

This information created great indignation among the Democrats of this city, who were not only astounded but thoroughly disgusted at this new stroke of "policy" on the part of some of our friends at Raleigh. A number of telegrams, potesting against the movement, were sent to Raleigh by prominent Democrats, and we trust they will produce the desired effect.

The Democrats of New Hanover county have learned in the school of experience the evil of a negro magistracy, and they protest against having it again inflicted upon them, whether by friend or foe.

Let the Legislature appoint the Magistrates whose names have been suggested by the Democrats of New Hanover county. We don't want Bill Moore (whose name, we hear, in on the list of ten Republicans) or any of the balance of Mr. Wilson's nominations.

Interesting from Washington. [Special to Richmond Whig.] WASHINGTON, March 6-1 A. M.

President Hayes' inaugural ad dress is unsatisfactory to extreme Radicals. By Democrats it is regarded as a document the key to which can only be found in his official acts. Like a suit of ready-made clothes, it will fit anybody. The best sign about Hayes' course is the dissatisfaction of the extreme Republicans. They don't like his Cabinet, nor do they like the proposed policy in respect to the States of South Carolina and Louissana. Mr. Conkling is particularly displeased. After making a special effort to have his friend, Mr. Piatt, of New York, appointed Postmaster General, he was finally refused on Friday, and Carl Schurz, who is his pet aversion, goes into the Interior Department, while his rival, Evarts, of New York, goes into the State Department. Republicans say Conkling's defeat is a complete humiliation. Mr. Morton tried to have Typer kept in as Postmaster General and failed. He is said to be much displeased, but he is not likely to make an issue with Hayes. Blaine is also sulking and wrothy, if report be true. The great cause of division, however, is the general policy of the administration and the refusal of the President to submit to clique influences, heretofore potential. The cast of the Cabinet, as generally accepted yesterday, is Evarts for the State Department, Sherman Secretary of the Treasury, McElroy, of Iowa, Attor-

The election is now only two weeks off, and we urge upon our friends, the Registrars, the importance of immediate action in the matter. If arrangements have not been made to commence the work of registration today, by all manner of means let the books be opened for this purpose to-morrow morning. Time is precious.

And now let all our friends go forward and register without delay., The time is short and it will not do for too many to postpone the matter until the last moment, as the rush will be too great.

Drawing a Deadly Weapon.

A young white man by the name of Gaston Lewis, a resident of Pender county, was arrested by Officer Lewis Gordon, of the police force, yesterday afternoon, on the charge of drawing a deadly weapon upon Wm. Marsteller, colored, and attempting to shoot him. It is alleged that Mr. Lewis went to the eating saloon kept by Marsteller at the foot of the Market, and that some difficulty arose between the two in reference to a "lunch" which had been ordered by Mr. Lewis, when the latter started to draw his pistol, Marsteller seizing a carving knife to defend himself, at which opportune moment Officer Gordon stepped between the two, disarmed them, and took Mr. L. to the City Hall, where he gave bond for his appearance before Acting Mayor Gardner this morning at 9 o'clock. It is claimed that Marstellar showed no disposition to use the knife except for the purpose of self-defence.

Match Game of Base Balt.

At Smithville, on Saturday last, a match game of base ball for the championship was played by two clubs known as the "Rangers," composed of citizens, and the "Meteors," composed of soldiers, which resultted in a triumph for the "Rangers." Five innings were played, the "Rangers" scoring 86 and the "Meteors" 26. A large number of ladies and gentlemen were present and watched the game with interest.

It was no doubt better to have these scenes | Fanning's Narrative (original copy), ia hanished in oblivion and for each succeeding historian to fill up his chapter with his to him by Governor Swain, with several own fancies, than to be able to give the de- letters from Governor Swain. He also retail of long days and months of suffering, pestilence, captivity and famine. It was not until about the beginning of the sixteenth century that England became one of the great maritime powers of Europe. Still Henry VII sent Cabot on a voyage of discovery as early as 1497, in which he discovered the continent, thus anticipating Columbus, who did not discover it until the succeeding year. No attempts to colonize it were made until a century later. In 1578 Sir Humphrey Gilbert obtained a charter from the Crown and with his step-brother, Sir Walter Raleigh, made several ineffectual attempts to colonize the newly discovered land. In the fast expedition, in 1588, he perished at sea. In 1484 Raleigh fitted out an expedition, under Amandia and Barlow. They entered an inlet not without difficulty, and anchored on the left hand side. This, Mr. K. Ithinks, was Hatteras Inlet, though the question is much disputed. He says: "After a careful examination of the early and of the later authorities, and with some practical acquaintance with the locality, I am of opinion that they must have entered what is now known as Hatteras Inlet." The island, 20 miles long and not over six broad, was that part of the banks or shore between this inlet and that known as Ocrocoke. They found the land sandy and low, were amazed at the abundance of grapes, as well as the pines and cedars, but saw no inhabitants. Here follows a long account taken from Hakulyt's great history of the voyages and discoveries of the English nation, published in 1600. These narratives gave glowing accounts of the natives and their ability to construct their houses, canoes and "wiers" for fish. As this was their first intercourse with Eqropeans, it undoubtedly shows what their true condition was and had been for ages.
