pledges. He is well pleased with the | SHE'S SMARTER THAN HAVES. | OUR STATE CONTEMPORARIES. treatment his State has received at the hands of President Hayes, and he has the frankness and boldness to say so plainly and unreservedly. This brings him under suspicion, and men who are not fit to dust his pants or sit in his presence set up the cry, "Hampton is going over to the enemy, he is praising Haves, he will become a Radical."

We despise such meanness. All that the greatest living South Carolifian has done is not enough to shield him from the tongue of the slanderer. But the people and papers of South Carolina do not distrust their great leader. They know the man-that he is true to God and to his own conscience, and he must therefore, be true to South Carolina,

The Mexican newspapers are very indignant over General Ord's instructions. President, so-called, Diaz has ordered General Trevino to resist with force any attempts to invade Mexican territory. Some of the papers pretend that they see war in all this, and, if we may trust their statements, the United States will have their hands full in squelching the adversary. Of course this is absurd. We venture to say, in the first place, there will be no war; and, in the second place, if there should be a war, that it will be short, sharp, and decisive. We of the South want no war. We have had enough for one generation at least. We desire peace that there may be plenty. Diaz is in no condition for a war. He can hardly keep his own place which he usurped.

President Haves says that the re cent order is not intended to prevent or discourage officials from taking part in political affairs-then what? Why this-that they must not neglect their duties to serve their party, nor will they be allowed to control caucuses and conventions by any power or influence they may possess as officers. We do not know how quite evident from their conversation

An Ex-Confederate's Idea of the Pre

[New York special to Boston Herald.] A man now resident of this city, who served as an officer in the Confederate service, and whose brother toro Southerner. occupies the highest position in one of the Southern States, happened to be a passenger in the steamer Providence last night, which brought Mr. and Mrs. Hayes, from Fall River. His impressions regarding the President and lady, in his own words, are as follows: "After the boat started, Mr. Hayes came and stood in the cabin door as if he expected to be recognized and shaken hands with. He seems to be pretty thoroughly broken into this business of hand-shaking. Nobody at first came near him, so I thought I'd break the ice; I did so; introduced myself; told him I was a Southerner, and found him very affable and good natured. Hayes is a good, well-meaning man. His nose 1sn't quite so well-proportioned as it ought to be, and there's a reddish hue at the think, or maybe its sunburn. When the passengers found that the President was conversible they all crowded about him. His hands were full enough then. I found Mrs. Hayes quite alone on the promenade deck, so I introduced myself to her. She is a superior woman. She's smarter than Hayes. Where Mrs. Hayes is known, I'll wager she carries a strong influence for good. She's a more refined woman than I had expected to find, and a handsome woman, too.

She doesn't look so old as the picture makes her out; her hair is black as jet, and teeth white and regular. While 1 was conversing with her Mr. Hayes came along, remarking, 'Well, I thought I had lost my wife.' Mrs. Hayes talked to all, and she had her burden to carry, too, when she was discovered. There's no airs about her; she's gifted with good, sound, straightforward common sense. I call her the best man of the two. It's my impression that Mrs. Hayes has had and is going to have a powerful influence in this administration. She's got character, lots of it, and it's bound to be felt. 1 found her up this morning on the boat, bright and early, also alone. It was a pleasure to me to be of some little service to her in pointing out the localities on the Sound and East River as we came along, of which she was entirely ignorant. The young Hayeses were on board, and it was

It is one of the best educational signs of the times that there is everywhere a disposition to reach the helping hand down to the humblest in the land, in order that all upon whom the responsibilities of citizen-ship shall devolve in the future may be enbled to understand those duties and exercise them intelligently .- New North State.

The value of Wade Hampton to the whole South can never be over-estimated. He is regarded by Northern Democrats as a representative man, and the power of his speeches and the validity of his cause in the last campaign, together with his manly course since the election, have stamped him as a man of wisdom. His people have been blessed, and he, by their aid, has shown to the world a victory worthy of the thought that "truth crushed to earth will rise again." -Rocky Mount Mail.

If the electoral tribunal was" constitutional and appropriate;" or if, as Senator Bayard says, there was "no juster or fairer plan of dealing with a difficult and important pubend. But the hue is constitutional, I | lic question"-then the New York Sun and all its satellites are wrong, and our Senators and representatives, our Ransom, Merrimon, Davis, Scales, Robbins, Vance, Ashe, Waddell and Yeates, are not guilty parties, whom the people should pun-ish for their "offence" in supporting the "constitutional and appropriate" electoral commission. The Sun is at least consistent in its Bourbonism .- Raleigh News.

POLITICAL POINTS.

- The Rev. Dr. Cuyler, of Brookyn, expresses it as his belief that Dr. Hayes was cut out of the same piece of timber which furnished Abraham Lincoln. If this is indeed the fact, there was precious little of the timber left after Lincoln was finished. - Utica Observer, Dem.

- Mr. Chamberlain's address was made up of a series of assaults upon the Administration so virulent and unjust that they belong to the class of oratory produced in the midst of an exciting political campaign by speakers who appeal to the passions rather than the reason or the patriot-ism of their hearers."—Philadelphia Press, Rep.

-- "These speeches were appropriate neither to the special occasion of opening a public park, nor to the proper attitude of the patriotic mind on Independence Day. And neither Gov. Chamberlain nor Mr. Blaine made amends for the untimeliness of their orations by any special show of ability in their treatment of the subjects selected for discussion."-N. Y. Times, Rep.

of the Pope Untrue, &c., &c. LONDON, July 9. The Simnitza correspondent of the Daily News understands that the Czar has resolved finally to cross the Danube and see as much of the war as possible. The Czarwitch will be appointed to the chief command of the army designed for the siege of Rustchuk.

A Daily News dispatch, dated Erzeroum, Sunday, says the Russians are advancing into the Olti valley. It is feared this move ment is in consequence of their withdrawal from other points. The Turks are moving troops to resist them. The News' Vienna dispatch states that wenty thousand newly arrived Russian troops are now on the march from Jassy to Galatz. The Times' correspondent at Bucharest says the Russians assert that the affair at Biela was simply a feint. This is probably true, but the feint became more serious than was intended. Probably the Russian force making the demonstration at Biela came upon the Turks in force sooner than expected, and suffered severely in consequence. Several hundred wounded have reached Bucharest from this engagement. Two Russian corps are moving into Roumania to form a reserve. Abdul Kerim is said to be fortifying the line from Shumla to Jambah, to defend Adrianople.

THE MODERN TRIO.

Jim Blaine, cousin Gail, who is a lively gal, and Chamberlain, who left South Carolina for the eternal good of that long-suffering and long-oppressed people, are now united in a general attack upon the President. Their organ appears to be the N. Y Sun, that has such a large circulation in the South. The attacks of Blaine and Chamberlain are fierce enough, but they are utterly and irredeemably selfish. Jim is shifting his cards for the Presidency, and Chamberlain is simply sore and disgruntled because he has been forced to pack his traps and leave the South. we trust forever. Blaine has always exhibited the deepest hostility to the South. Chamberlain has grown rich out of his share of the plunder, and now because the President would not violate the Constitution to keep him in the Gubernatorial chair by the aid of bayonets under the corporal of the guard, he turns upon him, and denounces him as a sort of Arnold or Iscariot-a traitor to principle and party.

It is well enough to bear in mind that according to the assailants of the President, he has violated the time-honored and long tried policy and principles of the Republican party in leaving South Carolina and Louisiana to enjoy their rights under the Federal Constitution. The South cannot certainly gain anything in the end by the triumph of such a policy and such principles as Blaise, Gail, and Chamberlain are the chosen champions of. Their restoration to vitality would be death to civil liberty and to the rights of States.

We are gratified that the zeal of Governor Hampton to please Northern Radicals will lead him into that party.-Houston (lexas) Age, Democrat.

When Charles James Fox, the incomparable debater, was asked the difference between orthodoxy and heterodoxy, he replied with great wit and wisdom-"Heterodoxy is your doxy, and orthodoxy is my doxy." Both in Church and State there is a vast deal of intolerance. Indeed, the American people are really more liberal and just in their religious than in their political views. Let a man dare think for himself on any meas-this will work. If Col. Ike Young, for instance, is allowed to take a part in political affairs, by reason of his sagacity, tact, and general "smartness" he will inevitably control a caucus or, it may be, a convention. Now how can the President discriminate between Col. Ike's mere personal influence, and that which inheres in his office? A dominant mind controls in any body it operates. The only way to prevent it, is to restrict officials to the mere act of voting.

President Hayes thinks the sures way to break down or obliterate the color line is for the Republicans who Dem. sustain him in the South not to run any opposition candidates, or to favor independents. Such is said to be the policy advocated in the approaching Virginia election, and such was clearly the policy adopted in the recent Charleston (S. C.) election. The Petersburg (Va.) Post, a Democratic paper, remarks:

"This is the line we have been trying to break up for these many years, and we do not think it ever will mark the politics of Virginia again, except, perhaps, for awhile longer in some few counties. The whites and the blacks will belong to any party they please, form their own opinions of public questions, and vote for candidates of their own choice without much regard to 'race, color, or previous condition." In nine case out of ten we are confident that the more intelligent and respectable portion of the colored people will vote with and be in political accord with the whites in the future, and that their divisions will be more about men than parties. We can hardly be mistaken in this view of the question.

While Blaine and Chamberlain wave the bloody shirt in the face of the people, and that, too, on the "glorious Fourth," the President shoulders the responsibility to withdraw every U.S. soldier from the South, and send them where they can earn their "bacon and greens."

Postmaster General Key has given much comfort to postmasters. They can accept their own resignations as members of political committees. What sort of reform is that ? Does that mean that they can name their successors on the committees, that their power may be still felt?

CURRENT COMMENT.

-- Mr. Haves puts on a smiling countenance and speaks of Blaine and Chamberlain in terms of almost affectionate regard. But let nobody be deceived. Underneath that ami able exterior burns the same spirit of hate and flushes the same desire for revenge that agitate every man when attacked by his enemies. If the Pres ident's feelings could be laid bare to human gaze, we venture to say that they would be seen to be deeply lacerated and scarified beyond the pos-sibility of healing up. The time will come when the meek Mr. Hayes will be forced to drop his mask and take up the sword .- Baltimore Gazette,

- Gov. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, is talking with more wisdom these days than we have been in the habit of expecting from him. Here is his prophecy; "It seems to me that the next Presidency is contingent on the behavior of the South to their blacks. At any rate, that behavior will determine whether the Southern question is to be again uppermost in our politics. If the blacks are treated with systematic unfairness, the next general election may hinge upon the indignation of the North with the late rebellious States." But the Governor thinks and says that the President has taken the correct course in dealing with the Southern problem, and he hopes the South will vindicate his confidence.-Boston Herald, Ind.

- A new departure was inevitable. It could not be postponed without private and general bankruptcy. A great man came in time as the instrument of reform. Providence sent us the warning and also the dehverer. God give him strength to persevere, and woe to those who attempt to chain his hands and to defeat his great mission. The clouds still hang heavily over our country, not only ours alone, but over all the interests of labor abroad. Yet I can see the silver lining growing broader and brighter. And to this end, apart from the saving and salutary actions of the new President, I greet the Permanent Exhibition. Vain are the theories of statesmen or presidents if the people are cold, luxurious and corrupt. Labor is the true physician, -Col. John W. Young on Hayes. Republican testimony.
