gates to the Convention. - Says the Raleigh News: Our candidates from this city, who have been in the canvass throughout the past week, arrived at home last night to rest from their labors to-day. They are highly elated at the prospects throughout the county. - Raleigh News special! R. C. Badger, attorney for the Bondholders, is a candidate for the Convention. Judge Rodman, who decided in favor of their validity, is a candidate for that Convention. Take care that they are not in the majority. Men of the West, look out !

- From all quarters now come in the most encouraging accounts, says the News, and it only needs the awakening up of the people to secure those countles which have been given up as gone. We appreciate the fact that a most encouraging change has taken place within the last ten days, and that a continuance of the same improvement will counteract all the desperate efforts of Judges, Solicitors, Revenue Officers and the United States Government to stifle the will of the white people of North Caro-

- Hickory Press: We remember once when that good and true man and able judge, James W. Osborne, was holding Court in Onslow county, that he was serenaded and loudly called upon to speak, in some very exciting political movement and positively refused to do so on account of his position. Now we have Judges of the Supreme and Superior Courts actively canvassing for a place in a Convention, which, in all probability, will take action in regard to their offices, and another (Sam Watts) quitting his Court, (the jury out con-i lering a murder case) and leaving the county and district, to make a political speech.

- Goldsboro Messenger: The canyass for this county is now going or. Mr. Dortch spoke at Mount One on Wednesday to a large gathering, and on Thursday Messrs. Dortch and Faircioth met at Fremont. The regular canvass began in Fork preenet on Saturday, Our distinguished siandard bearer is firing hot shot at Cap. Faircoth, which never fail to carry consternation to the enemy's camp whenever he speaks. The gatherings are all largely attended, and the white people seem to be fully arou ed to the importance of the issucs, and from every quarter come glorious tidings of an irrepressible date, Mr. Cox, is winning friends wherever he goes. Grantham, Faircloth's colleague, takes no-how, not even with the negroes. Wayne is sure 250 majority for Dortch and Cox.

COPY OF PROPIEONIAL -HANNIBAL, NO., May 30 1874. - Messrs, J. & W. Tolley, 29 Maiden Lane, New York-Gent .: The 12 Gun which you built for me, No. 2093, has arrived safely to hand. Allow me to thank you for the fidelity with which you carried out my instructions. The general outline, beauty of proportion and excellent finish, are all that could be desired, and more than meets my expectations. 1 am more than ever impressed with the idea that it is as necessary for a man to have a gun hullt to measarement as to have a boot so built to ansure a good it. The pattern 175 and penetration 40 are very superior. The pattern is as close as I desire, and the penetration I think is seldom attained, being far ahead of any public record which I have seen.

NAVIGATING THE AIR.

The Schroeder Combination of Air Ship and Balloon-Machinery to Propulaton and Steering-What the Inventor Expects to Accomplish.

[New York Tribune.]

W. F. Schroeder, whose novel in ention in the shape of an air ship, asserted to be entirely under the control of its engineer, has been mentioned in the Tribune recently, was in this city yesterday exhibiting his model and drawings and consulting with engineers. The machine is in the form of a life-boat, supported by a balloon, and propelled and steered in the desired direction by apparatus like that in use in marine vessels. The boat is 65 feet in length by about 10 feet in breadth of beam. Its ribs are of three-quarter inch wire, and each is capable of bearing a strain of 8,400 pounds. Over the wire frame work attached to the ribs is stretched canvas boiled in oil, so as to be impervious to both water and air. In each end of the boat is a steel rod or mast, 28 feet high, which is securely braced by stays from every part of the vessel. Each mast terminates above in a strong cae of wire framework, which encircles at either end the point of the egg-shaped balloon, which is thus always carried along with the vessel, never dragging behind or swaving from its position, no matter how high the rate of speed may be. Around the middle of the balloon passes a strong girdle, attached to the balloon at points only two feet apart. From this descend the numerous carrying-ropes which support the car. The strength of the balloon is insured by an aggregate of eight and three-quarter miles of netting, capable of bearing a strain of enough to thank God in his Western | 25,000 pounds. With this arrange- bearing his name. The agency in this city which, it is claimed, is beyond the limit of probability—the firm girdle, secured at the ends to the mastheads. would only allow the bottom of the balloon to float up, forming an immense parachute, the buoyancy of which would cause a slow descent in a spiral direction. The great obstacle to success in erial locomotion heretofore has been the rotatory tendency of the balloon, which, so long as only one motor was employed, was an insuperable difficulty. The aeronaut could not steer against this rotation. But it occurred to Mr. Schroeder that if propulsion could be effected both before and behind, by one power pushing and another pulling, the rotation would be got rid of, and then guidance would be a comparatively easy matter. To accomplish this he has put two blades, so that by placing them upon the ground, each blade constructed of wire and canvass, and 15 feet long by 41 feet broad. These propellers, when working together, act the one to pull and the other to push the ship forward. They will be able to make over 1,200 revolutions per minute. At each end of the ship s a large rudder, and these when worked together stand at angles opposite to each other, so that they act at both ends, turning the stern one way and the bow the other. As this machinery is disconnected, the proversible, headway can be made equally well in either direction. But this is not all. On each side of the boat is fastened by hinges a wing, 35 feet long by 15 feet wide in front and 10 feet wide behind, which is concave on the inner surface. It is set at an angle declining slightly toward the front and flaps up and down at the rateunder full speed-of 160 or 170 strokes a minute. It works on the principle of the bird's wing, catching the air in the hollow beneath in the downward stroke; the upward pressure tends to lift the machine, but as the wing is slightly inclined forward of this act, or any county commissioners, the resultant of this pressure upon the angle of inclination is a tendency to push forward, which is no little help to the propellers. This apparatus, by being carefully regulated so as to create a balance between the force of the wind and its resistance, will also enable the air-ship to stand still, which would make it very valuable as a means of military observation. The machinery will be operated by very light, strong hydraulic engine of about eight-horse power, to be built especially for the purpose. The balloon will hold about 80,000 cubic feet of gas, and still allow all needed room for expansion; but to provide against a possible lack of gas, a gas generator of large capacity will be kept on board to keep up a constant supply. In case of a leak, little balloons smeared with bird lime will be sent up inside the great globe, which, being sucked into the leak and sticking there, will stop it completely. Only such a height-to be measured by the barometer-will be attempted to reach as will carry the aeronauts above hurricanes and thunder storms. In a still air it is claimed that a speed of fully 70 miles an hour can be obtained, while a far greater velocity can be reached with a favorable wind. The whole air-vessel will weigh 2,800 pounds, and freight to the amount of 12,000 pounds can be carried under ordinary conditions. Immediately after Mr. Schroeder's yesterday: return to Baltimore the contract will 7 A. M., 81; 12 M., 93; 2 P. M., 94; 4:30 be let by him and George W, Gail, P. M., 90; 9 P. M., 81, of the firm of Gail & Ax, of Balti- | Mayor's Court. more, his partner, and it is expected that the vessel will be ready by August 15th, at a cost of $5,000 to $6,000. The inventor will go first to Washington, and thence in turn to New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, when, if he has had the success of which he is now confident, he will make proposals to the Government to carry mails to Europe.

A man by the name of Wm. Edwards, a native of Ireland, died suddenly at the restaurant of Mr. R. F. Eyden, on North Water street, yesterday morning. He had been sick for a week or two, but a part of that time was able to be out, and it is thought that exposure had a great deal to do with his death. Early yesterday morn ing he called for a piece of ice, with which he was furnished. He appeared then to be in better health than usual, and talked of eating breakfast; but at 6 o'clock, or shortly afterward, a party went to his room and found him dead. A physician had been called to see him on Saturday, and he also visited him on Sunday, and at the time of the latter call Edwards appeared to have considerably improved.
