A Queer Caterpillar. Mr. W. S. Warrock has shown us a most beautiful caterpillar, captured on his grape vine. The worm is translucent underneath has ten segments and is unprovided with anything like the feet of the ordinary caterpillar, but has instead a row of depressions or suckers lengthwise along the centre, by means of which it is able to climb with ease a perpendicular plate of glass or crawl along its under side when held horizontally. It adheres so tightly as to have the appearance of being glued on, and cannot be shaken off. The entire lateral circumference of the worm is surrounded by a row of tufts of short hairs arranged at regular intervals and apparently serving, like the whiskers of a cat, to warn their owner of the approach of danger while asleep or otherwise inattentive. Springing from a ground of a dark fawn color, on the back, near each extremity of the caterpillar are two fleshy protuberances of a length equal to about one. fourth that of the whole body, covered with hairs of the same color and the whole or gan doubtless intended for the same purpose as the tufts previously mentioned. On the superior extremity there are two additional organs of the same nature, though of but half the size of these, and on the inferior extremity there are two spots of a snow white at the base of the protuberances. The major portion of the back is covered by a saddle of a brilliant arsenic green edged with white, in the centre of which is an oblong patch of mouse color, shaded darker from the centre to the circumference, but separated from the green by a double crescent of pure white. In shape the body is not round, but about that of a double-turreted Monitor, and the head can be entirely drawn in out of sight. It is armed with a whitish proboscis, apparently for feeding on the juices of plants, and there are a number of organs about the head so minute that their nature can scarcey be determined without a microscope, be.

Mari Read to the temetery. As the street railway track has been torn up and removed from Seventh street, it has been suggested that the city authorities take into consideration the propriety of building a good marl road, commencing at the corner of Market and Seventh streets, running to Red Cross, and from thence out Red Cross to Oakdale Cemetery. By so doing a great deal of horse-flesh and harness-wear would be saved and thousands of the "animules" would ever remember the kindness displayed. Good marl sidewalks for the benefit of pedestrians, running from Red Cross to the Cemetery, would also add greatly to the public convenience. There are many visitors to our beautiful but "silent city of the dead," who would bail with delight the manifestation of any such regard for their comfort by our "City Fathers."

The Facts of the Case from a Reliable Source-The Trial to be Removed to Buncombe-A Ples of self-Befence Probable in the Case of Strange and No Case Against Bridgers - Their - Thermometer 96 in the shade Friends Advised to Dismiss Their Pears. &c.

The following account of the late disressing affair in Haywood county, in which two young men of this city were unfortunately concerned, we find in the Tarboro Southerner, the facts having been furnished to that paper by John L. Bridgers, Jr., Esq., of Tarboro, who was sent for soon - We learn that the workmen on after the sad occurrence to act as counsel in

According to this statement "Murray was not a son of the Sheriff of the county. as it was reported, and the statement that Strange was threatened with lynching is all bosh. The cause of the trouble was as follows: When Murray came up behind hand with his vehicle, he was told by Strange that he was paid for the trip and that he was two hours behind time. Murray replied that he had, to have his horse shod and came as soon as he could. Strange said, 'You had five hours notice and that is no excuse.' Murray retorted by saying. whoever says I had five hours' notice is a liar.' Strange then said, 'I say so, do you intend it for me?' Murray says, 'you can take it if you like,' jumping down from the hack remarking, 'I can whip any two of you.' Strange grasped a chair and attempted to strike him, but was stopped by ure, quietly reposed the two senior memhis friends.

"The party then drove on about thirteen miles from Waynesville when a wheel broke down and the driver of the wagon went off to a neighboring blacksmith shop to have it thief must have been within about a foot repaired. Murray, who drove the hack, of the side of the bed on which Mrs. II. then gave the party a cushion and blanket | was reclining, and she made a dash at him, tion of Strange went in that direction to see him could be discovered. Happily the whether it was the man with the broken would-be robber got nothing for his wheel, Strange in the meantime remarking pains, which piece of good fortune on to Preston Bridgers, 'where is your pistol, Mr. Haar's part was in all probability owing I don't see it in your overcoat?' Bridgers to the simple fact that he had rattling knobs replied, 'don't shoot away all my cartridges, I haven't many,' to which Strange said, 'all right. I merely want a few shots.' Murray was sitting near the spatterboard of the furnished with this peculiar style of knobs. back and Strange shortly afterwards approached him saying, 'I want to settle this matter with you peaceably; you called me a liar and I want you to take it back, as I am unwilling for you to go further with us after what you have said.' A woman working near by swore that she heard this remark. Murray replied, "you said I had five hours' notice, and folks that tell lies must expect to be called so.' He had a knife and a stick in his hand when he said this and stood up. Strange, who also had a small stick, struck him and Murray advanced on him with the knife drawn. Strange then said to him 'I have a pistol in my pocket and if you come on me with that knife I will shoot you." Murray stopped a moment. Then Strange said, "lay down your knife and that stick and I will cover it with the pistol and fight it out with you even if you are 30 or 40 fbs. heavier.' Murray refused and advanced again. Strange said I tell you for the last time if you come on me with that knife I will shoot you on the spot so sure as there is a God.' He continued to advance, and when he got within a few paces, Strange, who was standing by the roadside, fired. The shot did not take instantaneous effect and he advanced a step or two more and fell. Both the knife and stick were found in his hands after death. "Both Strange and Bridgers are still in ail, the latter declining to take advantage of bail, as Strange is still held in custody. The trial will be moved to Buncombe, an adjoining county, and Mr. Bridgers, the counsel, says there is little doubt but that a plea of self-defense can be sustained in behalf of Strange and no case can be gotten against Bridgers.

"The friends of these young gentlemen who were so much exercised over the news that first reached them, may dismiss their Trip Abandoned. The yacht Mary Kenan, which left Masonboro' Sound Tuesday morning last for a trip to Beaufort by way of the Sounds, in charge of five young men of this city, was compelled to return the next day, after proceeding about twenty miles, on account of the sudd en illness of the commander of the expedition, Capt. William Anderson. We learn, however, that another attempt to make the trip will probably be made on the 15th inst., when it is proposed to sail by moonlight. The party stopped at a point on the route and amused themselves for some time shooting marsh hens, which were abundant. They have no doubt of their ability to make a successful trip to Beaufort by the route they started upon.

Quarterly Meeting.

The third quarterly meeting of the present conference year commenced at the Front Street M. E. Church with a lave feast on Friday evening and preaching vesterday morning. The services of to-day will have the special interest due to the season, and the Presiding Elder, Rev. W. S. Black, will be present and officiate. We hear, also, that the Elder will conduct special services at the same church to-morrow.

Hobbery. Having tried their skill at nearly every other house in the neighborhood, the thieves concluded Friday night to pay a visit to Mr. Henry Haar, whose store and residence are on the corner of Seventh and Chesnut streets. Entrance to the building was effected by climbing upon the fence at the rear of the house, on the Chesnut street side, from thence to the upper piazza, from which the thief passed through a window, the blinds of which were closed but the sash raised. From the rooms in this quarter of the house, having first shut off the gaslight which was burning, he passed into a room fronting on Seventh street, opening a door leading into the blind pi azza on the north side. He then went down stairs, opened the front passage door and side door leading into the lower plazza on the north side of the house. Having thus secured himself against the probable misfortune on his part of being captured, (the keys of the doors all being in the locks on the inside) the thief returned to the second floor, entered the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Haar and commenced the work of plunder upon which he was bent. He first "went through" the pockets of Mr. H.'s pantaloons, but finding nothing but a knife and a key he threw the garment upon the floor. His next move was to examine the bureau drawers. These were furnished with wooden knobs, which, when seized, gave a rattling sound. The bureau was in very close proxi nity to the hed on which, unconscious of the vile monster who would despoil them of their treas

In connection with this attempted robbery, it may be well to mention the fact that a dog belonging to a colored man named James Dry, residing on the opposite side of the street from Mr. Haar, was found dead yesterday morning, having evidently been poisoned, and the presumption is that the same thief who visited Mr. H. either poisoned him with the intention of robbing Dry's house, or that the animal was poisoned under mistaken impression that he belonged > Wilmington as a Cotton Port. We have very recently spoken at some length, though incidentally, of the prospects of our city in this connection, and only return to the subject now for the purpose of calling attention to an appreciative paragraph or two from the Raleigh News,

"The same energies which have within the last few years developed them so much will not flag until they have accomplished

all that is before them.' When it is recollected that the receipts of cotton at this port during the past season have been almost double the receipts of the preceding season, we think the tendency of the trade in this direction will be evident; and our merchants have proved their own faith in its increase by adding greatly to their facilities for its reception. We can assure our friends throughout the State that Wilmington is at last awake to her great
