Great Disappointment Among the Demoerats - Mayes' Backbone Bent Badly-The Southern Question. [Special to Richmond Dispatch.] Washington, March 21.

The position of Sherman, Thompson and McCrary towards the South ern question, as developed by the Cabinet meeting of yesterday, and the subsequent disposition of the President to yield to the scheme of a compromising commission, destroyed the confidence of Southern Democrats here in the firmness, and almost in the sincerity, of Hayes. Assurances amounting almost to a positive promise were given to representatives of Nicholls before the adjournment of the Senate, and they have since been encouraged to believe the troops would be withdrawn from the immediate apport of Packard. To resort to that indirect means of establishing a government in the disturbed States compared unfavorably with the manly course of meeting the difficulty parely by a direct recognition of or the other rival Governors, but the resentatives of Nicholls were willing to accept it as the best they were likely to get the adminis-

and said if the troops were removed from New Orleans they would not dare go back to Louisiana for fear of beir Curdered by the White League. No Republican would be safe, and hundreds of poor negroes would be butchered for opinion's sake. That ettled it.

The Cabinet unanimously resolved at its session this morning to send a commission to ascertain the actual condition of affairs, and to report is both lamentable and laughable to whether the poor negro would be safe in Louisiana under Democratic | men who were supposed to hold their rule, or to effect a compromise. After the secretaries retired the President sent for Representatives Gibson, Ellis and Levy, of Louisiana, and informed them of the decision of the Cabinet. Some of these made up. They told the President their people would be disappointed, and, on their behalf, protested against it. The President said it was

USELESS TO ARGUE THE MATTER, as the decision was irrevocable. He spoke with greater firmness than usual. Wheeler said the General in command will at once be instructed to preserve the status quo, and if Packard or anybody else (emphasizing these words) brings on a conflict the military (raising his arm and bringing it down sharply) will act with a stiff hand. Gibson, Ellis and Levy retired with the understanding that they would be allowed an audience to morrow to present a written

A lady on Campbell, between Third and Fourth streets, met with a narrow escape a few nights since. She was sitting in front of the fire place with her infant child in her arms, when her daughter came into the room and attempted to place a lighted kerosene lamp on the mantel-piece; but in doing so the sleeve of her dress got hitched under the bottom of the lamp and in taking her arm down hastily it was jerked from the mantel piece and fell upon the head of her mother, from whence it toppled into her when the clothing of the lady and her child was saturated with the oil from the lamp, the light by some means became smothered and suddenly went out. To this fortuitous circumstance, doubtless, the lady, as well as her infant, are indebted for their escape from horrible suffering and perhaps death. As it was, the hand of the mother was very badly burned by coming in contact with the flame before it was extinguished.

WASHINGTON, March 20. I had a long interview this morning with Colonel Mosby, and the result was that it almost changed one's idea of human nature, especially Virginia nature. To a man up the tree, and who had no axe to grind, it see the scramble after petty offices by heads high in the air. Col. Mosby told me that he had received many letters from the strongest Bourbon Democrats asking for place, and that they all endorsed his political course, and that those who wanted letters from prominent Democrats breathe the most fulsome adulation of the new regime that ever mortal read, and the writers eat their PECK OF DIRT AT ONE SITTING. Mosby must be by this time both a misanthrope and cynic, for he sees that such things as lofty honor, high pride and proud self-respect are in existence, and that, as Sir Horace Walpole would say, every man has his price-and in these times a very small price would buy the best of He also informed me that two members of Congress from our State had requested his influence for places
