The second attempt was vesterday, when a miscreant, who resembled the would-be assassin of the first occasion, paid Stillson a domiciliary visit. and when the latter reached out his hand to receive a paper purporting to be of interest to him, the Mormon wretch pulled out a knife, and, with an oath, lunged at the newspaper scribe, who, however, escaped with a scratch The Mormon avenger escaped.

in his front yard, raised a stick and pointed it at him, when Ellerby, thinking it was a gun, made a halt. Officer Miller then took his prisoner in charge and marched him down to the county jail. When, therefore, Officer Carr reached the house of Lucy Nixon, Ellerby was already in the hands of the law ; but he proceeded to search the house and succeed ed in discovering a clock and dictionary, which were stolen some month since from St. James' Home; a pitch fork and pea digger, belonging to Mr. S. W. Nobles, the latter having the initials of his name upon the handle, and which were stolen the same night that his hen coop was robbed; two guns, which were no doubt the ones used in firing upon Mr. Oscar Grant some weeks since; a number of live chickens, and seven teen freshly severed chicken heads, no doubt belonging to those stolen from ex-Mayor Canaday. Everything about the premises was covered with feathers from chickens recently slaughtered, and there was every indication that this house had long been the headquarters of a band of thieves, of which Ellerby was probably the ringleader. Richard Nixon, the husband of the woman alluded to, was arrested, and a warrant was also served on Ellerby, the two being required to give a justified bond in the sum of $500 each for their appearance at the session of the Criminal Court commencing to-morrow, in default of which they were committed to jail, Ellerby being already held under the capias referred

Officer Carr subsequently visited the Niz on premises in company with Mr. Taylor of the National Cemetery, who recognized some of the chickens as among those stolen from him during the latter part of last week, and also identified a handsaw which was stolen from him at the same time, and which is the property of the government. In addition to the above, Offl-cer Carr discovered a pair of scales and weights, which were subsequently identified as among the articles stolen a few weeks since from Mr. McEarchin, when his store was broken open.

Ellerby has no doubt had a hand in the most of the robberies that have occurred in Wilmington for years past, and it is a matter for congratulation that he has at last been brought to an account.

Lucy Nixon was released on her own recognizance to appear as a State's witness.

tenses. A colored man by the name of Joseph Pickett bought a horse of Mr. C. B. Futch in March, 1875, for which he was to pay $80. He paid $30 in cash, and gave Mr Futch a mortgage on the horse and a mule for the remaining $50, Pickett stating positively that there was no sort of incum brance upon the mule, for which he said he paid $150. In the meantime the horse died, and recently Mr. Futch called for a settlement, when one Peter Pickett set up a claim to one half of the mule in question. saying that he had paid one half of the purchase money. The matter came up for a hearing before Justice Gardner, yesterday, when the claim of Peter Pickett was sustained, and Joe Pickett was ordered to give bond in the sum of $200 for his apbearance at the Criminal Court, to answer to the charge of obtaining money under alse pretenses.

Died in Savannah.

Mr. John Gammell, a former resident of Wilmington, died in Savannah a few days since. The Morning News has the following n reference to the funeral:

"The funeral of this highly esteemed and greatly lamented citizen took place yesterday afternoon at four o'clock from St. John's Episcopal Church, and was very largely attended. The beautiful and impressive services of the Episcopal Church were performed by Rev. Samuel Benedict, assisted by Rev. Mr. H. Dunlop. The singing was deeply impressive and the occasion one of unusual solemnity. The floral tributes laid upon the casket containing the mortal remains of one who had departed from a sphere which he adorned and valued in every respect, and of which he was an honored and useful member, were numerous and beautiful.

The cortege was one of the largest ever witnessed at the obsequies of a private citizen, and evinced the universal regret which was felt in the community at the loss of a valued member."
