> Raleigh News, of Friday. SKIES BRIGHT.

Yesterday we said skies were bright. To-day we say they are brighter! Our letter from the West shows that the whole Piedmont section is in a blaze. The people are aroused. Our speakers are abroad; the Radical speakers are abroad too, but they go down before their gallant opponents with a resistance so feeble that it is almost absurd.

From the transmontane country we hear equally as inspiriting accounts. That region will vote almost as a unit. From the East there is the same encouragement. We know of no county where the Democratic party will encounter absolute loss. Wake, Cumberland and Chatham we claim with almost absolute certainty. Johnston will not depart from her faith, but come out with a good substantial Democratic majority. Harnett, Moore and Robeson must be fought for. Our speakers must be there. that is the weak point of the line. "A little more grape, Capt. Bragg." EDGECOMBE.

The Mail says that W. P. Mabson, negro candidate in Edgecombe for Convention, said in a harangue, Rocky Mount on last Saturday:

"I don't want poor white men to vote for me. I don't want to be trammeled by their votes. I can be elected without them. I am a representative of the great Republican party, and I glory in it." WAKE.

The News gives this verbatim speech of Madison Hodge, one of the Radical candidates for Convention in Wake county, made at Rolesville on Wednesday:

Feller Citizens-I am agin a Convention, I am agin a Convention, P. M. what in the h-I do you want with a Convention? You own a Convention and a Legislator too, and you have changed your Constitution 8 times already, and I'll be d-d if you knowed it. Now, by God, you want to change it again and all go to h-1. Old Hodge won't go there he's got plenty of money and it can't hurt and does not belong here. (Here he was interrupted by Archie Cawthorn, a fellow Radical with "Yes, you have got plenty it and you are as mean as h-l with it.") Now, feller citizens, a. these fellers talk about civil rights -What in the h-I is civil rights, did you ever pay taxes on civil rights: now take that home and think about it. I have traveled all the way from Maine to Texas and never seed a nigger in a first class car. Now. I hain' got time to tell any more about this toolishuess. Now these Democrat men talk to me about adjourning. Now I ain't gwine to tell you what I'm gwine to do. Did you ever hear tell of a man building up all of his fence case his gap was down, and now you want to make a constitution and go to h-l if you do it. I have told you all I knowed about this foolishness. I want you to take what I have said home with you. could go on and talk for two hours just the same way I have been tellsoundest doctrine has been preached here to day, and thank you for your attention, smooth a door st

RANSOM.

"form part of the spoils of the first prize captured by an American man-Campaign Speech at Smithville-A of-war," going to his sister, Mrs. Parson's and his grandfather's Mason-Wilmington Tribute Beautifully Recognized.

According to appointment, notice which was all too short, Senator Ramsom, Rev. Mr. Hudson, a Presbyterian accompanied by a pleasant party of gentlemen from the city, went down the river to his sister-in-law, Miss Bryson, were Smithville yesterday morning to address the thrown from a carriage at Watson-town, Pa., Wednesday by the horse running off. Hudson's back was citizens of Brunswick on the Convention question. The boat arrived at its destination at about 11 o'clock. Repairing to the broken and there is no hope of his re-Court House shortly after, Gen. Ransom found a repectable number of his fellowcitizens who gave earnest heed to the clear, simple, yet masterful argument of more than two hours in length which he delivered. The eloquent speaker labored under a severe hoarseness and the indisposition incident to rapid and arduous campaigning, but he was fully equal to the demands of the occasion, making a speech that gave general pleasure, and which we trust and doubt not will accomplish good. The introduction was occupied in personal and local historical mention .--Graceful allusions were made to the forwardness of the Cape Fear people in the > ling patriotism. General Ransom said that the question in this canvass was not whether the Convention should be called, but whether it should be controlled after it had met by Conservatives or Radicals. Should North Carolina surrender herself into the hands of 80,000 negroes and a small number of whites, or should her caucasian manhood assert itself on the 5th of August?-that was the question, and it was a momentous question. General Ransom described the condition of the country under the reign of Radicalism in language that made a vivid portraiture. He then referred to the miserable civil Mails collected from street boxes every rights bill. Disguise it as Radicals might in some of their discussions, this odious present campaign. That portion of the bill, stricken out before its final passage through Congress, referring to the mixing of races in the schools, was yet an open question for agitation in the States, and many of the Radical leaders wanted it en acted in the State laws. He referred to the utterances of Republican leaders on the subject. The Senator dwelt at some length on this topic, and urged in most impressive and touching manner that his hearers, his State and country would never consent as voters to the fearful degradation that would ensue upon the passage of this school feature of the law. Here Senator Ransom requested Maj. Englehard to read the proposed law, which request was complied with, and soon after the General concluded his most able and satisfactory address.

ciples of Constitutionalism and their ster-

We might have stated above that Dr W. G. Curtis performed the introduction in an appropriate manner-tics, said that Cowan would carry Bruns-The Nyce brought the distinguished ora tor and his Wilmington escort back to the city, where they arrived about half-past ? - At the City Hall yesterday the thermometer touched 94 degrees and at

Their generous and liberal partiality had sent him to the Senate; so that they had enabled him to do what he had done for their welfare. Freely and feelingly he spoke of his friends and old comrades, many of whom he called by name. Sepator Ransom again remarked that he could make no political speech. He had spoken at other places, was to speak the next day to thousands of the Democrats of Nash, Wilson and Edgecombe. He trusted that the State would completely redeem herself from Badical thraidon next week.— There was something at this time, whatever the issue of that conflict, that should make his hearers and their people truly proud and that was the reflection that it was one century since the first effort were made by their distinguished ancestors for freedom. In this commemoration year they were making splendid exertions in behalf of Constitutional libe ty. Return ing his sincere thanks a second time for the cordial reception extended to him, he hoped ever to live in the hearts of this people, Hearty applause, was frequently rendered,

Immediately, after the General and the invited guests of the Cape, Fear Club were shown to the Club rooms. An elegant entertainment which occupied some hours was furnished; the band, meantime playing suitable airs.

Gen. Ransom has conferred a pleasure on our public by his visit which will not soon be forgotten. We hope he will come again, at a time when the burdens of state shall rest more lightly upon him,

Cape Fear Light Artillery. Magistrates' Court.

Ben Jones, colored, was arraigned before Justice Gardner yesterday afternoon on the charge of stealing a watch and chain from Mr. J. W. Lamb. It appears that Mr. Lamb, who has a sleeping apartment at Capt. T. J. Southerland's livery stables, retired to sleep about 1 o'clock on the morn ing of the 28th inst, hanging his vest and coat, the former containing his watch, on a nail in his room, and in the morning when he prepared to resume his garments he discovered that his watch and chain, with about 70 or 80 cents in money, was gone. On the evening of the 28th, as Mr. Lamb learned on pursuing his investigations after the missing articles, the chain was pawned at the Wilmington Garden for a drink. The party who pawned the watch was described to Mr. L. and was identified by him, he hav ing frequently been about the stables under various pretexts. Keeping a sharp lookout for the fellow he finally came across him on Thursday afternoon, and as Mr. L. grabbed him by the collar Jones exclaimed, 'I know what you want, Mr. Lamb, here's your watch!" stating that he had purchased

An inquest was held yesterday morning over the body of Orrie Spencer, the colored oman who died suddenly while crossing Boney Bridge about 10 o'clock on Thursday night, an account of which appeared in our paper yesterday. The evidence was to the effect that deceased was on her way to a friend's house with a bunch of fish, but was attacked on the bridge by the disease which terminated her life. She called for help, when two colored women appeared, upon which she asked one of them to go for some assafœtida. The woman, or girl, started to obey the request, but through difficulty in obtaining the drug she was gone se long that a messenger was sent for a physician, who hastened to the afflicted woman's assistance, but found her so far beyond the reach of medical aid that he did not deem it expedient to administer any medicine, and soon after she breathed her

The fury returned a verdict that deceased came to her death from disease of the heart, to which malady, we understand, she had long been subject.

The Opera House Last Night. Owing probably to the oppressiveness of the weather last night, and the fact of there being other attractions, only a limited audience assembled at the Opera House to witness the second rendition of "Robert Emmet." together with a farce and several specialties, by the Wilmington Amateur Dramatic Association. The number that assembled were appreciative, however, and seemed well entertained.

"Robert Emmet" was enacted with even more real merit than was the case heretofore. The young gentlemen seemed to be well up in their respective characters and the stage appointments were very creditable. The laughable farce, "The Stage Struck Darkey," was well received. The specialties, consisting of unique musical renditions and dances, were the crowning features of where, everywhere. He felt his home was the occasion.
