From the Federal Capital. [Richmond Whig Special.] WASHINGTON, Feb. 24-1 A. M. The House of Representatives took a recess yesterday afternoon, and a Democratic caucus was immediately Democratic caucus was immediately held, which lasted two hours. The discussion took a wide range, and was of an animated character, but was marked by good feeling. Measrs. Hill, of Georgia; House, of Tennessee; Witzhire, of Arkansas; and John Young Brown, of Kentucky, favored acquiescence in the decision of the Commission, and Measrs. Field, of New York; McMahon, of Ohio; and Sparks, of Illinoie, advocated reand Sparks, of Illinois, advocated resistance. A resolution was offered and passed by about twenty majority for the House to take a recess today until Monday next. A motion to amend this and providing for going on to-day, was voted down by a large majority.

It is beyond question that the feel-ing for resistance is hourly growing stronger. The advices by telegraph and letter to the members from the people generally indicate a very strong feeling and demand that the fraud of putting in Hayes be resisted by all available methods. Nothing was said in the caucus about the Army Appropriation bill. The proposed bill to provide for a new election in November next and directing that the President of the Senate shall in the meantime exercise the functions of the Executive office was discussed, but without eliciting a vote upon it. Mr. Field has drawn the bill, and it will very likely be reported. The argument for it is very strong, indeed, as it is conceded that Congress ought to have legislated long ago to meet such an emergency as the failure to complete the count of the electoral vote.

The Republicans are beginning now to anticipate a failure to complete the count by the 4th of March. They say that if this occurs the Senate will proceed to declare Hayes elected and that Grant will inaugu- Grievances. rate him. On the other hand there are reports in circulation of a breach between Hayes and Grant, and even of a breach in the Senate among the Republicans, which may lead to serious consequences. These reports and a prospect of a struggle in the House to defeat the inauguration of the usurper have excited the city to the highest point. No other subject is spoken of.

In this connection at is fit that the statement, by whomsover made, of any pretended bargain or contract being made between Hayes and his friends with the Southern representatives in Congress, are infamous fabrications and slanders upon these representatives. sentatives. If such arrangement were possible, confidence in Radical professions would be an important element in making them.

[Special to Norfolk Landmark.] WASHINGTON, Feb. 23. A Democratic caucus is now in session. Speaker Randall is making a strong effort to shape his extreme policy to his liking. He says, with his forty members to back him, that he can control the movements of the House and keep the count going until after the ides of March.

[Special to Index Appeal.] WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.

The Democratic caucus to-night stood 60 to 40 that the House should ascertain and maintain their rights. Messrs. Hill, Lamar, Reagan and House, of Tennessee, made speeches sustaining the minority.

Prominent men from many Northern States are here demanding that their representatives stand firm and of the votes of last November.

Trouble. An old colored man, hailing from Fayetteville, who gives his name as James Strawder, says he bought some shoes and several other articles yesterday morning, soon after which he was approached by the notorious colored individual known as "Lemonade Jim" Clarke, who managed to impose upon the old man to such an extent as to get him to surrender the articles into his (L. J.'s) hands to be taken care of until he (Strawder) got ready to leave on the Fayetteville boat. Shortly before the time for the boat to leave, Strawder hunted up his banker and demanded his goods, when Jim had the cool impudence and audacity so characteristic of the individual to pretend that he knew nothing about them and to deny that they had ever been placed in his hands, hoping thus to "bluff off" the old man until the boat was ready to start, when he would be compelled to leave without them. Strawder, however, had the good sense to secure the assistance of a policeman, who arrested the swindling lemonade vender and lodged him in the guard house. Strawder (who had in the meantime missed the boat) being recognized to appear against him before the Mayor's Court tomorrow morning. The articles taken have
