SIATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Immigration—Speeches by Senators Bayard and Ransom.

At the meeting of the State Agricultural Society Thursday night Col. L. L. Polk introduced the following resolution:

Resolved, That it behooves this society to inaugurate such measures as may have the greatest tendency to encourage immigration to our State.

The resolution elicited a highly interesting discussion. The resolution was finally referred to a committee composed of Kemp P. Battle, Dr. McCallum, Col. Polk, Gen. Clingman and Major Blount, with instruction to report Friday night.

On Friday night, Gen. Clingman, in behalf of this committee, presented the report:

WHEREAS, The State of North Carolina, with a territory larger than either of the States of New York or Pennsylvania, a climate favorable and pre-eminently healthy; soil generally fertile and abundant water power; with a great variety of useful minerals; with the best timber trees, and in as great abundance and variety as can be found in any territory of equal extent in the world; has comparatively a sparse population; and whereas, the population of North Carolina is peaceful and orderly, and her system of government well regulated; and whereas, she only lacks population and capital to make her a great State; therefore

Resolved, That we, the members of the North Carolina Agricultural Society, do extend a cordial invitation to all emigrants, from the old country or the new, who may be inclined to make their homes among us, and do pledge them the fullest protection of person and property under an equal and just system of laws, and assure them that they will be most kindly welcomed by the citizens of the State.

These resolutions were advocated at some length, in a most happy manner, by Messrs. Mills, Clingman, Kemp P. Battle, Gov. Boguen, W. H. Cox, and others, and adopted without a dissent.

The meeting of the Society Friday night was of a most interesting character, being replete with good speeches and much good sound argument.

Soon after the opening of the meeting Senator Bayard, of Delaware, accompanied by Senator Ransom and other gentlemen, entered the room, when the gentlemen were invited to seats in the hall.

Gen. Clingman, in a few warm words of welcome, introduced Mr. Bayard to the Society.

We condense from the Sentinel an account of Mr. Bayard's remarks and Senator Ransom's reply:

Mr. Bayard rose and in conversation tossed a little tremulous with feeling, said he did not feel himself a stranger in North Carolina or among North Carolinians.

His heart had been too often touched with the same wrongs and sufferings which they had endured; he had felt their woes too deeply to be a stranger to them.

He was a member of the committee of investigation, as it was called, appointed by Congress in 1870, to pry into the private affairs of the sovereign State of North Carolina.

The committee was appointed for unfriendly inquisitorial and unconstitutional purposes; and as the only Democrat upon it, he had stood between the people of North Carolina and those who sought to malign the fair name and fame of a noble State.

He had been taught from his childhood to look upon the people of North Carolina as a simple-hearted, brave and honorable race. He knew them to be an agricultural people, producers and not mere consumers; and there was no class in the State to whom he would rather speak than its representative agriculturists.

He closed with an eloquently expressed hope that in the future of prosperity and happiness which surely lies ahead of North Carolina, there might never come anything to interfere with the friendship and common brotherhood which he cherished for the gentlemen before him and for all the good people of their proud State.

The speech was received with repeated outbursts of applause.

On motion of Captain Thigpen, General Matt. Ransom was called on to respond, which he did in a vein of mingled pathos and humor that brought down the house time and again, in vigorous demonstrations of approval.

Col. I. J. Young introduced a resolution favoring the appointment by the President of the Society of one of the committeemen from each Congressional district and three from the city of Raleigh, to solicit contributions for centennial purposes.

Gen. Ransom introduced a substitute leaving the whole matter in the hands of the Executive Committee of the Agricultural Society.

Gen. Clingman thought both original and substitute ought to be adopted, as both were good.

After some harmonious discussion, Col. Heck introduced the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That the Executive Committee of the State Agricultural Society be instructed to aid His Excellency, the Governor, as far as practicable in securing proper representation of the products and resources of North Carolina at the Centennial Exposition to be held in Philadelphia, A. D. 1876.

Several essays were read, one by Mr. D. W. Kerr, of Alamance, on "Beef Raising and Butter Making," one on "Grass Culture," by James Norwood, of Orange, "Grape Culture in North Carolina," by J. Page-Stecker, of Shelby; and "The Scuppernon Grape," by H. T. Guion, of Craven.

Mr. Wiley moved that the thanks of the Society be extended to all these gentlemen, and that their essays be printed in the Agricultural Journal. Adopted.

A discussion arose on the subject of wine, the participants being Mr. Wiley, Gen. Clingman, Capt. Denison and Dr. P. E. Hines.

Mr. Wiley moved that the thanks of the society be handed to Messrs. Arrington, Hoke and Hicks, and to the gentlemen from a distance who have shown so much interest and taken so active a part in promoting the success of the Fair. Adopted.

Local Notes. Nothing of a criminal nature before the Magistrates' Courts yesterday.

We learn that Our Annual, an advertising sheet, will be issued again during Fair week.

John D. Bellamy, Esq., of this city, duly qualified yesterday and took his seat as a member of the Bar.

The British Barque Premier, Capt. White, was reported in below yesterday afternoon. She is an iron vessel of 450 tons.

Early risers Sunday morning reported the presence of a heavy frost in this city and vicinity, which had fallen the previous night.

We are requested to state that Rev. J. C. Hunt will preach at the Second Baptist Church, on Sixth, between Church and Castle streets, this evening.

The English brig Signal, which draws 9 feet 5 inches, was towed in through the new channel at Snow's Marsh on Sunday last. She arrived here yesterday.

Parties from the vicinity of the seacoast report a heavy frost Saturday night. At Masonboro Sound, we are informed, the potato vines were very generally killed.

The time for the holding of the Cape Fear Agricultural Fair is rapidly approaching. Let everybody be ready for it. Ladies, as you prepare specimens of your handiwork?

We learn that Mr. Geo. Gates, formerly of this city and for some time connected with the Carolina Central Railway, has been appointed Master Mechanic of the Western N. C. Railroad.

Mayor Canaday being absent in attendance upon the meeting of the Commissioners of the Western N. C. Railroad, which takes place at Salisbury to-day, there was no session of his Court yesterday.

Such of the implements for the Thanksgiving Day fun proposed by the Athletic Club as have been received are attracting a good deal of attention daily in Messrs. Brown & Roddick's show-window.

The receipts of cotton at this port since September 1st foot up 4,038 bales. For the same period last year the receipts footed up 1,732 bales, showing a gain in the present year, for the time specified, of 2,306 bales.

The first Wilson snipe (commonly, though not correctly, known as the English snipe) of the season, we believe, was bagged yesterday by our own Nimrod. Sceloporus had evidently just arrived, and was a trifling tin.

Rev. Mr. Payne on Sunday night delivered the first of a series of "Sunday evening lectures to be addressed particularly to young people." The discourse was from that most fruitful theme, the parable of the Prodigal Son.

The prizes to be awarded to the successful military company and band in the competition which is to take place at our coming fair, will, we understand, be presented on the grounds as soon as a decision is rendered. These prizes, we learn, are of superior workmanship.

We are requested to return the thanks of Mr. S. Sternberger to Officer C. C. Taylor for his punctuality and kindness for the past eight weeks, during which time he has been guarding the small-pox cases at his (Mr. S's) house. Mr. S. has now, unfortunately, recovered and the last vestige of the disease has disappeared.

Our Fair.

We are glad to learn that the prospects for a large attendance and a full exhibition of manufactures and products at our next fair are very encouraging.

The gentlemen in charge of the management and conduct of our fairs are among our leading property owners, merchants and business men, with several of the largest and most successful planters of New Hanover, Pender, Duplin, Cumberland, Sampson and Orange counties. They have the interests of the Association at heart, and in their efforts to keep up and enhance the value of these annual exhibitions they should receive the hearty support of the entire Cape Fear section.

The fairs are of decided benefit to merchant and planter, and to the city of Wilmington they are of undoubted advantage, pecuniarily and otherwise. The last fair, we are told, resulted in a profit to the Association, whereby they were able to reduce in a measure the debt which burdens them. A few more fairs, even equal to the last one, will enable the Association to add further improvements to their grounds and to offer larger premiums to exhibitors. We hope that greater interest will be taken by our citizens and that they will encourage this Association by their attendance, as well as by exhibiting their wares. We should have, and no doubt will have a larger and superior fair this year than last.

We have been favored by the Secretary with the following points of interest connected with our approaching fair:

Favorable replies have been received from the Norfolk (Va.) Light Infantry and the Raleigh (N. C.) Light Infantry to the effect that they will be present; other military organizations are also expected. Capt. M. P. Taylor and H. G. Flanner, of our local companies, have been appointed a Committee of Reception to visit military.

The Committee on Horse Races are Messrs. O. G. Parsley, Jr., T. C. McIlhenny, W. B. Binford, T. J. Southerland and J. K. Davis.

The President, S. L. Fremont, General Superintendent, J. A. Willard, and Col. J. W. Atkinson are authorized to lease the various privileges on the grounds.

Gen. M. W. Ransom has been invited to take command of the military.

The Ball Committee are yet to be appointed.

The list of Assistant Marshals will be published in a day or two.

Superior Courts.

The fall term of the Superior Court for this county convened in this city yesterday morning, His Honor Judge A. A. McKay presiding. The morning was mostly taken up in the delivery of His Honor's charge to the jury, which was full and explicit as to their duties. The criminal docket was taken up in the afternoon, but only one case had been finally disposed of up to dark. This was the State vs. Susan M. Frank, charged with larceny, who was found guilty.

The case of the State and W. A. French and John McLaure vs. the City of Wilmington, in reference to the injunction matter, is set for a hearing to-morrow.

An Ostrage.

We learn that a white woman was coming out of a store in the neighborhood of Eighth and Chestnut streets, Saturday night, where she had been to purchase some article, when she accidentally stepped on the foot of a colored man, several of whom were standing in front of the door, and just as she stepped from his equilibrium. The lady then repaired to another grocery in the vicinity, and as she came out she was met at the door by the man whose foot she had trod upon, who, as she descended to the sidewalk, gave her a severe blow on the back of the neck with his fist, knocking her down, and then making off with all possible speed. She did not recognize the man, and has no means of finding out who he was, but an effort should be made to bring him to justice, particularly as the lady was severely injured by the blow and laid together.

The Market Bell.

It has been suggested that the market house bell be removed from its present position and placed in a small belfry which could be erected at a trifling cost on the City Hall building. This suggestion is made on the ground that, as it is used in case of fire to sound the alarm, it would not only be in a more central location, but at such a eminence that it could readily be heard all over the city. A great many people never heard the bell ring for the fire Saturday morning, and consequently knew nothing of it, until they came down the street. It is argued, in short, that as the bell is one of the best in the city, taking its size into consideration, it should be placed in a position where it could do the most good.

Postal Matters.

Ferries frequently date postal cards in the lower left hand corner on the address side. Such, we are informed by Postmaster Brink, violate the postal laws, and double letter postage has to be collected on such cards. Nothing but the address should be written on the side intended for that purpose.

The Street Cars.

The street cars jump the track frequently at Front and Red Cross streets, causing delay and annoyance. We noticed one of the rails sunken a little out of

Before the sermon.

While we waited, our thoughts wandered from the spiritual to the material—from the object of our being there to the comfort which we felt now that we were seated. From our gracefully fragile-looking bench of wood and castron in the brilliantly-lighted audience-chamber our mind carried us back to the traditional "pew" of our fathers and with a half mournful impulse led us to mark the progress of innovation.

First we may suppose that it was the trunk of a fallen tree under a thatched shelter, in this wilderness-land; but as the settlements grew in size and the churches became more blessed in store, the more formal and stately few from across the seas supplanted that of primeval simplicity. It was a great box-like structure, with high sides and back, and frequently so arranged by the aid of curtains and a high pulpit that the occupants of each pew could only see and be seen by the minister. That arrangement was thought to secure greater attention to the sermon by restricting the field of view. It might have also afforded inducements to those who liked a quiet nap but for the fact that the seat was too hard and the back too straight to enable one to find any position so endurable as the bolt upright and unsupported, with frequent changes from place to place. A revival of this feature might possibly be attended with some good effects now-a-days, but we fear these would be greatly overbalanced by the reduced congregations when we reflect how many are suspected of attending for the purpose of maintaining a reputation for zeal and regular habits and how many for the purpose of maintaining their ascendancy in the realm of fashion. In this box were ushered first the children, then the matron, next the older boys, and at the head of the pew the father. Some vestige of this order of entering the pew is still maintained. We mention it only to explain that these were days when worship was not unattended with danger from savage foes; consequently the father and sons took the positions where they might most quickly assume the defensive in case of attack, for which purpose they were accompanied by their old flint-lock muskets.

It may have been because the imminence of danger seemed to be further removed by the pushing forward of the frontier beyond the vicinity of the older settlements that it began to occur to some bold innovators that worship might perhaps be acceptably offered up from seats calculated to make the worshippers undergo fewer of the pains of martyrdom, or it may be that the mothers of the past were moved by a sense of the needless sufferings experienced by their husbands and children to undertake to do something for their relief; at any rate—not without some opposition, we may well believe—an era of well-stuffed cushions followed. Then, moved by a desire, perhaps, to see how his good friends and neighbors enjoyed the sermon, the father left his curtains undrawn, or neglected to put them up again when the old became dusty and faded; and the march of innovation once begun, when the new church was built, the sides and back of the pew were made a little lower, to let in the cooling breeze of summer or the cheerful sunlight of winter; and as the curtains and backs fell away the pulpit dropped down from its former giddy height to a lower level. We can remember sitting in these old straight-backed pews when a boy, and when we go on excursions far into the country now-a-days sometimes we have our long-gone memories renewed by coming across them in some little church. For comfort they were a grand improvement on the older pattern, but many are the backaches and the weary Monday morning wakings they have given us.

In the later days, some one with an inventive brain and heart full of compassion for his kind must have got hold of the old stiff seat and given it, bodily, a tilt backward. In this new one slipped back effectually, and rested his back most effectually. For a sleeper, the same was attained. Some one seems to have observed that peculiarity, and by again tilting the seat forward and leaving the back its backward slant gave us a pew in which one may rest his back by sitting cross-legged and pressing the same with some effort against the sloping back foremost, but in case the effort is for a moment relaxed, as in the case of one who would sleep, instantly he slides forward until his knee or foot touches the back of the pew in front, and he sinks into an indistinguishable heap in the corner, thereby attracting the attention of his neighbor, who may arouse him, if so disposed. When he arises to go thence he carries with him on the back of his best broadcloth a portion of the varnish and graining, which adheres by contact and is torn from the back of the pew. This is our common pew to-day.

But here comes some smart manufacturer with an idea in his head and substitutes a light bench of hard wood, supported by graceful iron castings, without any squeak in its composition, with just about the right inclination of seat to back, every part adjusted by machinery to the prominences and depressions of the human anatomy, very graceful and unsatisfactory to sleeping, with just the minimum of adhesiveness in the hard varnish of the narrow back, and very comfortable to the attentive worshipper, withal. But it has given the church much the appearance of a school-room and robbed us of the last vestige of our traditional pew. We scarcely know whether most to praise the excellent adaptation of the new article to its uses or to deplore the spirit of change which has rendered possible the supplanting of an institution so long and intimately associated with the religious history of our people.

But we suspect that the new seat has the additional attribute of being an easy place to indulge in a reverie before sermon. The minister has come, and our mind is called back like a wanderer to listen to the solemn lesson of the Prodigal.

Arrest of a Knacker.

Officers Strode, Ashe and Whitney yesterday arrested William Draper, alias "Pinky," on a charge of assault and battery, together with a peace warrant, issued twelve months ago. Also Thos. Canaday, a prisoner who made his escape from the workhouse some three years ago.

Dickey Wood was taken in custody by Officer Whitney on a charge of larceny and a peace warrant of twelve months' standing.

These parties had been successfully dodging the law a good while, but a day of judgment came at last.

Duprez & Benedict's Minstrels.

These artists in burnt cork are advertised to give an entertainment at the Opera House to-morrow evening. We have seen the Duprez & Benedict troupe of years past, and say in simple justice that if it is the old troupe which is to be with us now, the lovers of fun have a real feast in store. Our readers will have noticed that we rarely speak with so little reservation of the merits of travelling companies.
