Raleigh News.] We learn that the work of fixing the road bed for receiving the iron was actually commenced on the Western N. C. Railroad on Thursday last, just west of Old Fort, and that three more miles of the road will soon be in readiness. The bulk of the hands now employed, however, are at work at the tunnel. One hundred and forty-five penitentiary convicts have already been sent to work upon this road, and, under legislative enactment, about double this number will eventually be sent. The people of the transmontane section may at last feel that an effort is being made to give th m nommunication with the outside world.

Horrible Murder of an Aged Lady.

The wife of Mr. Joseph Schenck, a wealthy farmer living near Schenckville, a small village nine miles from Allentown, Pa., was murdered Friday night. It appears Mr. Schenck left home early in the morning on business and returned after dark, finding everything dark in the house. In going about he stumbled over something, and stooping down he caught hold of a cold hand. He immediately left the house and called neighbors in who found Mrs. Schenck on the floor with several pools of blood near her head and the entire floor sprinkled with blood. Her face was beaten into a shapeless mass and terribly mangled. She was almost sixty-two years of age. There is no ciue whatever to the perpetrators of this horrible crime. The husband offers $100,000 reward for the detection of the guilty parties.

Omissionary. [Shelby Aurora.]

One of the preachers in the Convention said there were three kinds of Baptists: 1. The Missionary Baptists; 2. The Anti-Missionary Baptists; 3. The Omissionary Baptists, meaning those who omitted to pay anything for the Gospel. There is a large class of these omissionary fellows in all the churches. They omit prayers, faith, holiness, as well as paying anything for the Gospel. And it is to be feared that when they come to die, the Lord will omit to put them in heaven. Omissions work both ways.

We have had it in our mind for several days to speak a word in the public ear in reference to a society whose works have long commended themselves to our judgment and their doers to our respect, reverence and esteem-the Ladies' Benevolent Association. It is a society made up of the kindest and best among us, whose members in becoming members take upon themselves responsibilities and duties which require a good deal of faithful, self-denying work in their discharge, and which yield them in return very little of public praise or reward of any kind save the calm consciousness of duty performed. Their work is one not within the province of government. State, county or city do little or nothing for the class whom they benefit, and though the churches do something for the worthy poor among their membership, still the Benevolent Association occupies the field of general charity almost alone. The class for whom the almshouse is provided are the human wrecks-the irretrievably helpless and ruined in society; but, the mission of the ladies is to the worthy poor who, while under the cloud of temporary adversity, feel that if some hand will only help them a little to struggle along into the sunshine again, they yet, have a mission of usefulness to hope and to live for. And here are the very angels of mercy-the members of the Ladies' Benevolent Association-ready and anxious to reach out the helping hand, but their tre ary mpty and a load of debt piled caste of the what can they do for those who have been overtaken by these dull times and are unable to obtain employment sufficient to fully provide for themselves? That is a class whose number in this community none but these ladies can tell, and we don't believe they will tell; because we believe the secret distresses of many a home are hidden in their charitable hearts from vulgar gaze. It is a class to be encouraged -a class to which one's own neighbors or kindred may belong, and one to which the strongest willed and most prosperous of us all might easily by a chain of misfortunes and sickness be some day brought, and as re would hope for succor then it behooves us to assist these ladies to succor and save and lift up others now. To-morrow will be a day of rest from our toils, of sports and of public thanksgiving for the mercies that have followed us, of family and social reunions and of feasting in our homes, and we say: wherever the people will assemble for worship or for pleasure-at the churches, at the Athletic Grounds, at the ferry, at the street-corners -there let the mite-boxes of the Ladies' Benevolent Association be found; and let us every one, of a little from our little or bountifully from our abundance, make a thank-offering for the poor which shall pray for us and give joy both here and in

An Outrageous Act. A Swedish sailor, employed on the Nor wegian barque St. Oluf, which cleared from this port a day or two since, had some misunderstanding with the officers of the ship and threatened revenge for the real or imaginary injury or discourtesy he had received at their hands. The man left the vessel, and nothing more was thought of the matter until the ship was about to sail, when it was discovered that the lanyards of the mainmast had been nearly severed in twain and those of the mizzenmast entirely so. The lanyards connect the shrouds of the ship (which are attached to the masts above) with the sides of the vessel just below a projecting point immediately beneath the railing, and with those severed the first strong breeze would be calculated to carry the masts by the board and probably result in serious injury to the vessel and men. As soon as this discovery was made the threats of the seaman alluded to were called to mind, and no doubt is entertained that he was the perpetrator of the outrageous

Arrest of Two Colored Swindlers. Two colored individuals named William Robinson and Nathan Hill were arrested by Officer Edgar Miller, yesterday, charged with swindling a countryman of their own color, named David Burns, out of $5 in money, through means of the "stringgame." We can feel but little sympathy for a person who will allow himself to be made the dupe of such scoundrels, but at the same time it is a matter for congratulation that the swindlers have come to grief. Wm. Harriss and Hardy Williams, both colored, were at first arrested and carried before the Mayor, but as they both protested that they were only spectators and had nothing to doing with the affair, the truth of which assertions there was reason to believe, they were refeased on condition that they would accompany Officer Miller and point out the real offenders, which they
