[New York Sun.] A remarkable book has appeared obhausen, entitled "Of the Rare Art of Prolonging Life till 115 Years by the Breath of Young Maidens upon One." The method recommended is based upon the inscription of a monu-ment said to have been discovered at Rome by a Bolognesse antiquary, Genmarus. The inscription runs, To Asculapius and Health, L. Clodius Hamiltonia and Hamiltonia a dius Hermippus, who lived 115 years and 5 days through the breath of young maidens, erect this monument." dermippus seems to have been a buted his unsual length of life to the breath of those with whom he was daily associated. And now his hypothesis is revived after the lapse of
