What the Herald Correspondent Says. WASHINGTON, Feb. 24.

There were butter words in the cancus on Friday night than were known outside. Mr. Ben Hill and Mr. Dudley Field had a discussion, in which Mr. Hill showed up first the uselessness for good, then the unconshowed himself more able, and Mr. Field's objects were uncovered by a series of interrogations in a manner which made them plain to the members of the caucus and left them to choose their course to-day at least with their eves open.

Mr. Field had proposed a bill which to elect a President and provided for a new election. Mr. Hill showed the caucus that whether there had been a failure to elect could not be known until the count was completed; that if there was a failure to elect, Mr. Field's bill violated the Constitution, because that provided, in such a case, for an election by the House, and that the count was delayed on purpose to make the election a failure. Then the Constitution gave the office to the President of the Senate, and the Democratic party would them-selves be chargeable before the country with having made some Republican-probably Senator Morton-President for some years. All this showed up to the caucus the crude and hasty notions of Mr. Field.

Mr. Dudley Field, this afternoon, gave positive assurance that he is not inclined to fillibuster or delay the count. He intends, he says, to raise objections in Rhode Island, South Carolina, Vermont and Wisconsin, but he assured your correspondent that he was desirous only to get the whole case on record; that he did not wish to delay the count or carry it over to the 4th of March; that he thought, even with all the objections he meant to raise, the count would be completed on Wednesday morning, and that if he saw that there was danger of its going over, or being too long delayed, he intended to omit the objections and see that it went through. According to this the real fillibusters can bardly count on Mr. Field to help them beyond a certain extent.

From Grant's Last Sunday Talk.

In response to a question as to what he would do should no declara-tion be made of a President, he replied that that rested entirely with Congress, but he thought that such declaration would be reached, as those who yesterday sought unnecessarily to postpone the count met with a very decisive rebuke in the House. It would be quite proper, however, for Congress to pass a law amenda-tory of the act of 1792, designating what person-the presiding officer of the Senate, for instance-shall act as President until a new election be ordered, in case there should, owing to factious opposition, be no declaration of President and Vice President based on the electoral count.

Mr. Gobright said: It has been asserted, Mr. President, that an arrangement was in progress by which, in the possible contingency above named, you would resign your of-fice, thus permitting the presiding of-ficer of the Senate to fill the vacancy thus occasioned.

The President replied, with a smile:

So I hear; but the only knowledge I have of such an arrangement is from think it would be improper for me to against changing the county line. Cafix a Southern policy for my successor, and thus embarrass him. If I were to recognize the Republican Governors they would have to be sustained by military force, and I think the entire people are tired of the miltary being employed to sustain a State government. If a Republican government cannot sustain itself, then it will have to give way, and if a remedy is required, let Congress, and not the President, provide it.

The Southern Hayes Movement. The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Republican (Democratic), on Friday telegraphed to his paper as follows:

"Evidences have accumulated tonight that the movement to draw the Southern Democrats over to the Republican party will now be pressed with the utmost possible vigor. It comes from a trustworthy Republican source that it is definitely settled that a prominent feature in the new policy of that party will be this effort to conciliate the South. On the other hand, it is easy to see that there are many Southern Democrats more than ready to meet this movement hal way. It is not yet time to mention names, but it may be said that a goodnumber of prominent Southern members are marked men already. while not a few of them have come boldly out of cover. The movement will not take shape, of course, until after Hayes is seated, but after that it will not be long in being brought forward in full form."

Hunting the Coon. Seven valiant Nimrods crossed the raging Cape Fear yesterday morning to hunt the festive coon in the forests and jungles not open yesterday, to the disappointment of old Brunswick. They were armed and equipped according to their various inclinations, and without reference to uniformi ty in the selection of the pieces to be used in the ruthless war of extermination upon which they were embarked, while some of them wore "store clothes," as if totally unconscious of the fact that they would be called upon to wade up to their necks (or thereabouts) in mud in their wild hunt for "that same old coon." They were accompanied by a number of dogs, of sundry and various qualities and breeds, and Water street was made lively by their noisy demonstrations in honor of the eventful hunt in which they were about to play a conspicuous part. The success met with by our gallant Nimrods may, perhaps, be detailed in a succeeding "chapter."

Fire at Shallotte. By a letter from a correspondent at Shallotte, Brunswick county, we learn that fire occurred on the plantation of Mr. R. D. Hewett, at that place, on the 10th inst., destroying his barn, containing about three thousand pounds of fodder, meal, farming implements, harness, &c., the two stables adjoining, with two mules therein, &c., en-- Maj. J. A. Engelhard, our Sec- tailing a loss upon Mr. Hewett of about $500, upon which there was no insurance. Speaking of the origin of the fire, our correspondent says that a little son of Mr. H., about six years of age, struck a match and touched it to some new straw in the lot to see how it would burn, the flames from which soan spread to the barn and stables. At the time the only other persons on the premises were Mrs. Hewett and a colored girl, who, when they discovered the fire, tried to save something from the burning buildings, but their efforts were crowned with but trifling success. Much sympathy is felt for Mr. H. in the severe loss he has experienced.

Destitution in the Community.

We alluded some weeks since to the fact that there was a family on Queen, between Fifth and Sixth streets, in very destitute circumstances, being composed of a man, his wife and five small children, the former being paralysed and consequently unable to work and his wife being in very delicate health. We are now advised that for about two or three weeks after our article on the subject appeared they were furnished with a sufficiency of the necessaries of life, but then the benefactions which were so absolutely essential suddenly ceased, and they are now in a worse condition than before, the wife being confined to her bed. It is hoped that the benevolent instincts of the well-to-do in the community may be again called into requisition and the helpless family kept above the reach of actual want. If there ever was a time when the hearts and purse strings of the prosperous and wealthy should be open to the cause of humanity in distress, it is just now, when there are so many who are really able to work that cannot find it to do.
