Hon. Fernando Wood requests the Herald to deny the statements of the New York Expansionists that he is "raising money for the Democratic canvass in Ohio." He has neither raised nor given a dollar "to assist the election of Allen." The Herald well says: "It is a strange condition of affairs to see a Democratic leader i. New York denying with emphasis, and as though it were a serious imputation upon him, that he had 'given one dollar' to assist a brother Demo ratio leader in Ohio."

General Wheeler.

[Richmond Dispatch of Saturday.] There appeared in vesterday morning's Dispatch a short sketch, which originated in the Cincinnati Enquirer, giving some account of an individual professing to be General Wheeler, of the late Confederate army.

Mrs, Whitson, of Tennessee, at present in that city-a lady of literary inclinations, who is author of a book on the war-knowing the General Wheeler for whom it is supposed the individual described in the Enquirer meant to pass himself off, has written the following letter, completely contradicting the Cincinnati story so far as General Wheeler is

RICHMOND, VA., Oct. 1, 1875. I take great pleasure in correcting a little article going the rounds of newspapers which does great injustice to a gallant ex-Confederate officer. The tall, 'haggard-looking tramp who claimed to be General Wheeler was mistaken in the name. Our General Wheeler was General Jo. Wheeler, a dashing cavalry officer, and, I think, by birth a Georgian. I have seen him often during the time Bragg was at Murfreesboro, and General Jo. Wheeler was a small man, of low stature, and something over thirty years old, possibly. Today he cannot be more than fortyfive years of age, if he is that. He married since the war a Virginia wealthy lady, and now lives near Deentur. Alabama, and was never given to dissipation that we ever heard of I am glad to be able to correct this report about one of the gallant cav-

The Public Schools. The various public schools of this city will open to morrow. The school houses have all been placed in thorough repair and will now be comfortable to both teachers and pupils. The schools for white children, two in number, will be under the care of Miss M. E. Ellison, who will supervise, systemize and grade them. The Union school house is situated on Sixth, between Nun and Church streets, in the southern section of the city, and will be under the immediate management of Mrs. P. W. Fanning with assistant teachers. The Hemmingway school is located on Fourth, between Red Cross and Campbell streets, and will be under the control of linally better known by that title than any Mrs. Flora J. Wise, with assistant teachers.

The colored schools are four in number, consisting of Williston school, on Seventh street, in the southern section of the city; the Campbell Square school, on Sixth, between Red Cross and Campbell streets; Trinity Chapel school, corner of Brunswick and Seventh streets; and one (without name) on the corner of Ninth and Chesnut streets. These schools will all be under the supervision of Rev. D. J. Saunders, col-

The principals and teachers of both white and colored schools, who are selected from our own population, are represented to be in every way competent to fill the positions. The colored schools all have colored teachers. The committee, of which Mr. A. H. Morris is Chairman, say they are determined that these schools shall be among the best.

Ebenezer Elliott.

We have been several times within the past fewdays asked for information in regard to the "Corn-Law Rhymer," from whom we quoted a couplet the other morning.

Ebenezer Elliott, the Corn-Law Rhymer, was an English artisan whose most noted rhymes were made in advocacy of the lay providing for the importation of corn into England duty free, which was agitated and finally adopted at about the time of the close of our revolutionary war. His efforts in behalf of this measure were often rude and ill-considered, but frequently had a degree of poetic thought about them that appealed strongly to the sympathies of the great mass of people of his own class, for whom he wrote and whose sentiments he reflected, and aroused them to a degree of zealous furv in their demands for "chean bread" which was viewed with deep concern by the ruling classes and finally proved sufficiently potent with Parliament to secure the passage of the law, although a great reduction of the public revenues seemed probable in consequence. As a result of the public attention he attracted by his advocacy of this measure, Elliott came to be familiarly spoken of in aristocratic circles as the "Core-Lyw Rhymer," until he was other. Upon the result of that experiment has in a great measure depended the whole commercial policy of England from that day to this. Experience has demonstrated an increase of the public revenues and of material prosperity by the policy of admit ting the breadstuffs and crude productions of foreign countries duty free, bringing the means of subsistence and employment to English workmen upon English soil and keeping at home an immense population for whose support the cultivation of the land, or, indeed, any other employment than in manufacturing pursuits would have proved entirely inadequate. With a dense population and prosperous manufactories i has been found possible of late years to raise a larger revenue from internal taxation upon four or five articles than formerly when almost every article of internal and external traffic was taxed. We of North Carolina may learn a Review, have secured an office in Evans' useful lesson from this and similar experiences the world over. Every State which insignificant from the exhaustion of its producing capacity, while every State that has devoted its energies to the manufacture of its own crude products and the exchange of the manufactured articles for the crude products of less far-sighted communities has become rich and powerful in proportion. Ebenezer Elliott probably never understood the full significance to his country of the results of the agitation he did so much to bring to a successful issue, but if our knowledge of them shall serve us any in our efforts to become a self-supporting commonwealth we may well yield to him some meed of gratitude for his persistence in the cause he deemed to be right, and some measure of applause for the rough strong rhymes and thoughts which were the weapons with which he won his fight.

Exciting Runaway-Narrow Escape.

One of the most exciting runaways it has ever been our fortune to witness occurred on Princess street yesterday afternoon, about 6 o'clock. A horse attached to a dray, the property of a colored man named David Jones, by some means became frightened near the corner of Front street and started at full speed up Princess, turning into the sidewalk on the north side of the street, running into a pile of sofas and other furniture and material in front of Messrs. White & Zimmerman's, on the corner of Princess and Second streets. scattering the articles in every direction and damaging them to a considerable extent, running against a wooden post at the some corner and knocking it into "smithcreens, 'and then across the street to the opp site corner, where the wheels came in collision first with the lamp post and then with the corner of the building occupied by Mr. J. W. Woolvin, the dray being turned bottom upwards by the force molished, the horse breaking loose from the vehicle and running to the corner of Princess and Third streets, where he slipped and fell on the pavement by Capt. Southerland's livery stables and was there secured

The runaway created the most intense excitement on the street, more particularly from the fact that several narrow escapes on the part of children and others occurred. Soon after taking to the sidewalk, somewhere in the vicinity of the Post printing office, one wheel of the dray grazed the side of a baby carriage in which a child of Mr. J. G. Voss was sitting, striking the cross piece attached to the handle of the carriage, wheeling the tiny vehicle round like a top, but failing to throw the child out or to injure it. Another nurrow, escape was that of several children, with their nurses, who were on the sidewalk just east of Mr. Woolvin's shop. The horse at first was making directly for them, while they appeared to be so paralyzed with fear as to be anable to make an effort to save themselves, and at the same time the crowd, which by this time througed the street, looked on with speechless horror, expecting to see them crushed to death. Fortunately, however, the horse turned off the sidewalk before reaching them and ran the balance of his course in the street.

The scene at the intersection of Princess and Second streets after the runaway was such as to remind one of the effects of a hurricane or some other terrible revolution of the elements.

We learn that two other runaways occurred during the afternoon, but no partic- | yesterday: ular damage ensued.

Wilmington and smithville connected by Telegraph.

At last the Government line to the mouth of the Cape Fear is completed, and Wilmington may be said to be in full connection with her lower harbor. The Signal Office here has received its equipment of instruments, and Sergeant B. C. Anderson has established a Signal Office in Smithville to operate the other end of the line.

Several messages were yesterday sent from Smithville to Gen. Myer, Chief Signal Officer of the Service, at Washington, and the following directed to Col. DeRosset and Mr. A. H. VanBokkelen was received here at 8:35 last evening:

The "Great New York and New Orleans Zoological and Equestrian Exposition" will be here on the 5th, and the 5th will be Tuesday. The first performance will commence at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of that day, and be followed by another in the evening at 7. As Cole's has the advantage of being the first menagerie and circus of the season, and of being generally well spoken of by our brethren of the press in those places where it has already appeared, we have no doubt that any number of spare dimes previously "salted" for such purposes by young and oldsters will be trotted out on that day and go to swell the total receipts of the big show.
