CHESTER, S. C., May 15. Chester has elected General W. A. Walker State Senator by probably one thousand majority. The days of the thieves and the carpet-bagger, in this county, are numbered. Much praise is due Judge Mackey for his action in the canvass, and for the earnest efforts to promote good government.

> The Mexican Marauders. WASHINGTON, D. C., May 15.

Advices received here state that ex-President Lerdo disclaims all knowledge or participation in the filibustering expedition alleged to exist against Mexico, and the stories which have been manufactured here in that connection are now fully exploded. It can be authoritatively stated that the government contemplates a vigorous policy against these predatory expeditions, but has no intention to resort to this disreputable practice of filibustering along the Texan border, feeling fully competent to protect the frontier by means of legitimate military operations.

Unveiling Halleck's Statue. NEW YORK, May 15.

The ceremony of unveiling the statue of Fitz Green Halleck, in Central Park, took place this afternoon before a large assembly, including President Hayes and a number of invited guests. The ceremonies were begun with music, after which Wm. Cullen Bryant called the assembly to order and introduced President Haves, who, with his suite, had been escorted to Central Park by the Seventh Regiment National Guards, which body he had previously reviewed.

The President then unveiled the statue, and presented it, on behalf of the subscribers, to the city of New York. The unveiling of the statue was received with cheers. The presentation speech was responded to by Mayor Ely. A poem, written for the occasion by John J. Whittier, was then read by General James Grant Wilson. William Allen Butler delivered an address.

OUR WESTERN VISITORS.

They Arrive at the Depot and are Escorted to Their Quarters by the Several Committees, Headed by the Cornet Concert Club-The Ceremenies at the Opera House-Speeches of Hon. A. M. Waddell and Col. C. M. Holloway - Social Entertainment-A Trip on the River, &c.

Yesterday morning, at 81 o'clock, the Committee of Reception, headed by their Chairman, Mr. James A. Willard, took the train at the Front street depot and met the Western excursionists at Teachey's, about thirty-eight miles up the road, from whence they escorted them to this city, improving the opportunity during the trip down to get acquainted. The gentlemen composing the excursion party being very sociable and friendly, this was found not to be a difficult matter, and the committee and our Western friends soon found themselves chatting as socially and unrestrainedly as if the whole party had been born and bred "tarheels."

On arriving at the depot they were met by the members of the various trade organizations and other gentlemen, who, headed by the Cornet Concert Club, had marched up to receive them, when they were formed into line and escorted to the Purcell House. Here a recess of about a half an hour was taken, to allow our visitors to rest and refresh themselves after their long journey.

At 1 o'clock the excursionists, escorted by the Reception committee and the Cornet Concert Club, marched from the Purcell House down Front to Market, up Market to Third, up Third to Princess and up Princess to the Opera House, where, after all had been comfortably seated, Mr. Jas. A. Willard. Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, introduced Hon. A. M. Waddell, who delivered the following address of welcome:

GENTLEMEN: We welcome you most cordially to the hospitalities of our modest Atlantic port, and beg to assure you that your arrival among us is greeted with sincere pleasure, though with less display, perhaps, than your visit has been and will be characterized by in other and more populous cities. It is evident that the Missisother by the name of Cook who came to sippi Valley not only wants to be, and ought to be, but that it must be united to the South Atlantic Seaboard; and although it will probably have to be a polygamous connection, so to speak, as the representative of Wilmington on this occasion I can, without a breach of good morals, unselfishly say, "Barkis is willin"." It would indeed be very absurd to expect any one seaport to become the exclusive shipping point for the boundless products of that vast empire; and all that the merchants and business men here expect or desire is to enjoy in the course of time such a share of that immens

commerce as their energetic efforts and the advantages they may offer will justly entitle them to. Now as this is a sort of pre-nuptial conference which we are conducting, let me say to you confidentially on behalf of this particular candidate for the honors, that it would be a great mistake to judge either her character or capacity by her outward dress. She is not arrayed in the most fashionable or attractive garments, to be sure, but if you will permit me to use an expression more forcible than elegant, would observe that in respect to business enterprise she is, as you would say up your way, "a singed cat," or words to that effect. But, seriously, gentlemen, I do not know of any higher evidence of enterprise ever given by any small community than was exhibited more than forty years ago by this one. The population then was less than four thousand, and the town subscribed more than the assessed value of its entire real estate to build the railroad over which you came this morning, and which was at that time the longest railroad in the world. It also contributed heavily in its corporate capacity by a vote of the people to the two other roads terminating here. I trust and believe that its citizens have lost none of displaying it have been very much re-You come, gentlemen, not from the West, but from the centre and heart of our great, and now free and united country. You'live in what is rapidly becoming and soon will be the seat of empire on this continent and ultimately of the civilized world. You represent twenty-one of the forty-six millions of American citizens who dwell in the central basin of the continent, containing one-third of the acreage of the United States, watered by streams, two of which alone are navigable for 4,500 miles, embracing more than twenty-five degrees of latitude, with all the best varieties of climate, and with resources of every kind sufficient to feed, clothe and shelter a pop-ulation five times greater than our whole country contains. You have the energetic blood of all the conquring nations, Celt, Anglo-Saxon, Teutonic and Scandinavian mingled there; and your destiny as a people is assured. Even now your surplus products begin to afflict you, and you are anxiously seeking outlets for them. Cheap transportation by the shortest routes to the great highway of nations—the ocean—is the one absorbing question with you. You will get it ere long. You drove the entering wedge, when you sent the celebrated "Granger" case to the Supreme Court of the United States and got a decision declaring the right of a State to fix by statute what should be "reasonable rates" for transportation. Whether the recommendations of the Senate Committee on "Transportation Routes to the Seaboard," made three years ago, are carried out, or not; and whether under the power "to regulate commerce among the several States," Congress can do what the majority of the committee suggested or not, still the result sought for and the rates will be cheapened.

their former spirit, although their means of

This port, gentlemen, when two short gaps in our Western connections this side of Morristown, and forty miles of the Cumberland Gap Route are completed, will be nearer to Cincinnati by nine miles, nearer to Louisville by one hundred miles, and no further from St. Louis than Baltimore is. It is one hundred and fifty miles nearer to Memphis than Norfolk is, and somewhat nearer to Cincinnati than Charleston is. We are justified in anticipating a rea-sonable share of Western trade, and in believing that we can supply a large share of return freights in the sugar, coffee, molas-ses and fruits of our established West India trade and in our own naval stores.

Our harbor is being rapidly improved under government auspices and is now one of the best south of Norfolk. The statistics of the signal service and | ance.

the mortality lists establish the mildness | The Pilot Fund. and salubrity of our climate. We invite you, therefore, to examine into the claims of Wilmington upon your Western trade, but whether you do or not, gentlemen, they will certainly be forced upon your attention in due time. Our merchants have gone further than the Mississippi Valley to attract commerce, as the flags of our shipping attest. Those of the North of Europe are becoming very familiar to our eyes and are increasing in number every year. And now let me declare to you what you have doubtless heard already wherever you go among the Southern people. It is this; We thank God that the time has at last come when every American citizen can look his countrymen, wherever he may be, in the face and honestly rejoice at the restoration of genuine peace, the final re-establishment of the co-equality of the States, and the final destruction of sectionalism in our country. A new era is dawning upon all our industrial interests, an era in which they will be discussed and legislated for according to rational principles and not according to rational principles and not according to political or sectional prejudice. We want immigration of brains, capital and muscle. We want rest from political excitements, and we earnestly long for permanent peace and good government. Help us to secure these things, and we will all dwell together as citizens of a free country should. as citizens of a free country should. Again I welcome you on behalf of all our people.

At the conclusion of Col. Waddell's address, Col. C. M. Holloway, Chairman of the delegation, made a very happy and felicitous rejoinder in behalf of himself and companions, referring particularly to the cordial reception they had received at the hands of our people, whose acquaintance they were glad to make.

Upon the conclusion of Col. Holloway's remarks, the gentlemen were invited to partake of a collation, which had been prepared by direction of the Committee, by Mr. Wm. M. Collins, the well known caterer of the "Office Saloon," in his usual style. After full justice had been done to the edibles spread upon the tables, the popping of corks was heard, and soon champagne, claret, &c., were freely circulating throughout the crowd, loosening tongues, and making everything roseate and rendering everybody happy... Several impromptu toasts were proposed, among them : "Illinois-The granary State."

Illipois; and-"Kentucky and the blue grass region," Responded to by Mr. H. Justi, Jr., of

Louisville, Ky. Speeches were made by Messrs. S. M. Sullivan, of Davton, Ohio : Mr. Davis, of Mayesville, Ky.; Tom Ewing Miller, of Columbus, Ohio ; A. J. Fallis, of Cincinnati, James D. Parker, of Cincinnati, Mr. N. M. Johnson and N. Ellis, of Indiana, from among the visitors, and Messrs. William A. Wright, Sr., and Wm. Calder, of Wilmington, and Col. A. Pope, of the Atlantic Coast Line. Col. P.'s remarks were exceedingly good, and were received by his attentive listeners with frequent applause. Upon their conclusion three cheers were given the speaker and the Atlantic Coast Line. About this time in the afternoon the speakers of the party had become literally "too full for utterances," and in parties of two or three the visitors left the hall to ramble over the city, escorted by their newly-made acquaintances.

During the afternoon members of the delegation were handsomely entertained by the Cape Fear Club, and conducted about the city by members of the Committee.

At the invitation of Messrs. Lemmerman & Coney, a party of our visitors, accompanied by members of the Committee, took a trip on the river on their beautiful steamer, the Wm. Nyce, which was gayly dressed in flags for the occasion. The boat run down just below the traditional "dram tree," and, returning, run up as far as the railroad bridge at Hilton' and back, thus giving the excursionists a view of the entire water line of the city, with all its commercial, manufacturing and business facilities, &c. There was a fine breeze blowing at the time, and the party were charmed with

Our visitors expressed themselves as being more than satisfied with their reception and entertainment by our business community, and what they were enabled to see of our city during their necessarily short sojourn, Col. Holloway, of Cincinnati, remarking to a gentleman in our hearing, "We are more than delighted with our visit to your city; you have killed us with kindness-that is the amount of it." The Western delegation, meeting at the Purcell House before leaving, passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That our bottom rock thanks be and are hereby tendered, to the officers of the Wilmington & Weldon Railroad Company, and to the citizens of the city of Wilmington, for their generous, accustomed and unsurpassed hospitality to our delegation during transit to and stay in the city
