 years of age he plows every day.

-Statesville Landmark: The continuance of the counterfeiting cases brought the Federal Court at this place to sudden close Wednesday of the second week. The indictments were found defective wherein there was an omission to charge the overt in North Carilina in pursuance of the conspiracy. By consent new bills will be sent before the Grand Jury next week at Asheville, when the cases will be transferred back to this place for trial at the next term of the Court. The bail for each of the several defendants was reduced 331 per cent. Phe requisite bail was given in each case. A number of worthy and respectable citizens are involved in these indictments and hey have naturally been clamoring for trial and resisting stoutly the vexatious de-lays interposed by the Government.

Historical Society.

[Raleigh News.] A meeting was held at the Yarborough House last evening to organize this Society under the charter granted by the last General Assembly. Some twenty gentlemen were present ncluding several who have been conspicuous for their interest in the history of the State, conspicuous among whom were the Hon. W. A. Graham, Hou. W. H. Battle, Col. J. H. Wheeler and Gen. T. L. Clingman. The meeting was organized by the selection of Hon. W. A. Graham as chairman and Col. S. D. Pool as Secretary. Good Templars Excursion.

The members of the Independent Order of Good Templars of this city, their friends and invited guests, yesterdap had a very pleasant and enjoyable excursion to the little town of Magnelia, on the W. & W. R. R. The train started at about 8 o'clock from the Union Depot with the large crowd of happy excursionists, and arrived at Magnolia after a pleasant ride of about two hours.

After the arrival of the train at Magnolia the throng wound their way to Temperance Hall, where a neat little address of welcome was made to the visitors by Rev. J. Conoley, P. W. C., which was responded to in an appropriate manner by W. M. Hays, Chaplain of the Wilmington Lodge. At the conclusion of the ceremonies the audience took their way to another hall, where the harpers, which the order had taken the precaution to take along, struck up the dance, and old and young alike entered into the festivities of the occasion, never ceasing except for refreshments, until the approach of evening warned them again to embark for home.

I. O. G. T. At a regular meeting of Wilmington Lodge No. 64 of the order of Good Templars, held at Temperance Hall last night, the following officers, having been elected at a previous meeting, were duly installed:

C. W. Yates, W. C. T. Mrs. V. A. Orr, W. V.T. W. M. Hays, W. C. John H. Craig, W. R. S.
