WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUG. 25, '75.

THE GEORGIA TROUBLES.

The serious outbreak and massacre in Georgia which was planned but fortunately discovered and nipped in the bud still forms the subject of long dispatches and newspaper and general comment. The prompt action of Gov. Smith in going to the spot prevented a panic, and the alertness and decision of the local authorities effectually quelled the trouble and secured hundreds of the offenders for punishment. Confessions enough have been obtained to satisfy every reasonable doubt that a great rising and an indiscriminate massacre had been resolved on by the negro plotters. It would appear that the masses of the blacks were not informed of the full design, but a knowledge of the credulous character of that race leaves no room to doubt what would have been the fearful consequences if the plans of Morris and Rivers had been carried out.

Judge Johnson's letter to Governor Smith shows that there was undoubtedly a plot to commit bloodshed and rapine. He has ordered a special term of the Superior Court of Washington county, to be held at Sandersville on Monday, the 30th inst., for the trial of such persons as may have been concerned in the plot. He suggests to the Governor that the Attorney-General be directed to attend this court and conduct these trials upon the part of the State. This he does that the trials may be given that solemnity and dignity which will show the lawless that the commonwealth's peace cannot be disturbed with impunity.

The Augusta papers of Sunday say that quiet appears to be restored in Burke County. Candia Harris, who wrote the instructions to "kill and burn," and who acted as adjutant to Morris, has given himself up and claims that he is not guilty of the charges against him. He is said to be badly scared.

JUDGE SETTLE ON CONVENTION.

As Judge Settle, of the Supreme Court, has been given some notoriety recently by reason of his connection with the contested election case for Robeson county, it will perhaps be interesting to know something concerning his views on the subject of the approaching Convention. In conversation at Washington City last Saturday he talked pretty freely, if we are to believe the usually well-informed and careful correspondent of a Baltimore contemporary. He thinks that the question of control rests in the hands of Dr. Ransom, the independent delegate elect from Thrrell, who has been a Republican. He says that as the Republicans are pledged to adjourn the Convention sine die immediately on its assembling if they have the power, the question as to whether the people of North Carolina shall have another Constitution depends entirely upon this one man. Judge Settle thinks the personnel of the Convention is composed of the very best men of both parties. If the Democrats do succeed in securing the majority and proceed to the work of forming a new Constitution, Judge Settle states that he is satisfied that there will be nothing inserted detrimental to the interests of Republicans. With the parties so evenly balanced any instrument likely to be framed must to a great extent meet with the concurrence of both, he thinks.

MARYLAND.

The dissatisfied Democrats and the Republicans of Maryland are incubating a ticket in opposition to that headed by Hon. John Lee Carroll. This division is regretable, for the reason that it may lead ultimately to the return to power of the Radical party. The good people of that State have cause to remember the days when the Republicans ruled them by disfranchisement and Federal terrorism. We believe that Mr. Carroll will be elected, but Maryland Democrats should do all in their power to reconcile the dissentients and henceforth should try to keep the party together.

Far up in the Nor'west the Frost King has thus early commenced his ravages. Our Milwaukee reports show a total destruction of tobacco, and great damage to corn in thirteen counties in different parts of Wisconsin.

Another of Col. Hayne's critical letters is presented to the readers of THE MORNING STAR to-day.

In the course of an elaborate letter on North Carolina politics and public men, written from Charlotte to the Louisville Courier-Journal, "W. H. A." points out Hon. George Davis, of this city, as Gov. Graham's fittest successor. He says that Graham "in moral attitude and broad culture was ahead of any public man (save) in North Carolina during the last quarter of a century save George E. Badger."

Boston has taken the initiative in getting up a third party on the basis of reform and reconciliation. The meeting of last Saturday looks to entering the Presidential campaign with Banks and Lamar as the nominees. If the Democratic party makes wise nominations next year it will be difficult to find a use for this new movement.

The Atlanta Herald has shown commendable enterprise by increasing its capital stock, donning a beautiful new dress of eight pages and improving itself generally. The Herald can afford this outlay.

The standard of insurrection has been raised in Crete, too.

STAR-DUST.

— The peppermint crop of Wayne county, N. Y., is estimated to reach $80,000 this year.

— Maj. J. W. Daniel, of Lynchburg, will soon have out a work on "Negotiable Instruments."

— The total exports of wine from Spain in 1874 were 23,670,000 gallons, value, 100,028,262 francs.

— New England's losses by fire for July foot up to $634,725, of which $112,200 were in Massachusetts.

— An American girl won the gold medal at the recent examination at the College of Brazil, in Rio Janeiro.

— A lady who has written a book on Japan says Japanese civilization is a fraud and the Japanese are beasts.

— The bronze statue of Lafayette, voted as a present to the city of New York by the French Assembly of 1871, has arrived.

— Mr. Davis' letter will certainly make him no enemies in Winnebago county, says the Chicago Tribune, a Republican journal.

— One of the September magazines has a poem on "Rainless August," written in July by a man who discounted the probabilities and got badly left.

— The Japanese are shipping bricks to California, and sell them cheaper than those made in that State, notwithstanding that there is an ad valorem duty of 20 per cent. on them.

— Miss Susan Augusta Fenimore Cooper, daughter of the novelist, is at the head of an orphanage on Otsego Lake, near Cooperstown. She devotes her life to the support and training of the inmates.

— The Philadelphia papers take kindly to the suggestion that Andrew Johnson's tailor shop be exhibited at the National Centennial next year, with the original sign-board hanging out, bearing the words, "A. Johnson, tailor."

The Rain Saint.

[Baltimore Sun, 23.]

The legend of St. Swithin has attracted much attention this year in consequence of the remarkable rainy weather since the 15th of July. The common adage of our English ancestors regarding St. Swithin is to the effect that as it rains or is fair on St. Swithin's day, the 15th of July, there will be a continuous track of wet or dry weather for the forty days ensuing. On to-morrow, 24th inst., the forty days, which this year began with rain, will end. No one will deny that a continuous track of rainy weather has characterized the forty days, now nearly at an end. The record show that in many previous years similar, knightly rainy seasons have followed a wet St. Swithin's day.

St. Swithin was bishop of Winchester, and died, about 862, over a thousand years ago, which is long enough to test any legend. Swithin was born near Winchester, and was a monk of the old abbey at Winchester, and though he died a bishop was never regularly canonized. He is therefore what has been termed a "home-made saint." It would seem that a love of being out in the wet was one of his peculiarities, for he directed that when he should die his body should be buried under the eaves-drippings of the church, in which uncomfortable state it remained for nearly a hundred years, when the clergy in a body began the removal amidst great pomp to the Cathedral of Winchester. The ceremony, however, was interrupted by a heavy burst of rain, which continued for four days. The monks who were frightened by the rain, desisted and built a chapel over the remains on the spot where they lay buried. Out of this incident grew the legend which has held a place in the popular mind along with other traditions and superstitions for so many centuries.

Savings.

The increase of deposits in savings banks would indicate that the industries are still accumulating, notwithstanding the outcry of dull times. The statement of the New York savings banks for the six months to July 1, represents the total of deposits, exclusive of surplus, at $318,335,617; aggregate assets, $336,308,236. The gain in deposits since January 1, is over $12,000,000. There is also a gain of over 30,000 in the number of depositors. The increase in deposits is the largest since 1672.

Some months ago an Oregon man named his girl baby after Queen Victoria, and wrote to the Queen to that effect. She didn't seem to care a cent, and he changed the child's name to "Sal," and went out and pounded the first Englishman he met.

OLD TIMES IN KENTUCKY.

How He Rescued Agnes and Married Her—Divided to Some Purpose.

[From the Courier-Journal.]

Between Clarksville Tenn., and Eddyville, Ky., on the Cumberland river, there is a cavern which can only be entered by diving into the water, and which has no other light than that reflected from the bottom of the river. It was accidentally discovered by a young Indian chief, while one day diving for his gun, which he had dropped from his canoe into the river. The Indian youth who discovered it for a long time kept the secret to himself, and would often resort to it in his lonely hours where, by the aid of his flint and a piece of dry wood, he would kindle a fire and enjoy himself in looking at the magnificence of the scene as the light reflected back millions of beams from the numerous stalagmites and stalacites of gigantic size and fantastic forms. The cave was about fifty feet wide, and about the same in height. In the course of time this young son of the forest became enamored with a beautiful daughter of one of the backwoodsmen in the settlement. The young chief's name was Wallahalla and the girl's name was Agnes Robertson.

In those days the daughters of backwoodsmen could swim, ride, and handle a gun with all the dexterity and skill of their fathers and brothers. Arriving at the place the lover disappeared beneath the surface of the water, and the maiden quickly followed him. Here he informed her she must remain as his prisoner until he gained the consent of her parents to their union. Wallahalla then departed to return soon after with dried venison, and such articles as were necessary for her comfort. Returning to the settlement, Wallahalla found that the place had been attacked by the foe and the village burnt to the ground. The parents of Agnes mourned her as dead, or lingering in a captivity to which death would be far preferable. The young chief was loudest in his lamentations over the lost girl, and at the war dance of his tribe swore the direst vengeance against her captors. All the male portion of the settlement, together with the friendly tribe to which the young chief Wallahalla belonged, started in pursuit of the foe to rescue the girl. After a long and tedious march they came upon the enemy in the neighborhood of where Metropolis City, Ill., now stands. A furious battle was fought, in which the attacking party, headed by young Wallahalla, dealt death and destruction to their foe until their ammunition was exhausted. At this moment the enemy was reinforced, and the attacking party was compelled to retire across the Ohio.

The father of Agnes Robertson was almost crazed with grief at the loss of his beloved daughter. In his great agony he published to the troops the following announcement:

I, Andrew Robertson, will give to the rescuer of my daughter from the hands of the Iowas her hand in marriage, one thousand acres of land, one hundred head of cattle and horses, one hundred pounds of powder, and two rifles.

ANDREW ROBERTSON.

Twenty men, warriors and riflemen, among them Wallahalla, stepped forward and tendered their services. The girl herself was a fortune to any man. The parent and his trusty friends, with the exception of those who were to go in pursuit of the Iowas in search of Agnes Robertson, returned to their settlement on Little River, near the place now known as Cadiz, in Trigg county, Ky., to rebuild their huts and the stockade which the Indians had destroyed. Wallahalla separated himself from both parties, and by a circuitous route wended his way to the cavern in search of his beloved Agnes, whom he found in almost a starving condition.

The full moon shone forth in all its splendor on the night of the 25th of May as they rose to the surface of the water and entered their canoe to return to the arms of the lovely Agnes' parents, and to receive the reward of a blessing. Their advent into the settlement the following morning was an occasion of great rejoicing. Feasting and dancing were the order for several weeks, and the young chief Wallahalla was the toast of the country for miles around. He was the recipient of presents of land, horses, cattle, skins, &c., to a larger extent than any man living since the foundation of the world, unless I except the great gift taker, (general) Grant. Of the nineteen men who stepped forward to offer their services to Andrew Robertson, not one returned to give in his experience, and the general impression existed at that time that they were either all tomahawked or burnt at the stake. Wallahalla married and changed his name to Robertson. Many of his descendants lived in the neighborhood of what is now known as Crittenden county and Trigg county, Kentucky, till about the year 1818, when they removed to Eastern Georgia.

A Representative and Champion of American Art Taste!

Prospectus for 1875.

EIGHTH YEAR

THE ALDINE,

THE ART JOURNAL OF AMERICA,

Issued Monthly.

"A Magnificent Conception, wonderfully carried out."

The necessity of a popular medium for the representation of the productions of our great artists, has always been recognized, and many attempts have been made to meet the want. The successive failures which so invariably followed each attempt in this country to establish an art journal, did not prove the indifference of the people of America to the claims of high art. So soon as a proper appreciation of the want and an ability to meet it were shown, the public at once rallied with enthusiasm to its support, and the result was a great artistic and commercial triumph—THE ALDINE.

THE ALDINE while issued with all the regularity, has none of the temporary or timely interest characteristic of ordinary periodicals. It is an elegant miscellany of pure, light, and graceful literature; and a collection of pictures, the rarest specimens of artistic skill, in black and white. Although each succeeding number affords a fresh pleasure to its friends, the real value and beauty of THE ALDINE will be most appreciated after it is bound up at the close of the year. While other publications may claim superior cheapness, we compared with rivals of a similar class. THE ALDINE is a unique and original conception—alone and unapproached—absolutely without competition in price or character. The possessor of a complete volume can not duplicate the quantity of fine paper and engravings in any other shape or number of volumes for ten times its cost; and, there is the chromo, besides!

The national feature of THE ALDINE must be taken in no narrow sense. True art is cosmopolitan. While THE ALDINE is a strictly American institution, it by no means confine itself entirely to the reproduction of native art. Its mission is to cultivate a broad and appreciative art taste, one that will discriminate only on grounds of intrinsic merit. Thus, while placing before the patrons of THE ALDINE, as a leading characteristic, the productions of the most noted American artists, attention will always be given to specimens from foreign masters, giving subscribers all the pleasure and instruction obtainable from home or foreign sources.

The artistic illustration of American scenery, original with THE ALDINE, is an important feature, and its magnificent plates are of a size more appropriate to the satisfactory treatment of details than can be afforded by any inferior page. The judicious interspersion of landscape, marine, figure, and animal subjects, sustain an unbalanced interest, impossible where the scope of the work confines the artist too closely to a single style of subject. The literature of THE ALDINE is a light and graceful accompaniment, worthy of the artistic features, with only such technical disquisitions as do not interfere with the popular interest of the work.

PREMIUM FOR 1875.

Every subscriber for 1875 will receive a fine steel portrait, in oil colors, of the same noble dog whose picture is a former issue attracted so much attention.

"MAN'S UNSELFISH FRIEND"

will be welcome in every home. Everybody loves such a dog, and the portrait is executed to true to the life, that it seems the veritable presence of the animal itself. The Rev. T. De Witt Talmage tells that his own Newfoundland dog (the finest in Brooklyn) barks at it! Although so natural, no one who sees this premium chromo will have the slightest fear of being bitten.

Besides the chromo, every advance subscriber to THE ALDINE for 1875 is constituted a member and entitled to all the privileges of

THE ALDINE ART UNION.

The Union owns the originals of all THE ALDINE pictures, which, with other paintings and engravings, are to be distributed among the members. To every series of 5,000 subscribers, 100 different pieces, valued at $10,000, are distributed as soon as the series is full, and the awards of each series as made are to be published in the next succeeding issue of THE ALDINE. This feature only applies to subscribers who pay for one year in advance. Full particulars in circular sent on application enclosing a stamp.

THE ALDINE will, hereafter, be obtainable only by subscription. There will be no reduced or club rates; cash for subscriptions must be sent to the publishers direct, or handed to the local canvasser, without responsibility to the publishers, except in cases where the certificate is given, bearing the fac-simile signature of JAMES SUTTON, President.
