

after being subjected to the severest tests. Col. F. D. Stone, of Cleveland, Ohio, is the inventor of the process, and will exhibit the machine and apparatus used by him in the American Institute fair. Some discussion on the various systems in vogue for the preservation of ergs was excited by the reading of the letter. It was agreed by several members that eggs could not be successfully preserved for any length of time by any known plan of hermetical sealing, the changes of temperature having an effect upon them when an attempt was made to preserve them in this manner. Mr. Bruen, of New Jersey, said that he had preserved eggs well for five months by packing them ends down, in dry salt.

heartily of the cabbage, soon after which she was stricken as the children had been and died. The father and mother then set about examining the food, and were horrified at finding that a small rattlesnake, which they had no doubt had burrowed itself in the head of cabbage, which had been put into the pot without splitting, had been cooked with the food, and hence the terrible result which followed.

We give the above for what it is worth. Our informant says he got his information from a man who lives in Richmond county. and says he was also told the names of the parties and their place of residence, but cannot now call them to mind.
