Maggie Mitchell.

To-morrow evening the inimitable Maggie Mitchell, whose reputation as an actress, especially in her perfect characterizations of her favorite plays, "Fanchon" and "Pearl of Savoy," have placed her beyond the pale of ordinary criticism, will once more greet her old Wilmington friends at the Opera House. A Richmond contemporary remarks that "Maggie appears as young as ever," and "as for her acting, it has grown better and better, and in her peculiar part she has no equal." The following from the Providence Journal is a fair specimen of the average Northern sentiment in regard to Maggie's performances: "Maggie Mitchell's representation of Fanchon, last evening, was witnessed by an immense audience, occupying all the usual seats, all the extra chairs that could be obtained, and all the standing room which permitted a view of the stage. Such audiences are rarely seen on any occasion, and especially at a theatrical entertainment. Not only was it large, but a good portion of it was composed of that class who attend only when such brilliant stars as Maggie Mitchell are announced. To say that all were well pleased with the entertainment, would convey but a faint idea of the delight, which was manifested. Hardly one left the hall until the green curtain dropped on the closing act, and throughout the entire piece all seemed intently interested, seldom moving in their seats except when some act of speech made applause irresistible. We have seen Miss Mitchell in Fanchon, we dare not say how many times, but we never witnessed so good a representation of it as on last evening. Not only was her character perfect in everything, as might well be supposed, but her support was really excellent, and the drama went off like clock work."

Fire Last Night.

Shortly before 9 o'clock the Market bell sounded an alarm for the southeastern district of the city. In a few moments the throng of idlers on Market street had pretty generally deserted that favorite haunt for Saturday nights and bolted off into the darkness toward the new centre of attraction. The house in which the fire broke out was a comparatively new one-story frame, located at Seventh and Queen streets and owned and occupied by Mr. Jos. Ward, a house-carpenter. That gentleman was absent from home at the time. Mrs. Ward had put out her fire and lamp, and with her family, retired early to be the better ready for the enjoyment of the privileges of the Sabbath. After a time she awoke from a sound sleep to find the room she occupied filled with smoke and flame and the heat intense. Resting in a moment the dangers of her situation and with but the one instinct of personal safety animating her, she sprang to the door, and in some way, she knew not how, gained the outer air just as the wall of flame swept completely round the room and filled it with a whirling mass of fire. A gentleman who saw her at the moment told us her escape was a most narrow one. This gentleman had been at work in a shop across the way, when, turning toward the window, he suddenly saw Mr. Ward's house in a light blaze—the flames bursting from the roof, and seeming to have possession of every part of the interior. Hastily approaching the house he saw Mrs. Ward rush out in her night clothes and gasping frantically around the house calling for an adopted child whom she supposed to be in the burning building. The gentleman caught the lady as soon as he could, and took her to a place of safety in the house of a neighbor, where she was soon joined by the other members of her family, who seem to have awakened earlier, and escaped a moment before her. In the meantime the fire had extended to the one-story frame house adjoining on the north, owned by Mr. Geo. Harris, and occupied by Mr. Frank Swann. The Fifth Ward Bucket Company also had arrived, and the members were searching with small success for water at the various wells in the neighborhood, which were almost dry. Attention was next turned to saving the fur-

Thirty seven dollars were recently realized for the Orphan Asylum by an entertainment at Warrenton. The Clyde line of steamers will run to Morehead and connect with the Atlantic and North Carolina Railway. The smokehouse of Mr. E. D. McNair, of Tarboro, was robbed Tuesday night. Sunday night last the gin house of John W. Heckstall, of Wilson, was burned, and an attempt made to fire his store. Times carries the name of Octavius Coke, of Chawan, for Lieutenant Governor on the Democratic ticket. Col. T. C. Woodburn, of Randolph, has removed from that county to Durham, where he is to publish a paper to be called the Orange Herald. Four negroes confined in Louisville jail attempted ineffectually to overpower the jailor on Wednesday last, in order to effect their escape. The Weldon News says a negro smash-up of freight cars on the Seaboard near Seaboard station, caused considerable damage. One person was slightly bruised. The Windsor Times says it is conceded McLandry will be the Radical candidate for Congress in the First District, and intimates that it will require hard work to beat him. Louisburg Courier: During the storm on Sunday morning, John Dunston, a colored boy, was thrown from a horse, his face striking upon a rock, causing a bilateral dislocation and bilateral compound fracture of the lower jaw. Warrenton Gazette: The furious wind storm of last Monday night blew down the stables of Mr. Steven Turner, of Nubush, and the timbers caught three of his horses, injuring all, one so severely as to render him useless. The Weldon News says a negro aged 110 years, lives near Whitaker's Mill, Nash county, who has had seven wives, and now has a daughter only five years old. He is active and hearty and takes his dram. The Governor has consented to a partial exchange of circuits between Judges J. L. Henry and S. W. Watts for the coming spring term. By this arrangement Judge Henry holds the courts of Wake, Granville and Northampton; and Judge Watts those of Henderson, Buncombe and Yancey. Raleigh News: Last Wednesday, about five o'clock in the evening, at Neuse Depot, ten miles north of here, John Carrington, a negro living on Peterson Dunn's plantation, rushed into the kitchen of Mrs. Wynne, and without a word made an assault on Betty Phillips, a colored woman. He pushed her against the wall and drew his knife and slashed a dreadful wound in the left side of her throat, causing internal as well as external hemorrhage. She now is in a critical condition from her wounds. Carrington escaped. In answer to our question how the delegates would get to Edenton, which place it suggested for the holding of the State Convention, the Albemarle Times says: "Go to Weldon; from there to Franklin Depot on the Norfolk Railroad, thence direct to the elegant steamers Chowan and Lots to Edenton. How they would manage to get away is another question and one much harder to answer." Rather go to Murphy, Cherokee county, at once. Plantation Miller, with Separator—A New Invention.

We examined yesterday, at Messrs. Hart & Bailey's, where it is on exhibition, a new invention known as Kahnweiler's Cotton Seed Hulling Machine, which must prove very useful to Southern planters. This machine not only hulls the seed, but separates the seed from the hulls, the latter of which can be used for manuring purposes, and the former, mixed with corn, for feed. The machine will also grind and crack corn, cob and all, and cut the shucks into small particles, making altogether an excellent feed. As an economizer it possesses the feature of converting everything pertaining to corn and cotton to some useful purpose. We examined specimens of the cotton seed after having gone through the hulling operation, the hulls to be used for manuring purposes, the cracked corn and cob mixed, the finer particles of each, ground nearly to the consistency of meal, the chopped shucks, &c. The machine we saw is of hand power, but they are usually of from one to two horse power. To many planters in the South who are in the habit of throwing away large quantities of cotton seed, as being of no use, except for manuring purposes, and also cobs and shucks, it seems to us that a machine such as this, which was invented by Mr. David Kahnweiler, formerly of this city, but now of New York, would be of great practical benefit.

The Drowned Sailor.

At the request of Capt. T. Voss, of the German brig Fanchon, from which vessel the young sailor, Wilhelm Wahl, was drowned a few days since, we give the following statement: "At the coroner's inquest over the body of the sailor, who was drowned a few days ago, and who belonged to the crew of my vessel, the Fanchon, a black mark was found on the forehead of the drowned man, and the jury, one of whose members was a physician, was of the opinion that the man was knocked overboard, and that this caused the mark on his forehead; this could only have been done by one of his late fellow sailors, who were at the time with him painting the vessel. My sailors, who were highly offended by this suspicion, cleared themselves by washing the face of the drowned man, and thereby removing the mark, which proved to be a stain of the black color with which he had been painting the vessel."

The Small-Pox.

Only one additional case of small-pox has been reported by the Superintendent of Health, that of Capt. Penton, of the Seaman's Home. This only makes four cases in all, and two of these have been removed outside the city limits. Every precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease, the two cases in the city being kept isolated and strictly guarded.

Alleged Violation of the Enforcement Act.

We learn that a warrant has been served on Dr. Walter G. Curtis, a prominent citizen of Brunswick county, on the affidavit of Lewis A. Galloway, of that county, alleging that on or about the 1st of August, 1874, he (Dr. C.) "did, at a registration of voters for an election of Representative in the Congress of the United States, fraudulently attempt to register, not having a lawful right so to do." The case will be heard before Commissioner Cassiday, in the U. S. Court room, to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock. To those who know Dr. Curtis, personally, it is useless to say that his action in the premises, whatever it might have been, could not have arisen from any motives of intentional fraud, or design to violate the law governing in such cases. He might have conscientiously erred in the belief that he was entitled to register, but that he knowingly and deliberately attempted to register or vote when not entitled to do so is not all characteristic of the man. In fact, the revival of the matter at this late day, and the effort to bring it into the courts savors of political persecution.

The Sudden Death at the Sound.

We find that we were led into the commission of a grave error in our statement relative to the party who died suddenly at Greenville Sound on Thursday morning last. The unfortunate deceased was Mrs. Nancy Stokley, an aged lady, who was living on Capt. J. I. Mett's premises. She is believed to have died of heart disease.

Resignation and Appointment.
