The Military Masquerade in the South.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.

Southern men now here say that they have no fear of the extraordinary programme marked out by the administration in the circular of Attorney General Taft in reference to elections, only as the Radical office-holders may abuse the illegal powers with which the order of the Attorney General has clothed them, and inaugurate the very system of intimidation which they are instructed to suppress. The marshals, whose authority the Attorney General says is supreme, are partisans of the administration, whose very official existence will depend upon the success of the party to whose interests they are appointed.

In effect the circular of the Attorney General places the proclamation of martial law at the discretion of the partisans of the administration, and will enable them to cause the arrest of any number of men by the military upon the ipse dixit of marshals, and without any process whatever. The plain purpose of the circular is not to secure the freedom of the ballot to the negroes, but to prevent them from voting the Democratic ticket. They say they have no fear of the military if they be left to preserve the peace under the orders of their own officers, or if the entire conduct of the elections is placed exclusively in their charge. But they fear that the placing of the troops under the orders of partisan civilians will result in the services of the army being used to further the success of the party in power, and to cause irritation and bad feeling by the arrest of those who advocate the election of the opposite ticket.

Carpet baggers like Patterson, of South Carolina, and Spencer, of Alabama, who have no sympathy whatever with the Southern people, and no regard for the material interests of the localities they pretend to represent, are delighted with the Attorney General's order, because they see in it a hope of maintaining themselves in the political masquerade they have continued so long and so successfully.

Charlotte Observer: From a gentleman just from Beattie's Ford, Lincoln county, we are informed that a nameless negro named A. Abernathy, upon the person of his step-daughter, a young colored girl, about sixteen or eighteen years of age. The deed was committed in the neighborhood of Hunter's Mill, and the perpetrator of the crime was arrested on last Sunday, carried to Winston, where he is held in the county jail, to await the action of the Superior Court.

Raleigh Sentinel: The Democrats had a regular field day at Warrenton last Tuesday. In the day General W. R. Cox, Hon. Joe Davis, F. H. Busbee and W. A. Montgomery spoke to rousing crowds in front of the Tilden and Vance club rooms, and at night, Mr. Cook, William Eaton, General Cox and Hon. W. N. H. Smith spoke at the same place. Wednesday night the people were so much interested in the movements of the day that C. M. Cook, T. M. Argo and others made him on the mouth. A burly negro, from behind, then struck Moore with a stick, knocking him senseless. At this time nearly all the white men had left, not caring to hear McIndsey's waddle. The negroes crowded up and endeavored to make the row general. Mr. Duggan, who came to the rescue of Moore, was literally covered with negroes, when he was seized, and being carried off by the mob, evidently with the intention of murdering him. Sheriff Harstone happened to be on the ground, and but for his energetic blood would have been spilled. The negroes had concocted this thing an hour before the speaking.

The House Thieves at Work Again.

Yesterday morning, about a quarter past 4 o'clock, an attempt was made to rob the residence of Mr. P. Newman, corner of Fifth and Princess streets, which was in a measure successful. The thief entered the front gate and went to the wash-house, where he procured a horse bucket, a rake, and a piece of iron about eight inches in length, when he went to one of the side windows and prepared to commence operations. It seems, however, that the bucket which he got to stand upon was not of sufficient height, and he discarded it for a shoe box. Standing upon the box he reached the window, when he inserted the piece of iron through a crack and managed to displace the hook from the staple by which the blinds were secured. The sash being already up, his next move was to thrust the rake into the room, which was occupied by Mr. Martin Newman, who was on the bed asleep, and draw out a pair of pants. He then attempted to get possession of the coat of the sleeper in the same way, but fortunately, at this juncture Mr. Newman awoke. The moon was shining bright at the time, and his attention was immediately attracted to the bright light streaming through the window, which when he retired had been shut out by the blinds, and turning his head in that direction he discovered the intruder. He instantly hailed the fellow, who dropped the rake, jumped from the box and fled. Mr. Newman rushed out on the front piazza, from one end of which he was just in time to discharge his pistol at the thief as he jumped the fence, though without the desired result. He carried off the pants, in the pockets of which were a number of keys, a knife and other articles. The inside lining of the waistband of the pants is marked with the name of Mr. Newman, which may lead to the detection of the thief.

A Mysterious Stranger.

Yesterday morning we published an item from the Norfolk Landmark in relation to a young man, said to hail from that place, who gave his name as Clyde, and who was represented to be in the hospital at this place. We have since inquired into the matter and find that the young man referred to arrived here a week ago, having, as he said, walked all the way from Charleston. The name of Clyde is a fictitious one, as appears from a letter from his mother found on his person. The young man is now ill almost unto death, there being but slight hopes of his recovery, and has thus far failed to disclose his true name. The letter from his mother is couched in the most affectionate terms, filled with motherly advice and counsel, and displays an anxiety to know why he should have changed his name, but at the same time appears to be cautious not to reveal it, as if fearing the letter might fall into other hands. A sister Emma is referred to several times. The address at the top of the letter has been cut out, though enough remains to lead to the belief that it was written at Petersburg. The initials signed to the letter are "C. H. C. H.," and on a portion of a blank page is written, apparently in the hand of the young man himself, the words, "O God, how long?" with the initials "W. B. H." appended. The letter is dated July 31st, 1876.

There is a mystery surrounding the stranger, who appears to be only about 23 years of age, and at present there seems to be no clue to its solution, as there is nothing about his person to lead to his identity.

Mysterious Disappearance.

On the 23th of August last a well dressed man, giving his name as R. Mills, and who was understood to hold a position on some one of the vessels in port at the time, appeared at the boarding house of Mrs. Warren, on Second, between Market and Dock streets, and engaged board. He remained there until the 2d day of September, the most of the time being under the influence of ardent spirits, and appearing to have plenty of money, which was mainly in gold. He took dinner at his boarding house that day, after which he departed, in company with a stranger, and has not since been seen or heard of. From the fact that he left his trunk and other articles at his boarding house, there is some apprehension that he may have been foolishly dealt with.

Mayor's Court.

The only case before the Mayor's Court yesterday morning was that of Andrew Fennel, colored, charged with the larceny of a well bucket. The evidence was heard, but the Court reserved its decision. It will probably be considered a mitigating circumstance that defendant did not take the well. A decision will probably be rendered this morning.
