It is the intention of the President to organize a corps for the survey, and have it in the field by the 22d of this month.

- Gov. Brogden has been addressed by the correspondence committee of the Palmetto Guard, who propose to celebrate the centennial of the battle of Fort Moultrie next year, desiring him to furnish the names of the officers and men of Col. Clark's command, who were stationed at Haddrell's Point, just in the rear of the fort. The object is to give our State her just proportion of the glory attaching to this memorable event in our revolutionary struggle. A monument is to be erected on the spot.

- Raleigh Sentinel : A. Overbach, of Uslar, in Hanover, Germany, writes Gov. Brogden, under date of October 16, that his brother-in-law, one Franz Remme, emigrated to America, about 80 years ago, from near the Hartz mountains, and settled somewhere in this State, where he is supposed to reside now, the owner of a plantation. Information is wanted as to the exact whereabouts of Remme, in order that he may receive some property in Germany which has recently fallen to him.

-- Asheville Expositor : Judge Dick, in speaking of the abuse of the offi-cers of this court in the issuance of process, said he had heard of a case in Madison county where a party had been indicted for cutting logs for a man who was building a still-house. This man was indicted as an illicit dist'ller! Another case of a party selling a few hands of frosted tobacco to a neighbor. We are glad to witness the efforts of Judge Dick to correct the many abuses in the management of commissioners and other officers of this court. He announces a new set of rules with a view to correct these abuses

The Confidence Game. Familis, and especially lapies, who usually spend the most of their time at home, cannot ibe too careful in guarding against imposition, as well as theft. There is no telling to what extent the "confidence game" has been played in this city, but that it is often resorted to as a means of "raising the wind" has been sufficiently demonstrated. An instance in point occurred a few days since, and we only give it here to show what means or manoeuvers are generally used by these scamps to obtain possession of articles they wish. A colored man called at the residence of a gentleman on Market street and stated to the lady of the house that her son, who was pursuing his usual avocation at the place of business of his employers on the wharf, had sent him for a certain pair of pants, accurately describing them, (having no doubt often noticed them on his person), saying that he wished to have them cleaned. The lady, who had no suspicion of any trick being intended, hurriedly passed up-stairs to the wardrobe of her son, secured the pants and delivered them to the man. During her absence, however, the fellow had rfleected a little, and the result appears to have been the conclusion in his own depraved mind that if he could succeed so easily in getting a pair of pants he might add still further to his store and thus provide himself against the chilly blasts of the coming winter. Therefore, when the lady returned (the quick eye of the confidence man having in the meantime detected an overcoat hanging on the rack in the passage) he informed her that her son had also requested that his overcoat be sent with the pants, as it likewise wanted cleaning. The garment was duly delivered and the "confidence" man departed. In the evening, when the son returned home, his mother questioned him as to the garments referred to, when it was found that he knew nothing at all about the matter, the articles having fallen into the hands of a party to whose identity the family have. not the slightest clue.
