O'CONNELL. THE CAMPAIGN. The Old Folks at Home.

The Lynchburg (Va.) Daily News gives a list of the names, places of residence, date of death and ages of persons in Virginia who have lived 110 years and over. The number is eighteen, fourteen white and four colored. Mention is also made of 300 majority for the Conservative John, a negro, who died in Washington, D. C., 1838, aged 115 years. One of the persons mentioned in the list was 136, two 130, two 121, one 120, the lowest age being 110. Reference is also made to the fact that not long to come on for trial. since there died on Long Island a THE CITY. colored woman who had lived there all her life, who, at the time of her NEW ADVERTISEMENTS. death, was indisputably 115 years

The News also refers to the longevity of "old Parr," who was born in Shropshire, England, in 1483, and died in London, November 15, 1635. He was first married at the age of 80, and had two children, and, after the death of his wife, married again when about 120 years old. He died when a little over 152 years of age.

At the Centennial next year a colored woman is to be exhibited who is now 106 years old, and who, of course, distinctly remembers General Washington and his wife. Not much reliance, however, is to be put upon this case. At the same time there are no doubt exceptional instances of extreme longevity, where the constitution is originally free from radical weakness or disease of the vital organs, and there have been the accompanying advantages of a healthy climate and a regular and temperate life.

"She Kicked Him."

Dear Dispatch: It has long been a wonder to us how the above quoted abomination ever crept into current use in Virginia among her polite and pure-minded ladies. Of course if they knew the base and impure origin of this way of speaking (if we are right in our surmise on that point) they would never more let it pass their lips. Let us imagine the elegant and beautiful Miss A. The picture is certainly not strikingly beautiful or becoming! Let the ladies refuse, reject, discard, dismiss their suitors to their hearts' content, but pray let us have no more "kicking." We would, however, connive at or even applaud one more kicking exercise. Let this vulgar abomination be at once and forever kicked out of the domain of polite conversation.

Probabilities Political.

Of the one hundred and twenty delegates to be elected to-day, we estimate that the Conservatives will elect 65 and the Republicans and Independents 55.

Hereafter by order of the Mayor all balls and dances on Water street are prohibited. Policemen have been ordered to take up offenders against this ordinance. This will give a degree of nocturnal quiet to that part of our city, which has heretofore been afflicted with the worst nuisances in the shape of these entertainments.

Centuary of the Great Patriot-Sketch of his Life-Are we to Have Any Demonstration of Respect in Wilmington?

To-morrow, the 6th of August, is the centenary of the birth of the mighty Irish patriot, Daniel O'Connell. Many cities will hold celebration, in honor of the event. Unfortunately the Ultramontanes in Dublin have given offence to others by their partisan arrangements for the occasion, but the Fenians and several other organizations will undertake independent demonstrations, In New York the learned Rev. Dr. Mc-

Glynn will deliver the oration at night, at Cooper Institute. High mass will be celebrated at St. Stephen's Church on the morning of Friday. The ceremonies will be unusually grand and imposing. In Savannah Bishop Gross was invited to deliver the address, but owing to engagements in the up-country, was forced to decline. No preparations have been made here for a formal eelebration, but as it is not altogether too late, something might be done by the Hibernian Association to-day.

The following sketch of the renowned man whose memory is so fondly cherished by the sons of the Emerald Isle, will be read with interest:

Daniel O'Connell was born at Carhen, county of Kerry, Ireland, on the 6th of August, 1775. He was the oldest son of Morgan O'Connell, a Catholic gentleman of ancient and respectable family, who lived in seclusion on a small estate in the romantic wilds of Kerry. In 1796 Daniel O'Connell was admitted to the bar, and soon became distinguished as an advocate. His first political speech was made in Dublin, January 13th, 1800, at a meeting of Catholics held to petition against the proposed legislative Union between Great Britain and Ireland. The meeting was dis persed by the military. This was the commencement of one of the most active, brilliant and effective political careers which belong to the pages of Irish history. From that day Daniel O'Connell was in the thickest of the political fight, devoting his great going, but go at once to the polls and vote energies and brilliant powers to the Catholic question, and secured Catholic emancipation. He was returned to Parliament from the county of Clare, in 1828. On proceeding to take his seat he refused to take the test oaths which had been framed for the purpose of excluding Romanists. The excitement and agitation which followed became so great Sir Robert Peel and the Duke of Wellington, the leaders of the Conservative party, became alarmed and resolved to concede emancipation to the

From that date till his death, (May 15, 1847,) Mr. O'Connell gave himself up to the cause of his country.

Obtaining Goods Under False Pre-

About a week ago Elvin Artis, the barber, who lives near the corner of Seventh and Bladen streets, was on his way home in the evening when he noticed that he was being following by a colored boy about 15 or 16 years of age. Artis finally stopped and questioned the boy, who stated that he came here from Virginia to look up his mother, whom he supposed to be in Wilmington, and represented himself to be in destitute circumstances. Artis took the boy home, gave him something to eat and lodging for the night. The next day and for several days thereafter he continued to enjoy the bounty of his benefactor, going such errands as were required in the neighborhood, &c. Yesterday morning, however, the fact came to light that he had been obtaining provisions and other articles from various grocery stores in that neighborhood for his own benefit and having them charged to Artis, stating that he or his wife had sent for them. A warrant was obtained from the Mayor for the arrest of the boy for obtaining goods under false pretences, and the swindler is doubtless ere this cogitating upon the results of his worked existence in the Guard House.

ments without a moment's warning, but his teeth were sharp, his eyes were keen and his disposition anything but lovery. This was clearly demonstrated in this wise: The young monster of the deep was, as a matter of course, an object of curiosity to many on board, who had never seen a shark before. Hence they crowded around, eager for an opportunity to get a good look at the fish. To display him to better satisfaction one more daring than the others seized the monster by his caudal appendage and held him up. While in this position one of the gentleman, who was engaged which said garments were considerably rent and torn, but luckily no injury was inflicted upon his person. This incident was sufficient to quiet all 'enthusiasm and satisfy all reasonable curiosity, and the young reveller in Old Ocean's wild meanderings was left to himself.

Entertainment Last Night at the Opera House.

Mention was made yesterday of the tender of the Opera House and of the services of the Cornet Club for the entertainment to be given by nine little orphan children from the Asylum at Oxford. The Opera House was literally packed last night. Mr. Eugene S. Martin made a handsome speech introducing Mr. Mills, the Superintendent, and his cause to the people of Wilmington. Mr. Mills explained the object of the institution, its work and location, and spoke of its prospects. A pleasant entertainment followed, composed of recitations, &c., by the children. During the exercises from time to time the Cornet band played some of its sweetest airs. The evening was successful in more than the pleasure afforded by learning something of the workings of the great charity which appeals so tenderly to the hearts of all persons of sensibility. The collection which was taken up, inclusive of some small sums previously paid to Dr. Everett, amounted to $117 15, the largest collection on this tour, so far.

The use of the Opera House was tendered free of charge, by Mr. E. J. Pennypacker, the lessee and manager.

Did You Ever? Our facetious neighbor-in-law Gee Zee, who edits a strawberry farm up the Weldon road, says he really did not want to be a candidate for the Convention, but he will accept the nomination because it is too late now to change candidates. Now, if there is anything in the world that Gee Zee does want, it is a seat in the Constituctional Convention, his object being to so amend the constitution that a duty may be levied on all strawberries not produced on "Excelsior" farm. This is worthy the genius of Gee Zee, being far ahead of the famous tooth bill engineered by him in the Legislature some years ago.
