vesting melons is cheap and cleanly, while upreoting beets is laborious, and the coarse, adhering dirt is removed by hand, while the crown is cut away as unprofitable for sugar. Beets also need much weeding. "A melon field needs only one-fourth the plowing. Beets can only be de; livered in the root, because the juice turns quickly black and the sugar starch, while melon juice is not affect-ed for several days. Beets are washed and rasped or sliced, while melons, by one cut, deliver their juice over a seed strainer into the vats direct. The melon being free from impurities, meion being free from impurities, which make costly chemistry in beet sugar, is much less expansive. "Beet syrup is only fit for distilla-tion. The syrup from melons is deli-cious. The seeds make the finest table oil, and the refuse is good for cattle. Taking account of so many advantages sugar from the melons advantages, sugar. from the melons, though rated at 7 per cent. of the weight of the fruit, instead of 8 al-lowed for beets, costs less to make. The difference may be set down as 5¹/₂ cents for melon sugar to 7 cents a pound for beet sugar. In regard to quality melon sugar is superior. Un-less extra care be used beet sugar is apt to have an unpleasant buggy flavor."

"In Italy, and some parts of Germany and France, the business of making sugar from watermelons, and oil from the seeds, has been profitably done for some years, and it is reported to be two per cent. more profitable than be two per cent. more promable than beet sugar; and the oilcake made from the seeds—after they are ground and the oil pressed out—is said to be nearly as good feed for stock as flax or cotton seed oil, particularly for young stock.

"Many portions of the land, in all the Southern States, are eminently adapted to the raising of watermelons; and they can be made to add very considerably to the profits of farming, especially on the light sandy lands."

Farming for North Carolina.

Mr. T. S. W., of Anson Co., N. C., writing about his subscription to the Farmer, adds:

"We have been raising Cotton, for the last ten years, to the exclusion of nearly every thing else; the result is, we are growing poorer every year; and, of necessity, we must diversify our productions; so, I may find the articles in your Magazine will aid us and give us the desired information, in our new calling or rather our new in our new calling, or rather our new departure. Now, I think our planters see the necessity of a change, and shall probably induce numbers of them to subscribe for your Farmer." It is our opinion that our Carolina neighbors, in Anson and other counties, will advance their best interests, by engaging more extensively in grain, fruit and sheep raising, with other stock, growing plenty of roots, millet and clover, for feeding the latter, as well as to fertilize their soils. They will certainly need to plow a few inches deeper than customary, go over with heavy roller to crush the lumps and clods, after harrowing well; sow buckwheat, or clover, or peas, to plow under for green manure; sow orchard grass, or herdsgrass and timothy, (plastering them all in spring and summer) to make turf, pasture and hay. Do all of this carefully and seasonably, not omitting a portion of land to cotton, where that is the natural staple and suc-
