Betails of the Pittsburg Movement PITTSBURG, July 29. There are now about 3,000 troops here and in the vicinity. They are under command of Gov. Hartranft. and comprise Gen. Brinton's Philadelphia divisions, Gen. Gallagher's division, Gen. Harry White's division, and three batteries of United States regulars, besides two companies of regulars and another body of militia, most of which arrived Saturday. The most serious trouble on the way was encountered at Johnston, Pa. As the second section of the train passed the depot at that place it was attacked by a great mob, armed with stones and pieces of metal, which were thrown at the windows of the cars with telling effect. Volley after volley was poured into the train; crashing trains and injuring a number of soldiers. As the train moved on several different attacks were made, the last and most serious after the train had passed the depot some distance. At this point the patience of the commanding officer, Gen. Hamilton gave way, and reaching up he pulled the bell rope for the train to

The engineer and fireman were under a strong guard of soldiers, instructed to shoot them if they failed in their duty, and they at once reversed the engine. In all probability this saved the lives of half the persons on board the trains, as a switch had been misplaced and a car heavily laden with fire-brick placed on the switch for fast approaching trains to run into and be thrown over the embankment. When the train struck the switch its speed had been greatly stackened. The engine, tender and five cars--two baggage and three passenger--left the track and came in contact with the car of brick with such force that the rails and ties were torn up. The five cars were piled up in a mass of rains, the bottom of one car resting on the roof of another, and three were thrown completely around and lay crosswise on the track, with the car of brick, splintered and crushed, topping all. Col. John Hamilton, of the Fourth United States Artillery, was severely injured in the side, and several soldiers were badly bruised by the concussion. Col. Hamilton deployed his men at once, and before the crowd of strikers were aware of the movement the regulars had captured about fifty, and surrounding them kept the others at bay. In this position they awaited new transportation, and soon after started with their prisoners for this city, where the captured rioters have been placed in the arsenal to await the action of the United States go-

The defeat of Suleiman Pasha at Kara Bunar furnishes additional grounds for the belief that peace is not far off. The hopes based upon Sulieman Pasha's ability to cope with the Russian forces opposed to him are dashed by the unexpected reverse at Kara Bunar. Constantinople is represented as demoralized by the news. Throughout Europe an impression similar to that which prevails at Constantinople, that the Russians will avail themselves of the success of a forward movement on the line offering the greatest chances for other triumphs, and that the overwhelming forces threatening Plevner will overpower Osman Pasha's army, prepares the world for the near approach of peace. Our dispatches are devoted to speculations as to the shape the negotiations will assume, and the part the Powers will perform in conducting them.

WIII. A Rome letter to the London News, devoted to the attempt of the Countess Loreta Lambertini to break the will of Cardinal Antonelli, says of her plea: In effect she says: "I am the daughter of the Cardinal. do not know whether his eminence has had no other children. I do not know whether he has left a will. I only ask as his natural daughter the whole fortune he has bequeathed," (40,000,000 francs.) The brothers Antonelli, on the other hand, plead, "You are not the Cardinal's natural daughter." To this the Countess replies, "I am ready to prove that I am." This constitutes the first stage of the trial.

Burr's Oceanicon, or War on the

This really magnificent piece of art was exhibited at the Opera House, on Morday night, to an audience which at once bore direct and positive evidence of the thocord to art and skill when deserving of its approbation and applause. The assemblage was large and select, and the splendid success of the entertainment should, in some measure, be a gratifying reward to the artist for the many tedious hours he has, no doubt, toiled through the two long years occupied in the preparation of his beautiful "War on the Wave."

The panorama consists of fifty paintings, each 8x12 feet in size. This number is subdivided into three series, in the first of which is faithfully depicted the terrors and excitements of running the blockade, during the late civil war, between the ports of the Southern Confederacy and Nassau, or New Providence, one of the Bahama Islands, and Havana, Cuba, together with most life like representations of scenes in the two latter cities during the stirring times of war. All the most celebrated of the blockade running fleet that crowded at the Wilmington wharves stood out on the canvas as many of our citizens recollected them in

There were represented stirring scenes of the chase, capture or burning of well known blockade runners. "Throwing cotton overboard from blockade runners,' "Capt. Moffitt's successful run through the Federal fleet," "The steamer Hansa in a gale," and many others of this character, each new painting of these exciting episodes in the life of a blockade runner being greeted with renewed applause by the delighted audience. The depicting of sea and sky, and a storm on the briny deep, was terribly and splendidly grand. It was, perhaps, in the fresh and fervid representations of scenes in the tropics, their wild and peculiar vegetation and characteristic appearance, when the blending of colors was so magnificant, that the eye was most

The second and third series consisted of an allegorical representation of the introduction of yellow fever into Wilmington in 1862 by the blockade runner Kate, and the bombardment and fall of Fort Fisher. The allegorical painting did justice to Mr. Burr's appreciation of the true application of allegory, as well as his akill as an artist. The bombardment and fall of Fort Fisher, which was represented by some most skillfully executed paintings perfectly true to life recalled to the mind of many s battle scarred veteran the "time that tried men's souls." In a word we might go on with our rather imperfect sketch of the Oceanicon and not do full justice to it. It was all that was expected and considerably more, and Mr. Burr has every reason to feel proud of the accomplishments of so grand a piece of art.

Mr. W. L. Harlow was the lecturer and very creditably performed his part, adding considerably to the evening's entertainment by his clear and lucid explanations of the various paintings.

We learn that appropriate committees from St. John's Lodge, No. 1, F. & A. M., of this city, are making arrangements for an excursion down the river, thus not only affording a pleasant excursion and a delightful day to our citizens, but presenting at the same time an opportunity to the charitably inclined to contribute to such worthy objects as the Oxford Orphan Asy-

The Committee on Streets and Wharves made a report in reference to the extension of wharves by the Carolina Central Railway Company, and introduced Capt. I. B. Grainger, Receiver, and Capt. Johnson, Superintendent, of said road, who explained the manner in which they desired to make the extension, and the objects to be attained.

On motion of Alderman Vollers, a committee of three, consisting of Aldermen Flanner, Bowden and VonGlahn, was appointed by the Mayor to confer with the Commissioners of Navigation and property owners on either side in regard to the petition of the C. C. Railway, for extending 4.35 yesterday evening, Washington mean their wharf one hundred feet.

A petition from the Southern Express Company, for a reduction of tax, on motion, was laid on the table.

The committee on Streets and Wharves made a report on the petition of Willard Bros., for permission to construct a bridge across the dock, foot of Red Cross street, and recommended that the petition be not granted.

A petition for a lamp on the corner of to the committee on Lights.

A report of the Chief of Police, in regard to the bids for building four new carts and repairing six old ones, was read, and, on motion of Alderman Flanner, the Chief of Police was instructed to give the contract to the lowest bidder, P. H. Hayden, when in the opinion of the Mayor the carts and repairs were required.

On motion, a lamp was ordered to be placed at the corner of Fourth and Wooster streets, the residents in that vicinity agreeing to furnish the oil and the lighting of

Mr. Oldham reported the cart harness in bad order, &c., and, on motion of Alderman Myers, the Chief of Police was instructed, in connection with Mr. Oldham to make as much as they could out of the old harness, and purchase from the lowest bidder what was required to fill up the six Giles.

The Finance Committee recommended an amendment to the tax ordinance in regard to the tax on wholesale and retail dealers, which was adopted.

This recommendation was the same, in substance, as the motion of Alderman Bowden, referred to above.

On motion of Alderman Hill, the committee on Market and Fees were instructed to consult the City Attorney and prepare an ordinance in regard to forestalling the Body Recovered.

The body of Robert Horton, the youth who was drowned off the schooner Siam on Sunday afternoon last, was recovered yesterday afternaon. The schooner Nellie, from Baltimore, was coming up the river, and when at a point about five miles below the city, opposite the second jetties, the body was discovered floating in the river. Capt. Bronnock, of the Nellie, could not conveniently lower his own boat, but he called to a party in a boat that was passing in opaque glass bettles. Gourand's Olympian Cream, does not hide itself from examination. Its exceeding delicacy and beauty of appearance gives assurance of excellence in the performance. For sale by J. C. Munds. Capt. Bronnock, of the Nellie, could not in the vicinity and requested them to secure the body and make it fast to one of the jettles, which was done. On arriving at the wharf the circumstance was reported and Coroner Hewlett notified.

Revising the Tax Lists.

The Board of County Commissioners will et on Monday next, in accordance with law, to revise the tax lists. Section 18 of the Machinery Act, under which this revision takes place, provides as follows:

"If any person shall complain before the commissioners that his property, either real or personal, has been improperly valued, or that he is charged with an excessive tax, he shall present his claim in writing, and they shall hear any evidence adduced by him, and shall summon and examine any witnesses necessary for a just decision of the question. If they decide against the complainant they shall also give judgment against him for the cost of the investigation, but if the county commissioners shall find that he has cause for complaint, they shall direct their clerk to render a true account thereof, and the account thus rendered, certified by the clerk, shall be rendered to the Auditor, who shall credit the aheriff with the overcharge in his settlement for that year."

Meeting of the Commissioners of the
