After-Thoughts About Oakey Hall's

New York Correspondence of the Phila delphia Times.

The debut of Mr. A. Oakey Hall upon the stage is still somewhat the talk of the town. Despite the flattering notices which the ex-Mayor received in Sunday's papers, the fact of his having made a dismal failure was pretty generally understood, and when the Tribune appeared with a column and a half of sorrowful rhetoric in Wm. Winter's best style, there was a general expression of concord in the critical judgment. Not that the public would not like to see Mayor Hall succeed in his new venture. They would. He is, and always has been, a great favorite, and whether he is making a post-prandial speech at the Manhattan Club, wine glass in hand, or drinking beer with the Bohemians, in a Broadway cellar, he is always the suave, polite brilliant, warm-hearted gentleman. But he is not an actor, and never will make one. He is associated with Mr. Stuart in the management of the Park Theatre, and we would suggest to him as a brilliant initial bit of managerial diplomacy to take the 'Crucible' off the boards. If he does not it will melt away whatever money he has managed to accumulate.

Distressing Accident. Little Oscar, son of Mr. John H. Pugh, aged about two years, met with a serious a fire under a pot with the view of heating water. Not noticing the child, it approached in its merry gambols so near the blaze that it came in contact with the little fellow's dress, setting it on fire and soon enveloping the poor child in a mass of flame. Parties rushed to the rescue, but before the fire could be extinguished all the child's clothing was burned from its body, except a flannel skirt, which served in some measure to protect it. The child was badly injured, the skin literally pealing from the body, while even to the eyebrows and eyelashes were singed off. At last accounts colored, were arrested yesterday on the the little sufferer was considered in a criti- charge of stealing cotton from a warehouse cal condition, and we can only hope that on the wharf. mails daily except Sunday, 6:80 A. M. The thieves, we observe, continue their nightly depredations, and precautionary measures on the part of the public seem to be set at defiance by them.

The residence of Mr. James H. Chadbourn, on the east side of Third, between Dock and Orange streets, was entered by one of them yesterday morning, shortly after 8 o'clock. It appears that the operator in this instance, who seems to have been provided with the necessary tools as well as being an expert in the business, first effected an entrance through a window opening on the verandah on the south side of the house. To get in he had first to undo the fastenings of the blinds, which could only have been done with some instrument prepared especially for the purpose, after which the spring-catch to the sash was removed by similar means and the fellow was in the room. Here, however, an unexpected difficulty presented itself. The door leading into the passage in which the stairway is located was locked, and on the second floor where the sleeping apartments are situated was where the thief expected principally to operate. He thereupon withdrew from the room, which seems to have contained nothing that he could use to advantage without running the risk of being detected, and repaired to the lower piazza, in the rear of the house, where he went to work as in the first instance and soon found himself in the main parlor, where he lit the gas and made the discovery that he was again foiled in his attempt to reach the passage, the door leading to which was locked as in the case of the room first visited. Letting himself out again, but leaving the gas burning, in which condition it was found by the family upon rising yesterday morning, he next proceeded to climb into the upper piazza, from which he let himself into an unoccupied room, when he had free access to all parts of the house. The window through which he this time entered was a large one, reaching to the floor, and in addition to the spring-catch, with which all the windows are provided, it was secured by a stick in such a manner shoved upward or the upper one being shoved downward. The thief managed, however, after opening the blirds, to not only remove the catch impediment, but also to push aside the stick so as to allow the upper sash to be pushed downward, when he proceeded to climb through. He then went into the room occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Chadbourn, from whence he removed the clothing of the two to the unoccupied room, where the pockets bureau in the room, a gas jet which is usually kept burning all night cast a pale light upon the slab, over which, being aroused from sleep, she suddenly saw a black hand pass. She instantly awoke Mr. C., who sprang over the foot-board and gave chase to the thief, who, as he ran from the bedroom across the passage and into the room by which he had entered, knocked several chairs down, over which he tumbled, and which proved a serious impediment to the progress of the pursuer. The thief finally reached the window about five feet in advance of Mr. C., springing through the aperture, but breaking with his knees some thereafter. of the glass in the lower sash in his pro-

Stole a Rooster. A colored youth by the name of Josiah Clark stole a fine rooster from the premises of a lady in the vicinity of Mulberry and Fifth streets, yesterday morning. A colored man, acquainted on the premises, saw Clark with the rooster, suspected it had been stolen and nabbed the fellow, who said he had been sent by a colored woman to watch the rooster. It was then agreed that the woman should be consulted about the matter, but after walking nearly all over town, during which time Clark made two or three attempts to escape, they finally arrived near the residence of Officer Lewis Gordon, who was off duty and at home. and into whose custody the youngster was delivered, when he was taken to the Guard House and locked up to await a hearing accident yesterday morning. A Suggestion.

While witnessing the rifle match at the Athletic Grounds, Thanksgiving Day, we noticed that as the shooting progressed the interest slackened among the spectators who were overlooking the targets from the race course above, and finally the ladies all withdrew to the pavillion to await more exciting sports, while a number of gentlemen left the grounds and went home feeling that the shooting was a bore to every one except those who could participate. The reason for this dissatisfaction was not far to seek, for the spectators could not see who was making the crack shots whose marks they saw on the target, nor learn what they counted toward the prize; hence no tally could be kept and the movements on the range seemed meaningless and drearily monotonous to the observers on the hill. We have noticed that all the pleasure in every race, match and game it has ever been our fortune to witness seemed to be derived from the interest attaching to the persons of those contestants we knew. Take that away and we have no patience to watch the affair; and so we judge it to be with others. Now we suggest that the name of each contestant, as he takes his place to shoot, could be displayed before the crowd on the hill by simply inscribing the names of all the contestants in large characters upon a strip of cloth attached to a roller revolved in a box. At one end of the roller a ratchet wheel with spring clip engaging the teeth successively would be placed, and a cord wound on the circumference of the roller and attached to a weight would give momentary motion thereto, and thus change the name, presented, whenever a wire running from the clip to the marksmen's stand should be pulled. The result of each shot could be announced by the marker, side by side with the name of the marksman, by the same means. Numerous other methods of accomplishing the same object by means equally as simple will readily occur to any

The thing could be much more readily, certainly and easily accomplished, and the neously at several points on the grounds, or for that matter in any part of the city, or the order of firing could be altered in case of the absence of any contestant when called to shoot, and his name afterwards in troduced at any time without inconvenience, by the employment of the automatic signal telegraph instrument (about to be introduced in our midst by Mr. L. A. Angel in case he meets with sufficient encouragement). With this instrument the Marshal would also be enabled to call games and make announcments and requests in various parts of the grounds, or persons who go to the grounds for an afternoon's enjoyment, any day, could communicate with their business offices in the city or have messengers dispatched to carry them any arti

Much the same remarks will apply to the Fair Grounds exhibitions and the instrument would also prove useful at the cemetery, &c. These suggestions we throw out merely as such. In judging of the degree of annoyance which other spectators experience from inability to follow the shooting), etc., we have to judge from our own feelings at the time and are liable to overestimate, but if those who manage on such occasions consider the matter of importance, we shall be glad if they are able to make use of anything we have said to promote the interest and general enjoyment of their games on New Year's Day or

Need Watching.

Our attention has been called to the fact that parties, especially out on the suburbs of the city, who look as though they were able to acquire a livelihood by honest toil, are in the habit of visiting the premises of our citizens under the pretence of begging, while suspicion is entertained that their visits are for the purpose of becoming acquainted with the premises with a view of robbery thereafter, and who, we hope, will be watched and arrested by our police and citizens. Two of these tramps were on one of our streets a day or two since, and while one of them went to the residence of a gentleman under the pretence of begging. the other went round the corner, and on the next day the same individual visited the same residence, but, instead of knocking at the front door, went around unauthorized to the kitchen in the rear of the residence, frightening to some extent the lady of the house, who by chance was left alone upon the premises. Such trespassers on the private rights and property of our citizens should be taught better manners, even if their board at the Ruleigh State institution should have to be paid by the common

The Temperance Meeting Wednesday

The meeting at the Fifth Street M. E. Church, on Wednesday evening, for the purpose of organizing an old-fashioned temperance society, brief mention of which was made in our last, was well attended. After the organization of the society, Mr. Geo. R. French, Sr., an old and worthy pioneer in the good cause, who had been elected permanent President, was called upon to address the assemblage, which he did in a very earnest and acceptable manner. After the conclusion of Mr. F.'s remarks, Mr. Aug. H. Morris, who has always manifested a deep interest in the matter of temperance. was called upon and responded in a very befitting and impressive manner, calculated to leave a very decided and favorable impression upon the audience. The meeting was also entertained by remarks from Rev. Frank A. Bishop. Strong hopes are entertained by our temperance friends that this is the beginning of a work which will eventuate in great good to the cause in this com-

Dinner for the Poor. While the most of our citizens who have been blessed with prosperity during the past year are enjoying the festivities of the season, should not a thought of the poor and their scanty supplies find a place in our breast?
