MORNING EDITION.

OUTLINES.

Gov. Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana, was yesterday nominated by acclamation for the office of Vice President by the Democratic Convention at St. Louis. The St. Louis nominations are generally enthusiastically received. In Senate favorable report on removal of disabilities of Gen. Beauregard and others. Little hope of maintaining peace in Europe. Gov. Tilden receives congratulations from all quarters, and among others from leading German citizens of Connecticut. John Kelley, the Tammany Chief, made a conciliatory speech in Convention after nomination of Hendricks for Vice President. — Ilma de Moretta, great prima donna, marries John Hill, a pianist. — A Jamaica lanch, laden with ammunition, captured in Cuba. — Seems to be little doubt that Serbia will declare war. — The Greeley household at Chappaqua telegraph their congratulations to Governor Tilden and declare for him. They are Republicans. — Naval Appropriation bill goes to President. — New York Markets: Cotton, 13@12 3/4-16; turpentine, 29 1/4 @ 30; rosin, $1.70 @ 1.80; gold, 112 1/2 @ 112 3/4.

THE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION.

Completed Work—Hendricks Almost Unanimously Nominated for Vice President—Harmony and Enthusiasm.—The Democratic National Convention at St. Louis finished its work yesterday morning by the nomination for the Vice Presidency, by acclamation, of Thomas A. Hendricks. The ticket of Tilden and Hendricks is the winning ticket. It has all of the elements of power. It completes the preliminary work the Democratic party had to do. It puts the party before the country in the most favorable light. It will arouse enthusiasm North, East, West and South. It is a ticket against which the slanders of the Radical hired press will fall perfectly harmless. Tilden, its head, is the Agamemnon and Achilles in one of the Democratic Reform forces, and Hendricks is our wise Ulysses and courageous Ajax Telamon. The nomination gives assurance especially in the East, on the Northern lakes and on the Pacific Slope, while Hendricks makes sure of Indiana and helps throughout the West and South. With all of its strength, however, the ticket is only invincible when supported heartily by all Democrats and by such Conservative Republicans and Independents as do their own thinking. Let the nation give Samuel J. Tilden and Thomas A. Hendricks a most enthusiastic support. They are both national, loyal, able and sincere men. They alone in the present crisis can restore the country to peace, prosperity and happiness.

SKETCH OF GOV. HENDRICKS.—Thomas A. Hendricks was born in Muskingum county, Ohio, in 1819, and is, therefore, fifty-seven years of age. He removed to Indiana, and in 1851 was elected to Congress, where he remained until 1855, when he was appointed Commissioner of the Land Office. He filled this position until 1859, when he was elected United States Senator for six years. In 1868 he was the Democratic candidate for Governor, but as the passions and prejudices were then too strong for any Democrat to be chosen, Mr. Hendricks was defeated by a small majority. In 1874 he was elected to this position, which he has since filled with signal ability, adorning the place with the simplicity of the early Roman times, when the robust virtues were valued at their true worth. Gov. Hendricks is one of those unaffected great men who impress themselves forcibly on the era as much by the wide contrast with others as by their own simple worth. Such an impression he made upon North Carolinians last year on our great celebration on the 20th of May. And we will say that we think with reason that no man would be more heartily supported in our State who could have been nominated at St. Louis.

VIEW OF THE PRESS.

[Richmond Equiver.] While it is well known that this was not our first choice, it is equally well known that we regard Mr. Tilden as a very formidable candidate to head our ticket. As a man of intellect, a leader in reform, a statesman of broad conservative views and a lawyer, Mr. Tilden's reputation is eminent throughout the country; while the events prior to the Convention and the proceedings of that body show that he possesses in an unusual degree that personal

MAGNETISM WHICH IN EVERY CONTEST IS AN ESSENTIAL ELEMENT OF SUCCESS.

In the platform there is no uncertain ring and the spirit of Reform it breathes must find an echo in every honest heart throughout the land. It is true it touches on questions that it is not meet should be reviewed without more careful consideration than can be given it at this moment, but as a broad, bold and fearless enunciation of principles it affords room on which every element true to the tradition of liberty, honor and honesty can stand.

[Richmond Whig.] "The night is past, and joy cometh with the morning." All our hopes have been realized and all our fears dispelled. We can now "gird on our armor" with quite as much confidence as even Gen. Logan, and go forth to battle with the certainty of achieving a decisive victory. In a word, we present in Samuel J. Tilden a man to the nation who cannot be defeated. * * * [Tilden, Hendricks and Reform.] In this sign and under its banner we will conquer.

[Norfolk Landmark.] "The issue is therefore Reform, and the canvass will be made on that issue with unswerving vigor." * * * In this cheerful belief we can all go into the canvass shoulder to shoulder in support of a man whose record gives us an armor of victory. November over a party whose basis is sectional hate, and whose cohesive power is purely plunder.

[Goldboro Messenger.] The nomination of Tilden means death to Radicalism.

All About a Pair of Scissors.—George and Annie Gause, colored, were before the Mayor's Court yesterday morning on the charge of fighting, and were ordered to pay a fine of $20 and costs each. The difficulty between the husband and wife, it seems, originated about a pair of scissors, which the latter started to carry to a neighbor. The husband wanted to know where his wife was taking them and she refused to tell. He tried to compel obedience and she resisted his authority. The result was that he gave her "scissors" in a style not exactly in accordance with the pleasant relations which should subsist between man and wife. After they were taken to the guard-house a compromise was proposed, but the parties were both too stubborn to agree upon terms, and the result was the judgment of the Court already indicated.

The Late W. Walter Williams.

A week or two since we alluded in these columns to the death, in the penitentiary at Columbia, S. C., of W. Walter Williams, of this city, who was sentenced to a term of imprisonment for the alleged burning of certain property at Little River, S. C. Since then the mother of the unfortunate young man, who resides in this city, has received several letters of condolence and sympathy from parties in South Carolina who were acquainted with her son, and who were familiar with the circumstances connected with the alleged crime for which he suffered, which go to strengthen the conviction entertained by many that he was innocent of the serious charge attributed to him. In this connection we would state that steps had been inaugurated which would no doubt have resulted in his pardon at an early day, had not death intervened to render further proceedings in this direction unnecessary. It is a great source of consolation to the stricken mother to know that, though she cannot see her son again in this life, there is every reason to hope and believe that he has gone to a better world.

We give the following, among other letters received by Mrs. Williams, one from Mr. Sellers, the counsel of young Walter, and the other from Mr. Scott, of Columbia, who, in the capacity of a Sunday school teacher, was in the habit of visiting the penitentiary, and thus became acquainted with the young man:

MARION, C. H., S. C., June 19, 1876.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, Wilmington, N. C.: Dear Madam—It is my painful duty to say to you that I saw it announced this morning in the Literary Digest that W. Walter Williams died in the penitentiary on the 4th of June, inst. The sad intelligence may have reached you ere this. Whether it has or not, it is, I am sure, very sad thing indeed, and the more so because I trust Williams died in the penitentiary, which was charged, and of which he was convicted. If innocent a fearful responsibility rests somewhere for his untimely end.

He was dead when I wrote you two weeks ago. I had taken the incipient steps to procure a pardon for him, but it was then already too late.

From the letter which you enclosed me and which I will return to you if you desire it, I am sure that he had procured a pardon for his son, and that he was in the prison-house of sin, from his God—a much higher source than Gov. Chamberlain—and a pardon more to be valued.

Although I never saw you, you have my sincere sympathy in this, your deepest trouble, and in your bereavement. I trust you will have fortitude to bear it, and learn well the lesson of your own mortality, and prepare to meet your son in the promised haven of rest.

Yours, in sincerity,
W. W. SELLERS.

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 25th, '76.

Mrs. E. A. Williams, Dear Madam: Your letter received. I suppose that you have already been made aware, through the Literary Digest, of the death of Walter. I only became aware of it myself a week ago. I was astonished, he went off so suddenly. He had every attention paid him and died the triumphant death of a Christian, bearing no renewed evidence of the power of Christ to sustain his children even in the dark hour of death. Just before he died he called Col. Parmele to his bedside and said: "Colonel, do you believe that a boy upon his death-bed would tell you a lie? The Colonel replied, "No, Walter, I don't believe you would have told me a lie for months past; you have been a good boy," Walter then said, "Well, Colonel, I was not guilty of burning the houses." The Colonel said, "Walter, I believe you. He then thanked the Colonel and the Doctor for their kindness to him, and told them he was not afraid to die, that he was going home to Jesus, and quietly breathed his last. He was decently buried on the evening of his death, June 5th, 1876.

I deeply sympathize with you in your bereavement, but you must recollect that you do not mourn as those without hope. Walter is safe in the arms of Jesus, far happier than any of us. Released from this world's trials and cares, he is praising his Saviour in the presence of the angels. Look forward, then, to the time when you shall meet him there. It will be but a short time at the longest.

I enclose you a letter written by a comrade and friend of Walter's to his mother. It is a copy of the original. You can in that letter see the earnest sincerity of Walter's love and faith in the Master. Strive to meet your son in Heaven when God calls for you. Ask Jesus to help you in your affliction; He will never leave thee nor forsake thee.

With great sympathy, yours, &c.,
J. R. SCOTT.

Release of George Applewhite, the Last of the Lowrey Gang. George Applewhite, the last of the Lowrey gang, which was once such a terror to the good people of Robeson county, is now again at large, having been released on Wednesday, by order of the Supreme Court, under what is known as the Amnesty act, having been brought before the Court under a writ of habeas corpus.

The career of Applewhite may be briefly stated as follows: He went to Robeson county in the winter of 1868-'67, with Alvin Peacock, Esq., of Wilson, to work in the turpentine business, and shortly after married a girl named Oxendine, a cousin to the notorious Henry Berry Lowrey. In 1869, as many of our readers are aware, Sheriff Reuben King, of Robeson county, was basely and cruelly murdered. Suspicion fell upon Applewhite as one of the murderers and he was subsequently arrested, brought to this city and lodged in jail for safe-keeping, from which, however, he succeeded in escaping after a confinement of a few months. He then returned to Robeson county, where, soon after, he was seen and fired upon by a party of citizens, and though he made his escape, many thought that he had been mortally wounded. It seems, however, that he was not so badly hurt after all, and that soon after this narrow escape on his part he left Robeson county and made his way to Goldsboro, where he went to work in the early part of 1876, under the fictitious name of William Jackson. Here he remained unmolested and obtained an honest living until the 3rd of July last, when Bill Lane and Bryant Capps, both colored men, alerted by the reward of five thousand dollars offered for his capture under authority of the General Assembly of 1870-'71, arrested him, and he was subsequently taken to Columbus jail, at Whiteville, for safe-keeping. Here he was arraigned for trial before Judge McKoy, last Spring, when his counsel, W. Foster French, Esq., made a motion to the effect that the Ku Klux Klan act of 1870-'71 included George Applewhite in its provisions of pardon for past offenses. The question was appealed to the Supreme Court, and on Wednesday last, as before stated, the motion of defendant's counsel was sustained and the prisoner released.

Applewhite is a mulatto, and claims to be only about twenty-six years of age. He was formerly the slave of Council Applewhite, of Wilson county, and was held by the estate until the close of the war. We learn that he has expressed his determination to return to Goldsboro, or his old home in Wilson, and go to work.

School Celebration.

We take the following from the Evening Review: The closing exercises of Misses Burr & James' Female School drew together Wednesday night, as such an occasion with them always does, an audience which filled every nook and corner of the spacious school rooms. The programme announced the exercises as a school soiree, and it consisted of music, vocal and instrumental, recitations, and a very happily conceived and as happily rendered musical charade. The exercises of the evening, throughout the entire programme, were rendered in a manner which called forth the unqualified approval of all present for each and every piece, and from the first to the last passed off smoothly and harmoniously, without let or hindrance, a fact which speaks more than words can tell of the careful training of the pupils, as much as of their own untiring diligence and application.

It is impossible with the space at our command to do more than revert to the delightful nature of the musical part of the performance. The recitations were excellent, and at the close Col. James G. Burr presented the prizes in some very graceful remarks. Miss Mary Ambler was awarded the Excelsior Medal; Miss Maggie Meares, the prize in the second division; Miss Eliza Meares, third prize; Miss Augusta Moore, fourth, and Miss Lucy Moore, fifth; Miss Mary Ambler, gold medal for greatest excellence in composition, and Miss Lydia Griffin, Miss Ella Weill and Miss each received a prize, it being impossible to decide between them. In addition to this, Miss Annie Johnson received a prize for drawing and painting, while Miss Thalia Lippitt remained in possession of the medal she had won without intermission for a year past.

Something Worth Knowing and Remembering.

It seems not to be generally known that the Postoffice authorities collect five cents on the delivery of every postal card passing through the mails which contains on the printed side anything whatever except the address.

An exchange says that the red tape twist under which the exaction is defended may be thus described: The law authorized the postal card to be used as a means of postal intercourse "under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Postmaster General." The latter then forbids the transmission of the card except at letter postage if it contains anything but the address on the face. The law provides that any matter not paid one full rate, if "by inadvertence" reaches its destination without such prepayment, shall be charged double the proper rate, any other prepayment to be deducted. It is assumed, therefore, that a postal card having any other memorandum but the address on the printed side must go at letter postage; as it is only paid one cent it is not prepaid one full rate; that makes the postage (when by inadvertence [?] it reaches its destination) six cents, leaving five cents to be deducted.

Superior Courts.—The following cases have been disposed of by this tribunal since our last report: In the case of James Brown, charged with larceny, it was moved by defendant's counsel that the defendant be discharged upon the ground that the defendant was absent at the time a juror was withdrawn and a new trial ordered. The motion was granted and the following order made: The Clerk will in No. 87 strike out after "jury impanelled" and insert, who find the defendant not guilty. Ordered that the prisoner be discharged.

In the case of Jack Anderson, charged with larceny, tried Wednesday, the jury returned a verdict not guilty.

State vs. Joseph Phillips, charged with larceny. Jury out.

State vs. A. C. Wessell, charged with assault and battery. Verdict, guilty.

struck by Lightning.

During the severe storm that passed over this city yesterday, about 1 o'clock, Mrs. A. L. Yopp, residing on Seventh, between Mulberry and Walnut streets, was on the back piazza, in the act of taking a drink of water, when the lightning struck the kitchen, the electric fluid entering the pipe of the stove-pipe in the roof of the building and breaking off a piece about the size of a man's hand from the earthen crock through which the pipe passed. Mrs. Yopp was in the passage at the time, playing with one of her children, when the shock came and he heard his wife utter an exclamation and fall. He hurried to the piazza and found Mrs. Yopp prostrate upon the floor, speechless and insensible. He carried her into the house, sprinkled water in her face and used other restoratives, and she finally showed signs of returning consciousness. In the meantime a physician had been sent for, who, upon arriving, announced that she had received a severe shock, which had stunned her for the time being, but that she would speedily recover.

At the time the lightning struck the kitchen it was entirely closed, with the exception of one door, opening on the side next to the house, in which a colored girl was sitting, who experienced no shock, and it is difficult to conjecture where the bolt passed out, as there could be found no sign to indicate the way or manner of its exit.

About 2 o'clock there was another severe peal of thunder, the lightning accompanying which struck the mainmast of the steamship Regulator, at her wharf foot of Chesnut street, chipping off a good sized piece of wood from the side of the topmast and then glancing off on the flag-staff, doing no other damage. The shock was quite severe to persons in the immediate neighborhood at the time.

A boy standing on the platform of one of the street cars, on Third Cross, between Sixth and Seventh streets, received a severe shock from lightning, being knocked inside of the car, but without causing him material injury, the bolt then passing down the railway track in the direction of Front street.

Several men at the shipyard of Messrs. Cassidy & Ross, who were handling steel while the storm was raging, received quite severe shocks.

In consequence of the intense heat that had prevailed for several days past the whole atmosphere seemed to be filled with electricity.
