Deaths from Old Age. The London Times says:

It was but the other day that an old Irish woman died at the age of one hundred and twenty-five, who, to the confusion of the anti-tobacco association, was a constant lover of the weed, and a Hungarian journal now announces the death of a very old maid who lately expired in the hospital at Pesth, aged one hundred and twelve years. Her name was Anna Petrovich, and she was born at Waitzen on the 73th of June, 1763; here she remained until her twelfth year; she then came to Pesth and supported herself by needle work. Later in life she became housekeeper to an old gentleman, after whose death she. being then seventy-seven, was left entirely destitute. The remaining thirty-five years of her life was spent in beggary. At one time, however, existence smiled upon poor Anna Pe. trovich; this was in 1779, when an honest journeyman sought her hand. But her happiness was of short duration; the young man died suddenly, and his betrothed mourned his loss for fully ninety-six years, the whole remainder of her protracted existence. It must be acknowledged that this poor woman's biography is not a cheerful contribution to the history of centenarians, but sad as it is, it suggests the expediency of buying an annuity when approaching a mature age, seventy-seven or so."

We need more of such men as Messrs, Coke, Brown & Co. to develop the resources of the South, while it would be a means of better informing the people of the North as to our real condition. The Pestival To-Night. Our friends should bear in mind that the ladies of the First Presbyterian Church will hold a Pestival at Meginney Hall this evening. The attendance should be large, as this is the only entertainment of the character announced for this week, and especially as we have no doubt that those who are present will be amply repaid. Supper will be provided, and the refreshments will consist of such tempting luxuries as ice cream, jellies, syllabub, cake, &c.

Twenty Years. In the case of Wm. Walter Williams, convicted of arson in two indictments, one for burning the storehouse and the other the warehouse of Mr. Gore, allusion to which was made in our last issue, the sen tence was ten years at hard labor in the State Penitentiary in each case. The Horry (S. C.) News, commenting on the matter, says: "The convict is about 19 rears of age, was born at Little River, where he lived with his mother till about seven or eight years since, when he removed with his mother to Wilmington, N.

C. The extreme penalty of the law in this State is imprisonment in the Penitentiary for life, and the minimum ten years. In this case the Judge took into consideration the youth of the convict, and the tears and agony of a widowed mother, and gave him the benefit of the least penalty of the law.

The prisoner was not able to employ counsel, but Mr. W. W. Sellers, of the Marion bar, and Mr. Price volunteered their services, and he was ably defended, but the evidence, though not positive, was so thoroughly connected in facts that the jury, no matter how inclined to pity, were forced to find him guilty."

A New Invention.

We examined yesterday Macumber's Power Baling Press, a new cotton press invented and patented by Mr. J. W. Macumber, of this city. It is designed especially for the use of planters and can be worked by two good men, though it is intended to be run by the same power that runs the cotton gin. Thus the cotton can be taken as it comes from the gin and baled and compressed in the time it takes to make up an ordinary bale. A 450 pound bale is by this press reduced to the space of 2 feet square by 4 feet in length, which is about one-third the size of an ordinary bale, and Mr. Macumber estimates that, if worked by hand, two men can press at least eight bales per day. We also examined some of the bales that had been pressed, and found their bulkiness reduced as claimed, and as solid as a block of wood. The press, which is located in a lot nearly opposite the office "Married and Divorced" at the Opera of the Messrs, Willard, on North Water House. We were happy to see that the street, has been inspected by a number of small audience did not dampen the spirits our citizens who agree in the impression of the troupe and that the characters were that it is a very useful invention.

Mr. Macumber will have one or more of the compressed bales on exhibition at the

he Vi-Iting Military.

Dispatches were received yesterday afternoon from Norfolk and Raleigh announcing the fact that the Norfolk City Guards, with Col. Wm. Lamb under their escort, and the Raleigh Light Intantry, Capt. B. C. Manley, The Wilmington Light Infantry, Capt. Taylor, and the Cape Fear Light Artillery Company, Capt. Flanner, will meet the An audience more in keeping with the visiting military at the depot and escort merits of the company will doubtless be in them to their quarters.

The members of the Light Infantry and Cape Fear L. A. Companies will meet at their respective Armories at 5 o'clock, from whence they will march to the depot and receive their guests.

We learn by the Landmark, received last night, that the "Guards" of that city will be accompanied by a number of invited guests and by the New Hampshire's band.

A Watch Stolen and Returned-A Heward with No Questions sked. A gentleman who had been robbed of a valuable gold watch and chain while in attendance upon the Weldon Fair arrived in this city a few days since, whereupon he privately circulated the information that he would give $150 for the recovery or return of the same and "no questions asked," the money to be left at the store of Messrs. C. D. Myers & Co. Yesterday a man walked into the store in question, placed the identical watch on the counter, which was recognized by the mark which had been left with Capt. Myers, received the reward of $150 and walked out. The chain alone is said to have been worth the money.

One of our Princess street friends who loves a good joke perpetrated one yesterday. which is too good to be lost. He had purchased a new pocketbook, and the idea occurred to him that as he could not sell the old one he would "sell" somebody with it. He thereupon stuffed it full of old papers, etc., tied a string round it and made it assume the appearance generally of a valuable prize. He then got some one to take charge of the package, and the party dropped it on the sidewalk on the north side of Princess, near the corner of Second street. In the meantime our wag, with two or three friends, took their stations at the window of one of the magistrates' offices on the opposite side of the street.

pears, desired the presence of this witness. Pretty soon a colored man, well known who at the time was sick at Laurinburg, about the City Hall, came along, saw the well stuffed pocketbook, containing what he supposed would be almost a fortune to him, slapped one foot on it and kept it there until two men he saw approaching had passed, in the meantime leaning carelessly against a tree and pretending to be scanning the "Clara Wildman" posters on the wall adjoining Mr. Woolvin's undertaker's establishment. As soon as the two men had passed, the finder cautiously looked up and down the street, gathered the prize between his feet, made a hasty swoop for it and quickly jammed it into his pocket. He was going down the street, probably on some errand, when he came across the package, but now he seemed to have changed his mind, for he slowly retraced his .ejs, looking as "happy as a big sun-flower," c. ered the Court House and the building adjoining, but probably found no opportunity to examine his treasure, and finally wended his way to the City Hall, where he probably soon found to his consternation and profound disappointment that he had been "sold." Fire Last Night. A fire broke out about 7 o'clock last night n a frame grocery store on the railroad embankment at the crossing of McRae street. An alarm was sounded from a church bell in the upper part of the city and the Fire Department responded with commendable promptness, taking into consideration the long pull through deep sand that was required to reach the spot, but before a stream could be got to bear upon it, the fire had broken out of the light frame building and obtained full possession of a small house adjoining that had been occupied by a colored family. About this time the Little Giant steamer arrived, and getting into position at the corner of Seventh and Bladen got the first stream on the fire through some seven hundred feet of hose. The scarcity of water in the neighborhood doubtless prevented other companies from getting to work quite so promptly. The fire was prevented from spreading to other frame buildings close at hand, the Fifth Ward Bucket Company doing good service to that end. but the store and dwelling which first caught were destroyed. We heard that the store was occupied by a young man named Williams and was fully insured. We also heard it asserted on information that goods had been removed from the building on Sunday. Of the correctness of these statements, bowever, we were unable to obtain would arrive here this afternoon at 6 o'clock. any confirmation. We thoubt not they will

> The Clinton Pair. Our northern neighbor, the Goldsboro Messenger, learns that the exhibition at the Sampson County Agricultural Fair, held last week at Clinton, was a success all things considered. The Messenger says: "The Floral Hall department reflects credit on the Sampson county ladies. The agricultural department was well represented, and there was considerable fine stock on exhibition, for which Sampson county is so noted. The attendance on Wednesday was all that the friends of the Fair could have anticipated, and would have been doubled for Thursday, but for the inclement state of the weather. There was some good racing, chiefly confined to Sampson county horses. One of the curiosities on exhibition was an educated horse owned by Dr. Rowland of Johnston county."

The Messenger likewise mentions an accident which occurred on the Fair Grounds during the race on Wednesday, by which the horse of Mr. Smith, of Fayetteville, striking the railing, received mortal injuries and Mr. Smith himself was hurt.
