"HOG ROUND."

We are indebted to the New York Bulletin for statistics of the movement of hog products at Chicago and Cincinnati since the first of last November. Compared with the returns for the corresponding period of last year, they show a decrease in shipments at Cincinnati amounting to 5,001,500 pounds, and an increase in receipts of 1,212,758 pounds. This leaves an increase of 6,224,238 pounds in the supply on hand over the amount held at this period last year, so far as receipts and shipments are concerned. The figures for Chicago show a decrease of 3,387,017 pounds in receipts and an increase of 14,635,483 pounds in shipments, the result indicating a decreased supply compared with last year of 23,022,500 pounds, irrespective of the difference in packing, which is some 113,000 less in number. The average weight of hogs is placed at 268.90 pounds against 251.67 at this time last year, showing an increase of 17.23 pounds. Says the Cincinnati Price Current :

"If this approximately represents the comparative packing weights, the number of hogs packed weigh but 5,464,000 pounds gross less than the whole number to same date last year, so that in fact the pounds of product made this year are nearly equal to corresponding date last year."

We have authority for saying that the paragraph in the STAR the other day, to the effect that a new novel of the "Odd Trump" series would soon appear from the presses of J. B Ford & Co., is incorrect. The book will be issued by the old publishers, Messrs. E. J. Hale & Son, who have been eminently successful with the whole series. The mistake originated with a news collector of the New York Tribune.

Like the late lamented Horace Greeley, the New York lawyer, David Dudley Field, writes a hard favored hand. Recently his signature to a legal document appeared in print, "Tried and duly filed." That compositor was filed, but not for future reference.

To the Public. We should not forget the Orphan Home in Oxford and Asheville. Here a l orphans, all political parties and all religious denominations are treated alike. They receive children from six to twelve years, feed and clothe them, give them a fair business education, and then place them in good homes or put them out to learn trades.

The Orphan's Friend, published every Wednesday for $1 a year, gives particular information as to the management and progress of the work, and contains a full statement of weekly contributions.

control of the Masonic Grand Lodge of the State, other benevolent institutions and the Christian churches also lend their help to the enterprise. As we have said, the Asylums are not confined to the orphans of Masons, nor to any particular class of orphans, but wherever a poor, friendless one is found, he or she is taken in and cared for.

Having been appointed by St John's Lodge, No. 1, a committee to assist in the good work, we make a pressing appeal to the people-the Christian, charitable people-of Wilmington and vicinity, to come forward with their offerings of money and provisions to the support of the poor fatherless and motherless little ones that are gathered in the asylums to receive a fair start in the race of life and to be trained for good and respectable citizens instead of becoming the future pests of society.

Any contributions left with either one of the committee will be forwarded to Oxford, and any citizens knowing of any orphans between the ages of six and twelve years, the committee will be glad to have their names left with them.

He evidently does not belong to the caucus ring, and therefore will be asked to "step down and out" when the next Republican Convention meets. Judge Settle is their "coming man." A strong effort will be made by Gov. Brogden's friends to nominate him for Congress, to succeed John Hyman, but this is not so easily done. Judge Thomas would like to go back to Washington, and Jo. Dixon thinks that he has been "out in the cold" just about long enough to be re-admitted. Dick King, Judge Clarke and George Stanton are all hungry aspirants, and some say that O'Hara will come to the front with Hyman. All indications point to a lively scramble.

The Moore's Creek Celebration-Committee on Transportation, &c.

A great many enquiries are being made as to what the Committee on Transportation, &c., of the Moore's Creek Centennial are doing, or expect to do A call was made for a meeting at the Purcell House Tuesday night, but there was not a suffi. cient number of the members present to accomplish anything. The time is short, gentlemen! The day of the grand jubilee is rapidly approaching, and what is to do should be done quickly. The indications bespeak a large and patriotic gathering on the occasion, and not the least essential particular in the preparations for the grand event, in which the heroic self-sacrifice and noble daring of our ancestors, who figured on the historic battle-field of Moore's Creek one hundred years ago, are to be brought so vividly to our minds, should be allowed to languish or remain incomplete. All the arrangements should be consummated and made public at the earliest possible moment, so that none shall be deterred from attending on account of lack of necessary information or proper facilities.

Parties in charge of the arrangements for the celebration are very desirous that the Commercial Exchange, the public offices, &c., of this city, be closed on that day, and that business generally be suspended, in order to allow all who wish to attend the celebration to do so. We learn that the various public offices in Pender will be closed, and that there will be a general suspension of business all over the

from Far and Near. We have had handed to us a correspondence between two gentlemen whom we will call "Henry," of this city, and "Jack," of St. Louis, respectively, together with other papers bearing on a subject that has occasioned considerable stir and difference of opinion among our reflective and argumentative young men for some little time past. We give the main points before us as a matter of general interest, particularly as on the correctness of the principle involved depends practical applications of great public value in a cotton producing community design in the community of

It seems that a correspondent in this city "H. J. S."-some time since addressed letter to the New York Scientific American, relating that another gentleman here, designated as "A." had elaimed that "If 100 tons pressure will compress two bales of cotton to a certain density" when the bales are "placed side by side, then about onehalf the same pressure will equally compress the same cotton (that is, to the same density,) when the bales are placed one on top of the other." "H. J. S." desired to know whether this proposition is true. The Scientific, in its issue of Jan. 15th, last, decides that "'A' is right, if you assume that the bales are equal in area."

At this point comes in our correspond ence. In the first letter "Henry" recites the above facts, and appeals from the decision to "Jack," saying that he regards the proposition as an absurdity; that several bets on the subject are dependent upon his (Jack's) 'ecision, (Jack being an expert of large experience in compressing cotton.) and that on his own account "Henry" proposes, in case the proposition of "A" is sustained, to present that gentleman with a bottle of the best ---- (What is this? It must be "ink," but surely our spectacles are growing old and feeble.)

"Jack" says in reply that "A" is right; for, "if the surfaces of the two bales exposed to the given pressure are equal, then one-half that pressure will give the same density to one bale that the whole will to pressure on both together being 100 tons, haps twice, but about that time felt the the pressure per square inch, will be 100 pounds. If the surface of two bales be 4,000, then the surface of one bale is 2,000 square inches, and 50 tons divided by 2,000 gives 50 pounds equal to pressure per square inch." The density is assumed to be proportioned to the pressure.

In a second letter, "Henry" complains that "Jack" makes his figures in square inches instead of cubic inches, thinks the proposition must have been misapprehended -that it "cannot be meant that the density the superficial area operated upon, without regard to the depth"-and accordingly restates the case thus

"The proposition of "A" was that 50 |end|on end to a density per cubic foot equivalent [equal] to 100 tons put on the same bulk in a different shape.

A decision was asked upon this statement of the case.

"Jack," replying, says: "Must reiterate what I have said: 'Density of a cubic form is (inversely) proportionate solely to superficial area (multiplied by pressures) operated on,' &c. 'A' is entirely right and you are most certainly wrong," for, "In the case of area being 20 times 10 inches, equal to 200 square inches, then pressure divided by area equals 100 divided by 200, equal to 11 pound per square inch. Again, with pressure equal to 100 pounds divided by area equal to 100 square inches, that is, 100 divided by 100, we have I pound pressure per square inch; and the law is inevitable that 'Densities are inversely proportionate to pressures.  * POINTER

Of course the decision on this appeal could not be gene back of and was ac cepted by "Henry" as final. Accordingly, the last paper before us is an order drawn by him upon his grocer, in favor of "A, state that all the railroads leading into this for a bottle of "that ink" that which some call "nails." It is presumed, also, that the various bets dependent upon the decision of the question have now been awarded; but as "the why" may not yet have been made entirely clear to all parties interested, we propose to-morrow to give the substance. of any suggestions which may meantime he made, and will also add a few remarks of our own in further elucidation, if neces-
