TWO DEATHS.

Andrew Johnson, seventeenth President of the United States, was born at Raleigh, N. C., December 29, 1808. and from the age of ten until the autumn of 1824 was the apprentice of a tailor in Raleigh. In 1826 he settled at Greenville, Tenn., working at his trade. He was elected Alderman in 1828, 1829 and 1830, Mayor in 1831, 1832 and 1833, member of the Legislature in 1835 and 1839, and Presidential Elector in 1840. He was elected to the State Senate in 1841, and sat in Congress from 1843 to 1854. From 1853 to 1857 he was Governor of Tennessee and United States Senator from 1857 to 1863. All this time he was a Democrat. He was nominated for Vice-President by the Baltimore Republican Convention in 1864, and on the assassination of President Lincoln in 1865, succeeded him in the Presidentail Chair. In 1872 he was defeated as an independent candi date for Congressman-at-large, having been previously beaten by Mr. Cooper, for United States Senator. After a long strugwas chosen last January to succeed Brownlow in the United States Senate. At the Executive session in March he was sworn in, and made soon after a fierce speech against Grant. He died of paralysis at his home, Greenville, Tenn., yesterday. Andrew Johnson lived one of the most remarkable lives known in the history of the world. Of his character we speak not here. Perhaps it were better for this generation to refer criticism of his career until the

The second death we record this morning is that of the chivalric, whole-souled George E. Pickett. Born January 25, 1825, of Col. Robert Pickett, of Turkey Island, Va., and Mrs. Mary Johnson Pickett, his wife, formerly of Richmond, he entered West Point in 1842. Graduating with the rank of Second Lieutenant, he entered Scott's army of invasion and fought valiantly through the memorable Mexican campaign. In the San Juan trouble with England Le distinguished himself by his coolness and promptness. He fought through the late civil war with splendid heroism and was made a Major General soon after the battles around Richmond, in one of which he was wounded. He afterward comunanded in this military department and distinguished himself at Gettys-

General Pickett died in the hospital of St. Vincent de Paul, at Norfolk, on the evening of the 30th, of a liver disease. He was in Norfolk on business, and was taken too ill to return home.
