From Washington. [Special to Richmond Dispatch.] WASHINGTON, March 24.

This morning Dr. A. S. McRae was introduced by Ellis, of Louisiana, and had a private chat with the President for ten minutes. They sat down and talked familiarly about the Richmond post-office and the President's Southern policy. The Doctor assured him that he could not appoint a more objectionable person than Miss Van | will be issued to morrow, declaring Lew to the postmastership of Rich- that the commission can effect no mond, because she had unnecessarily compromise with the government of and publicly insulted the people of Richmond. He told Mr. Hayes Virginia Democrats would of course have preferred a Democratic President, but they were pleased with the sentiments of his inaugural; that they had confidence in his good intentions, but were afraid he had some bad advisers. "What," said Mr. Hayes, coloring, "you don't mean around this table?" The Doctor replied that he did not specially refer to the Cabinet, but to some others who were in high favor.

Judge Mackey positively asserts that by April 10th Hampton's authority will be undisputed. Packard's case is more difficult, because of its peculiar relation to Hayes's title, but one of the counsel for Hayes before the Electoral Commission is said to be preparing an argument that under the Constitution of Louisiana there is no necessary connection between the return of votes for President and the election for State offi-

[Special to Norfolk Landmark.] Washington, March 24.

The Southern situation is practically unchanged. It is not probable that the Louisiana imbroglio will be settled before Congress meets. The scheme of Hampton and Chamberlain coming here receives nearly the universal endorsement of the friends of the latter, while the Democrats strongly condemn it. It is probable though that both Governors will be here by Tuesday next, and the question settled at once. There is a hitch in the Louisiana

Public Opinion-Both Democrats and Republicans Disgusted.

Washington, March 24. The public sentiment of the country has so generally condemned the Louisiana Commission that the President finds it no easy matter to complete it. The names of those only who accept are given out, while those of a dozen who have declined are kept as far as possible secret. It will probably not be appointed for several days and possibly may be abandoned. If the feeling of disgust which exists in Washington among Republicans as well as Democrats, correctly reflects the sentiment of the country, the Commission will not be organized at all or will be composed of men wholly unfit to discharge the inconsequential duties to be assigned them. Vice President Wheeler tele graphed to-night to the President that he could not go on the commission. The President replied that he could not well excuse him, and Wheeler answered that he would start for Washington at once. Thurlow Weed declined, but recommende Governor Bullock, of Massachusetts. President Woolsey, of Yale, has been tendered a place, as Morton Me-Michael, of Pennsylvania.

The Ring of the True Metal. A prominent Democratic member of Congress from Pennsylvania, writing to a friend in this city, says: "I fear our Southern friends have been too credulous, and are about to be shamefully deceived. Hayes has lost the opportunity of his life. A withdrawal of the troops in Louisiana was expected by everybody, and that would have given peace to the country. The Republicans are surprised at his course themselves. For my part, I will not vote a dollar to maintain the army while it is used to prop up Packard and Chamberlain."

What the Organ Thinks of the Situa-New York, March 25. The Times' Washington special says the members of the Cabinet deny that there are any differences between the President and any of his advisers with reference to the Southern troubles, and express the belief that in South Carolina, at least, the chances of amicably settling the controversy will be materially promoted by the centemplated visit of Mr. Chamberlain and Gov. of the Louisiana People. NEW ORLEANS, March 25. The popular excitement shows no signs of abatement, and the general determination to ignore the President's Commission, in any other character than gentlemen, may now be regarded as settled.

In addition to the indignation meeting held Friday, the Board of Brokers met at the Stock Exchange yesterday, at which strong resolutions in favor of the Nicholls government were adopted enthusiastically, the vote being forty-five in favor and five against. Resolutions of the same character as those adopted are being of Paul Clifford (he had been reading circulated among the merchants, which are almost universally signed. Every one of these sets of resolutions have been, or will be, telegraphed to came back home. He said he left the President.

A conviction prevails that any imposition upon the slate of the Packard government, either in its executive or legislative branch, will be fatal to the business interests of the community, and that any fate is better than that. Governor Nicholls, finding the large majority of voters of Louisiana so hostile to any compromise, and so apprehensive lest one shall be made. has written a proclamation, which Louisiana. He thanks the people for their support of his government. It is likely that the Nicholls Legislature will adjourn before the arrival of the Commission, so as to effectually check the operations of the proposed plan of adjustment as understood here. The indignation mass meeting has been postponed until the day of the Commission's arrival, in order, as it is said, to show them which is the real government of Louisiana. All the stores will be closed, business will be suspended, and the demonstration will be made memorable in the history of the State.

Côlumbia, March 25.

While there is no change in the situation to-night, the indications are that to-morrow matters will be clearly developed as to the course to be pursued by the Hampton government. The prediction is justified by the arrival here to-night of General M. C. Butler on a special train from Charlotte, where he missed connection on the regular train this morn

Gov. Hampton is steadfast in the determination to refuse to submit his case for arbitration to either Hayes or any commission to be appointed by him. He will respond to the letter of Hayes in one of the ways indicated in that document, as a matter | ganist. of personal courtesy, in the manner he deems proper, but under no circumstances will he do so officially. I am informed that Chamberlain goes to Washington to-night; it has been ascertained that he has ordered a carriage for twelve, midnight, but he may possibly change his mind before

GREENVILLE, March 24. A fire, which broke out at half-past one o'clock, on the corner of Main and Coffee streets, this morning, destroyed the establishments of Morgan, Davis & Co., J. B. The total loss is about $45,000, with $15,000 insurance in non-board companies, represented by C. L.

At 5 o'clock another fire was discovered in Mrs. Mauldin's residence, on Main street. The house was destroyed, and the adjoining buildings narrowly escaped. But for the almost entire absence of wind the fire would have been very disastrous.

The fire was the work of incendiaries, one of whom it is thought has been captured.

The Rifle Club.

At the meeting of the Rifle Club, held at the office of Mr. DuBrutz Cutlar, yesterday afternoon, it was definitely decided to reorganize the Club and to have a new Range on Eagle's Island, on the West side of the river, opposite the city. Woody, DuBrutz Cutlar, Junius Davis, L. S. F. Brown, W. H. Bernard.

The new Range will be much more convenient to our business men and others than the one formerly used, and it is likely that quite a large number of new recruits will be the consequence. From all the indications the present shooting season will be a very lively one.

A Mishap to Fox Hunters. A party of several gentlemen went fo hunting yesterday morning and had some very fine sport. Both gentlemen "took the ground" that they were not much hurt, but they were willing to confess that they were considerably jarred by their unexpected collision with "mother earth."
